HOMELESS MILLIONS OF WAR REFUGEES

Serious Problem Now Facing the Fighting Nations.

Three million refugees without homes or money, in many cases lacking sufficient clothing and even food, make one result of little more than two months of warfare in Europe.

The fall of Antwerp added fully 500,000 men, women and children to the already long list of homeless sufferers who must depend on the bounty of others for their keep. France, England, Germany, Austria, Russia and Belgium have all felt the effect of the sufferings of this great army. England and France especially and the neutral nation of Holland have been the chief sufferers, for to them have come the homeless hordes of Belgians fleeing from their homes or driven out by the fire and sword that have swept through the country.

It is estimated that there are 1,000,000 refugees in France, more than half that number in England, at least 500,000 in Holland. Refugees from the border towns of Germany and the East Prussian territory occupied by Russia have fled to the interior in numbers that cannot be estimated. On the other hand, Russians from Poland and the border towns attacked by the Germans have been forced to flee to the interior.

Thousands of refugees from Galicia and the parts of Hungary occupied by the Russians have fled to the interior, and Vienna and other large Austrian and Hungarian cities are taxed to their utmost to care for them.

Besides those that have fled from their homes there are thousands in different parts of Belgium and parts of France, possibly starving and hopelessly facing the coming winter.

CITY OF AGUASCALIENTES.

Scene of Constitutionalist Conference an Attractive and Thriving Town.

Aguascalientes, the scene of the Constitutionalist conference, is a city with a population of 56,500 and is the capital of the state of that name. It is 364 miles north of Mexico City. It is celebrated for its thermal springs and its fine and salubrious climate. It is sometimes referred to as La Ciudad Perforada (the perforated city) because of an extensive system of tunnels beneath it. This labyrinth of catacombs, excavated by some unknown and prehistoric tribe, has never been thoroughly explored. The present city was founded by the Spanish conquerors in 1575.

The convention of Constitutionalists at Aguascalientes voted itself the supreme power of the land and made all factions subject to its orders.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Irregular Heartbeats.

A writer on medical subjects says that an irregular beating heart should not cause any anxiety. Give it no thought—especially fear thought. The mental attitude regarding it may make or mar your life. Forget it. The heart is a wonderful little organ and, as a rule, will adjust itself to varying conditions when not interfered with mentally or physically. Therefore, mentally, forget it; physically, watch your diet as regards overeating or the eating of such foods and in such a manner (insufficient mastication) as to cause gases, the action of which is to distend the stomach and crowd the heart. It won't go back on you if you treat it halfway right.

A SYMPHONY OF COLOR.

Panama Exposition to Be a Scene of Transcendent Beauty.

There have already been exposition cities, or parts of them, whose streets, buildings, parks, statues and landscape effects, each more or less good in itself, were all planned as contributing parts of a homogeneous whole in design, though indeed, as a matter of fact and history, even this idea has never yet been carried out with unified completeness except in exposition cities, memorably the White City at Chicago in 1893.

But for the greatest of expositions there has been conceived and worked out for the first time a city where not only form, but color will be called up to create symphonic loveliness.

At the Panama exposition every square yard of the stately composition, a mile or more in extent, from the red roofs overhead to the tan shale underfoot and including the rich masses of California flowers and shrubs between, together with the blues of the Golden Gate and the soft browns of the adjacent hills, are all picked up and combined, blended and contrasted, in one dominant key of color to produce not only harmony like an orchestra, but transcendent beauty like a great orchestra.

What the actual effect will be when it is finished and visitors look down upon it as they approach from the heights above or gaze at it from the hills across the bay is quite impossible to describe for the very reason that nothing of the sort was ever done before. The nearest one can come to suggesting its ethereal loveliness is to say that the whole color scheme has been devised and carried out under the direction of Jules Guerin.—Scribner's.

BATTLEFIELD HOSPITALS.

Rules That Govern the Treatment of the Wounded.

The care of the wounded is necessarily an important duty imposed on every nation in case of war.

The general system adopted for providing a medical service is practically identical in the armies of all the great powers. It contemplates a division of the service into three portions—that which belongs to and accompanies the fighting troops, that which pertains to the base (of supplies) and the line of communications and that which pertains to the home territory, or "the zone of the interior."

The principle governing these services is that nothing but first aid and emergency treatment should be attempted in the immediate zone of combat and that, having received this treatment, the disabled should be quickly transported to the "base," where abundant facilities for their care can be provided without encumbering the fighting forces.

Here at the base they are carefully classified, and those who are so seriously disabled as to be unfit for further service at the front are sent back to hospitals at home, while those who are less seriously disabled are retained until they are well enough to leave the hospital, when they are transferred to the convalescent camp. Here they remain until they have fully regained their strength, when they rejoin their regiments at the front.—Scientific American.

Bismarck on Helgoland.

The exchange of Helgoland for Zanzibar was a transaction which has met since with a good deal of criticism. It must be remembered, however, that Germany had not then developed the naval ambition which has given the little island its great strategic importance, and when the bargain was made it had no stronger critic than Bismarck. To barter Zanzibar for Helgoland, he protested, was "like exchanging a pair of trousers for a button."—London Chronicle.

Asbestos Doors.

Asbestos doors, which look like ordinary doors of oak or mahogany, are a new kind of fire protection. They are made with a center core of wood or metal, covered thickly with asbestos. An oak or other wood veneer gives a surface finish so that they seem to be solid wood, but in case of fire the small amount of wood in the veneer would not affect their fire resisting ability much more than would a heavy coat of paint on an all metal door.

Whale Beef.

Enter the whale as an element in the "beef" supply. In Alaska the canneries have begun to pack whale beef, heretofore regarded as waste. An average whale yields twenty tons of beef.
