New Orleans Woman Mother of 21

Mrs Jacob Caranek

NEW ORLEANS—Toiling through the drudgery of her work-a-day world in a little grocery store down in Port street, here is Mrs. Jacob Caranek, "champion mother."

Brushing aside her dark, wavy hair, which is beginning to silver around the temples, Mrs. Caranek in severe language, criticized the idea of birth control.

"Mothers," she said, her dark eyes flashing, "have a duty to perform in bringing children into the world. Motherhood is the mission of women and when my time comes to go to the great beyond I shall feel that I have accomplished the mission that was allotted me."

The "champion mother" has given birth to 21 children in as many years. She is 47 years old, weighs 175 pounds and is a picture of perfect health. Ten of her children are living.

"I never have time to worry about my aches and pains," asserts Mrs. Caranek. "God has been good to me, because I have striven to do his work in properly raising my children. I have very much to be proud of and I feel that my good health is due to the performance of God's services.

"These women who are advocating birth control know little of motherhood. Most of them fondle poodle dogs instead of children. They have a mania for publicity and are not content to sit in retirement and bear children, as was intended.

"There seems to be too much ultra-modernity among women nowadays. It is disgusting to hear childless social matrons tell us how we should raise our offspring. It seems that some women, in order to push themselves into the limelight, are willing to say almost anything that is crosswise with nature. God gave women the mother instinct, and women who bear children know better how to raise them than these childless women who specialize in writing books about how growing children should be brought up.

"I have had no trouble in raising my brood, and I'm proud of every one of them. Eleven are dead, but it is God's will that they were taken from me. And so I shall not complain about that."

The "champion mother" was born in the little village of Petravice, Czecho-Slovakia, and came to New Orleans when a mere girl. At the age of 16 she was married to Jacob Caranek, also a native of Czecho-Slovakia, and 11 years her senior.

"Jacob and myself," she relates, "have made our life a partnership. We both have worked with a mission—that of raising our children so that they wil be assets to humanity and become productive of something that will make the world beter than it would have been without them. Knowing that we have succeeded in doing that, even though deep sorrow has been ours at times, Jacob and I feel that nothing else matters."
