MRS. FAVERSHAM DIVORCED FROM THE MATINEE IDOL.

Justice Truax Signs a Decree Allowing Her Alimony at the Rate of $3,200 a Year.

MRS. WILLIAM FAVERSHAM.

On the recommendation of Referee William J. McKim, to whom was assigned the task of taking testimony in the more denied suit of Marian M. Faversham for an absolute divorce from William Faversham, the matinee idol, Justice Truax this afternoon signed a decree of divorce for Mrs. Faversham. She is allowed alimony at the rate of $3,200 a year.

The papers in the case are sealed and the name of the fair society belle who succumbed to the blandishments of the popular actor is kept secret.

From the outset the utmost secrecy has been maintained by all the parties in suit. Indeed, for weeks after Mrs. Faversham discovered her cause of action and shut the door of the Faversham mansion at No. 58 East Seventy-sixth street, against her recreant actor husband, and taking her two young children, vanished, every effort has been made to keep the affair secret.

Both Made Denials.

Both the husband and wife denied that there was any discord down to the moment when it was necessary for Mr. Hummel and ex-Judge Donohue, opposing counsel, to appear in open court in the motion for alimony and the appointment of a referee.

The hearings before the referee have been secret, and, while a few of the close friends of the warring couple have known the identity of her who introduced discord in their affairs, the public have been successfully barred from knowledge.

The correspondent is said to be a queen of the stage who has won social prestige and at whose shrine a great many men of the ⁂ have knelt, but who was oblivious to all until Faversham knelt.

Mrs. Faversham was a widow when the young English actor wooed and wed her nine years ago. She had adored him from the orchestra chair for long, while he was playing in "Feathers Brains" with Minnie Maddern Fiske. After that he joined Charles Frohman's forces, and rapidly rose in favor in "All the Comforts of Home," and made a hit as Prince Emil in "Aristocracy."

Owns Her Own House.

Mrs. Faversham owns the Seventy-sixth street mansion wherein they entertained so elegantly and enjoyed a reputation for exemplary harmony and sweet domesticity equal to that of the Kendals in London.

WIFEHOOD NO BAR TO SHORT SKIRTS.

COURT SO DECIDES IN SUIT BY A GIRL BRIDE.

Mother Held Clothes, Saying Her Daughter, Being Married, Could Not Use Them.

"Mother held the clothes, saying her daughter, being married, could not use them. Magistrate Flammer, presiding in the Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday, decided in favor of the mother in a suit for the possession of a dozen dresses, the property of her married daughter, Mrs. Mary Murray, who, accompanied by her husband, appeared in court to-day to get the dresses.

"These dresses are knee-dresses," said the mother. "My daughter is married now. She doesn't want them."

"Yes, I do," insisted the girl, "and they're not knee dresses. They are rainy day skirts."

"Well," said the Judge, Solomonlike, "the trouble seems to be that this young woman has got married. Now, there's no reason why she should not. This is the spring of the year and the time to get married."

Then he told the mother that she must give up her daughter's things.

FUNERAL OF W. H. FROST.

Services at All Souls' Church by the Rev. Thomas R. Slicer.

The funeral of William Henry Frost, forty years old, of the Tribune staff, who died suddenly of diabetes on Friday, took place at All Souls' Unitarian Church this morning. The services, without music and almost austere in their simplicity, were conducted by the Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, pastor of the church and a life-long friend of Mr. Frost.

Mr. Slicer spoke with much feeling of the virtues, the character and the mind of the dead man, who, Mr. Slicer said, amid the temptations of the great city of New York had preserved himself unpolluted.

There was a notable gathering of dramatic and musical critics, representatives of Mr. Frost's fellow-workers on all the New York newspapers, Maurice Grau and several people of the stage and not a few women.

Mr. Frost will be buried at the family home, in Providence, R. I.

SOUVENIRS FOR ALL!

Baumann & Co., of West 125th St., Will Give Dainty Gifts.

The thrifty housewife will be making a serious mistake if she fails to take advantage of the astounding bargains in home-furnishing offered by the big firm of Ludwig Baumann & Company, of No. 144-146 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, in honor of its eighth anniversary. The sale will end Saturday next. It began a week ago and has proved a most remarkable success.

The fact that the sale has attracted overwhelming crowds is not surprising to those who know great values when they see them. Nothing like the great bargains this firm is offering has yet been attempted. The firm planned a gigantic coup and it has won on every point, as may be attested by the throngs it is attracting.

Aside from the extraordinary list of tremendous price reductions offered it is well worth a long journey to look around in the firm's splendid store. There is not a furniture, carpet, upholstery and house-furnishing concern like it in New York. It is splendidly equipped and full of interesting features. The firm announce, by the way, as an extra attraction for the wind up of its great sale this week handsome souvenirs of various fancy designs made while you wait by Prof. G. H. Perrault, of World's Fair fame, who will at the same time show his remarkable skill in glass blowing. All are respectfully invited to bring the little folks to see Professor Perrault's wonderful skill. There will also be piano recitals every day.*
