RACING LUCK OF THE BROOKLYN HANDICAP WENT TO O'CONNOR AND HIS MOUNT, REINA.

Advance Guard Was the Best Horse in the Race and Only a Matter of Inches Separated His Backers from Thousands of Dollars.

The Brooklyn Handicap was not won by the best horse. The statement is not made to detract at all from the worth of Reina's performance, but there is no question that Advance Guard was far and away the best horse and with a bit of luck would have won with ease. The luck of the race was all with Reina. She was walking up to the barrier just as it was raised and so went away in full motion. This gave her such an advantage that she was enabled to cut right across the track and take the lead, a big advantage in a race of this kind.

Advance Guard, on the other hand, was caught in the jumble which always occurs at the starting point when there is a big field, and he was among the tailenders. He had to pick his way through the field, scooting into this hole and that, but always making up ground. When he finally did get clear at the head of the stretch the distance was too short for him to make up ground, and he was beaten an eyelash.

That eyelash meant thousands of dollars to his owner, who had backed the colt to win a fortune in the winter books. Just suppose that some one told you that a pile of bank notes representing thousands of dollars was yours if you could reach it and you just failed to do it by the width of your hand. A mile and a quarter of ground covered and defeat met with by a few inches.

Reina upset all the traditions in the race, for a mare never won the big event before. A three-year-old has only won it once. That was Conroy last season and, by the way, O'Connor rode him also. Blues failed to run up to expectations, and so did Herbert. Roehampton was pulled up before half the journey was completed.

He was ridden by Brennan. Bill Daly made a mistake when he sold Brennan. That is, it was a bad move for the public's interest. If Daly had kept Brennan no one would have conceived the idea that he was a good rider, and some of the atrocious rides he has put up this season would never have been seen.

The race, as a whole, was a great success, even if the public did lose to the choices. The bookmakers reaped a harvest. They could not help it with horses going across the line at prices ranging from 50 to 1 to 100 to 1. Yet if you make the rounds of the ring to-day and asked each bookmaker whether he won on Saturday he would probably say that he lost.

It is one of the queerest things in racing that bookmakers lose and lose and lose all the year, yet the same familiar faces are always there year in and year out. The only conclusion one can reach is that bookmakers are public philanthropists who pay for the privilege of giving their money away to the public.

Much sympathy was expressed on Saturday for George Odom, who rode Cervera in the first race, and who was thrown heavily when Cervera fell and broke his leg at the head of the stretch. Odom has always been a public favorite. Several years ago he promised to develop into one of the best riders the country had ever seen.

A bad fall at Brighton took away his courage, however, and he rode so timidly after that that he lost many of his friends. This year he resumed his old form and was riding in splendid shape. He was not badly hurt by the fall on Saturday.

He was severely shaken up, but it is feared that his old timidity may return. No breath of suspicion was ever raised against Odom. If ever a boy was thoroughly honest in his work in the saddle it is George Odom.

Racing this week promises well. There are some very interesting stakes, but no valuable ones. Mr. McIntyre is the past master of the art of furnishing good racing. Brooklyn finds it hard to break away from the guaranteed stake habit. For instance, the Hudson Stakes, scheduled to be run on Saturday, has a guaranteed value of $3,500. If there are ten starters it will be worth $5,200. The clause in the conditions to the effect that the association will add enough to make the value of the race $3,500 is amusing. On Saturday, also, the Carlton Stakes, for three-year-olds, has a guaranteed value of $5,000. With ten starters the stakes will be worth $4,450.

The association will have to put up $550 for two features which bring to the post the pick of the two and three year old divisions. The association could afford to add $3,500 to the Hudson and $5,000 to the Carlton and still be a handsome winner on Saturday's receipts. With the handsome attendances that have shown so far this season these small guaranteed stakes look out of place.

Of course, this is looking at it from the point of view of the horse owner. The public wants good racing, and if that is furnished it cares little for the amount of the purse or stake. So far as racing is concerned, Gravesend will continue to furnish one of the most interesting meetings of the year, as it always does.

(Special from Correspondent with Team.)

EN ROUTE TO BOSTON, May 26.—The Giants are nearing home, and they are glad of it. Their lot in the West has not been a bit comfortable. Old Lady Fortune has been unkind to them. She never gave them as much as a grin.

Hard luck is a wail as ancient as Rome, but it should be listened to this time. Just take that game with Chicago yesterday as an instance. The Giants did not look like the team that left New York three weeks ago, yet not a mark of discredit can be put against them for losing.

First was found a fellow named Callahan holding centre field. "Who is he?" that remark might well be made by anybody. He is a Homestead (Pa.) boy and placed in the game on trial. He was quite a failure, and, while the Giants are railroading East, he is travelling back to his little home. No use in talking, it is going to be something of a job to fill that field old Van used to cover so well.

Then, strange as it may seem, Johnny Dunn was found pitching. Every baseball fan thought his pitching days were over, but after that performance yesterday it must be said that they are nowhere near over. Johnny pitched just as in the days of old. When such a fine collection of players as the Chicago team cannot make more than six hits off his delivery the pitcher is doing some good work. That's all they got, and the credit of the victory must go to the distribution of good luck to the other fellows.

It was the first game Dunn has pitched in nearly two years, and he showed form which entitles him to a position in the first flight of twirlers. One base on balls was all he gave, and had old Van been in the game not a run would the Chicagoans have scored. Hits toward centre were what earned the runs, and they were just the kind Van could have gotten as no other fielder can. But the game was lost, and it made eleven defeats in fourteen games. A bad record, indeed, but no worse than any other team has fared on this trip West. Philadelphia has no more victories to its credit, and Boston and Brooklyn have one less.

The Giants are not so badly off after all. They left their happy Polo Grounds home in second place and are coming home but one notch behind that position.

Because the majority of games went against them does not necesarily indicate that the Giants are a poor team. On the contrary, it is good, and the word of Fred Clarke, the manager of the champion Pittsburg team, is sufficient for an indorsement of that declaration.

"You have a corking good team in New York," was Clarke's remark to The Evening World's representative with the team after the last game in the Smoky City. "They are surely in hard luck now, but that will soon turn, and New York fans will have cause to be proud of them. Outside of Pittsburg there is no team better than it. Chicago is about evenly matched with it, and I would not be surprised to see them both fighting it out for second place when the season closes.

"Van Haltren is a big loss, but at that with such a good staff of pitchers as New York has and its splendid infield, I cannot figure it bad. In batting, though, the Giants have shown a weakness before my team, but all hands may get their eyes on the ball soon and there will be a fattening in the percentage column of the New Yorkers' standing."

Anyhow, the Giants are bound East. All day to-day and to-night they will spend on the train. They will arrive in Boston to-morrow morning, and in the afternoon will play the Beaneaters. Three games will be played there, and on the morning of Memorial Day the Harlemites will begin their "at home" contests.

BIG AMATEUR POOL TOURNEY TO-NIGHT.

Clubmen Will Compete for Grand Challenge Cup for Teams and Colby Cup for Singles at the "Strollers."

The invitation pool tournament for amateurs, which has aroused so much interest among the followers of the sport in this city, will begin at the Strollers Club, No. 67 Madison avenue, to-night. The trophy promises to be well contested for, as entries have been received from the members of such prominent clubs as the Union, the Lambs, National Arts, Yale, Columbia and the Strollers. The opening game will be between the National Arts and Strollers No. 1 team, while the second game will bring together Yale and Columbia.

The Strollers Grand Challenge Cup, presented by Messrs. Guy Phelps Dodge, Robert C. Sands, Benjamin B. Tilt and Eugene Van Schaick, will go to the club winning the team championship and a separate cup as well to each member of such team. The Colby cup, presented by Mr. Howard A. Colby, pool champion of the Strollers and squash champion of the Knickerbocker A. C., will be presented to the player taking the individual championship.

WALCOTT HAD TO PAY UP.

Deputy Sheriff Was at Pier and Got $400 from Colored Fighter.

Joe Walcott, the colored fighter, who is now on his way to England to take part in the Coronation athletic festivities, came very near having to postpone his voyage for a few days. Walcott had a little $381 obligation to settle with the firm of Acker, Merrall & Condit, which he almost forgot before sailing. The timely arrival of Deputy Sheriff Walgering, armed with an order of arrest, at the Campania's dock, reminded the fighter of his little obligation, and before he was allowed to depart he was compelled to put up $400 cash ball.

Women's Golf Match at Essex.

The first team match for women on the links of the Essex County Country Club will take place on June 6, when the women of the Baltusrol Golf Club will pay a visit to the Country Club and match their skill against their local rivals.

ENTRIES OUT FOR GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Travis, Douglas and All the First-Class Players Will Compete at Tuxedo Links To-Morrow.

Fifty-seven entries were received for the Metropolitan championship, which is to be played over the Tuxedo links Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. Although 180 more men were made eligible to compete, by extending the handicap limit from ten to twelve, the increase of entries is scarcely noticeable, as there are only six more than last year and two more than the year previous.

Still it is a fair entry list and the important feature is that all the first-class players have entered and there is a greater scarcity of poor players than usual. The manner in which they have been paired and the time they start is as follows:

9 A. M., Percy Chubb, Nassau, and C. F. Watson, Essex County; 9.05 H. Evelyn Pierrepont, jr., Dyker Meadow, and J. L. Taylor, Dyker Meadow; 9. 10, F. C. Condon, Tuxedo, and Louis Livingston, Fox Hills; 9.15, J. A. Stillman, Tuxedo, and F. S. Douglas, Nassau; 9.20, W. B. Dinsmore, jr., Tuxedo, and W. J. Travis, Garden City; 9.25, Price Collier, Tuxedo, and W. C. Carnegie, St. Andrews; 9.30, Talbot, Tuxedo, and Deveteaux Emmet, Garden City; 9.35, C. B. Macdonald, Garden City, and John Moller, jr., Apawamis; 9.40, L. H. Graham, Baltusrol, and C. L. Tappin, Westbrook; 9.45, J. R. Maxwell, jr., Nassau, and A. W. Rossiter, Oakland; 9.50, R. C. Watson, jr., Westbrook, and C. B. Cory, Ardsley; 9.55, Arden W. Robbins, Garden City, and George T. Brokaw, Princeton.

10 A. M., Jasper Lynch, Lakewood, and W. H. Rachau, Richmond Hill; 10.05, E. B. Alvord, Apawamis, and C. I. Travelli, Lakewood; 10.10, F. Oden Horstman, Lakewood, and F. S. Wheeler, Brooklawn; 10.15, D. Lloyd, Lakewood, and F. A. Marcellus, Yountakah; 10.20, J. Chadwick, Jr., Powelton, and A. De Witt Cochrane, Ardsley; 10.25, E. S. Knapp, Westbrook, and G. B. Pitt, Wee Burn; 10.45, J. M. Ward, Fox Hills, and M. M. Michael, Yountakah; 10.50, R. L. Redfield, Westchester, and J. G. Douglas, Oakland; 10.55, A. H. A special train to the links will leave West Twenty-third street at 8.25 and Chambers street at 8.30 o'clock on Wednesday morning.

STILL IMPROVING BRIGHTON TRACK.

President Engeman Intends to Make Cross-Country Racing a Feature—Bids, Too, for Holiday Element.

There is to be no halt in the march of improvements at the Brighton Beach course. In addition to the new clubhouse, now about completed, the new paddock and new field stand and other improvements, President Engeman has decided that the steeplechase course needs tuning up. He has instructed Track Superintendent Clare to proceed with the work at once.

The course will receive a coat of top-dressing and will be resodded. New jumps will be built and everything that is possible will be done to make the course more attractive to the owners of cross-country horses and those who admire racing between the flags. President Engeman's action in planning these improvements is a recognition of the wondrous change which has been wrought in this branch of the sport by Messrs. Howland, Follansbee, Hitchcock, Alexander and their fellow-members active in the affairs of the Steeplechase and Hunt Association.

There was a time when cross-country racing was viewed with suspicion, but that time has passed. Bettors now wager on jumping races with as much confidence as they would bet on a flat race, and it has come to pass that no holiday programme is complete without a race through the field or over the sticks. A hurdle race or a steeplechase is an event extraordinary to the holiday visitors, and while doing everything possible for the horsemen and the regular patrons of the sport, Brighton also proposes to cater to the holiday element, and thus win new supporters for the turf.
