BEN ALI, AT LAST FREE, SAYS EVIDENCE WAS MADE.

Innocent Man Convicted of Woman's Murder Released After Eleven Years.

AMEER BEN ALI.

Ameer Ben Ali, better known as "Frenchy," after spending eleven years in prison for the murder of a woman known as "Old Shakespeare," arrived in New York a free man at 6 o'clock this morning. He made the trip from Albany on the People's Line steamer Adirondack.

"Frenchy" looked the picture of perfect health, but his eyes blazed with an unnatural fire when he told of the wrong done him by the police in railroading him to prison for a crime he had never committed.

"I never saw," he said in perfect English—for he has learned the language while in prison—"or heard of the woman I am accused of killing. They arrested me and dragged me to Oak street station. There I was pointed out as the murderer. 'Look for bloodstains!' shouted Inspector Byrnes, and his police tore the clothes from me. They took off a clean shirt. When they brought it back it was spotted with blood.

Drew the Blood.

"They stuck pins into my socks. They wanted me to prick my finger for blood and then lick the spots. I refused to do anything that would be against my interests.

"I was a stranger. I did not know your language and I was helpless, but I have never ceased to wonder how such things could be in this land of the free.

"My lawyer said a new trial would free me, but it would cost $1,000 to secure it, and I had no way of getting the money. Gov. Flower came twice to see me and I thought he would pardon me. But nothing came of it. I was confident it would come, for I felt that some day or other the truth would prevail and that my innocence would be established.

"I am free now, but I have to begin life anew without a cent. My wife is in Algiers. I know nothing of my children. I am going to scrub my way to Algiers. I am a cook, in New York, not a waiter. My children wants me to go home. I will go."

May Be Sent to Algiers.

Upon his release he was taken in charge by his counsel, Lewis Rothchild, who took him to the French Hospital, at Ninth avenue and Thirty-fourth street. He will be examined here this morning and if he is found in good health he will be sent to Algiers, in charge of Inspector Lucas, of the Bureau of Immigration. The French Government will bear the expense of the trip.

Tomorrow will be the eleventh anniversary of the death of Catherine Brown, alias "Old Shakespeare," for whose murder "Frenchy" was sentenced to life imprisonment in July, 1891. Ten of the eleven years of his prison life have been spent in the asylums for the insane, inside of Matteawan and Dannemora.

"Frenchy" is always a well-behaved prisoner. He is said to be very quiet, so much so that he makes no trouble at his prison quarters. At Matteawan he was one of the most quiet prisoners in the institution. Now he wants his liberty. He says he will never rest until he has secured a pardon for his crime.

ASSAILS MERCHANT: TELLS ODD STORY.

WOMAN ATTACKS WEALTHY BROOKLYN MAN.

Says He Is Father of Child of Eighteen—She's Married Now.

William H. Fowler, a wealthy Brooklyn soap merchant, charged Mrs. Margaret Kane, of No. 142 Bedford avenue, Brooklyn, with causing trouble in his home in Myrtle Avenue Park.

Fowler said that last Tuesday evening Mrs. Kane called upon his wife and told her that her husband was the father of a child, and then Fowler said she went into his house in Myrtle Avenue Park.

Mrs. Neal, who was accompanied by her husband, said Margaret Kane said that her lawyer, who she was sixteen years old and didn't know he was a married man, sued for custody of the child she had not as a law. Now she wants him to contribute to the girl's support. The girl was the woman who married to Kane.

Magistrate Cramer scored the women for making public such affairs and injuring her daughter, and he limited the affair was a case of unfortunate parentage. He held the case over until to the Court of Special Sessions.

Mr. Fowler has a wife and several children.

PASSENGERS SHAKEN UP.

One Severely Injured in Crash on Penn Yan Division, N. Y. C.

PENN YAN, N. Y., April 23.—A passenger train on the Penn Yan Division of the New York Central Railroad ran into an open switch here last evening and collided with a switch engine.

The engine and several freight cars were wrecked, but the passenger train was little damaged. The passengers were, however, badly shaken up. W. H. Butler, of Cleveland, was badly injured about the head.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE.

Bankruptcy Reports Spread by Those Opposed to Organization.

Reports published concerning the bankruptcy of the Anti-Saloon League of Newark, N. J., were denied to-day by Detective W. Huckle, of that organization. He said the rumor was spread by interested persons who are working against the movement.

Miss Jean Geddis, as well as Detective Huckle, deny that they have left the Anti-Saloon League, and say the work will be carried on as vigorously as ever.

DR. WALSER DEAD.

Health Officer of Richmond Ill for Several Weeks.

Dr. Theodore Walser, assitsant sanitary superintendent of Richmond Borough, died this morning at his home in New Brighton. He had been ill for several weeks.

Born in Switzerland seventy-seven years ago, Dr. Walser came to this country when a boy. He was graduated from the Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia in 1850.

At the time of the consolidation of Staten Island with New York he was the health officer of New Brighton. He was one of the founders of the Smith Infirmary.

The first year (1835) that James Crow MADE the methods and materials were perfect. They have never been changed. It needs none of the doctoring known as blending. Straight Whiskies are the only pure and wholesome ones. Gold Medal awarded Paris, 1900.

"OLD CROW RYE"

Our Scotch Whiskies are also straight.
