HARRIMAN WINNER IN GIANT DEAL

Railroad Magnate Gathers In Southern Pacific and Creates a Sensation in Wall Street.

GETS $12,000,000 STOCK.

Routs Big Pool Led by James R. Keene, Secures Control of Vast System and Completes Country's Greatest Railroad Transaction.

Edward H. Harriman, heading the Union Pacific Syndicate, has routed the Southern Pacific pool, led by James R. Keene, and by the purchase of $12,000,000 of the Southern Pacific stock has secured control of that system.

Harriman, in acquiring an actual majority of the stock, practically completes the greatest railroad deal in the history of the country.

In February, 1901, the original Union Pacific syndicate paid $70,000,000 for the Southern Pacific holdings of Collis P. Huntington, the Leland Stanford estate and the Crocker holdings.

That gave them control, through being the largest minority holders of 9,604 miles of railroad, owned, operated or leased by the Southern Pacific.

Since then the syndicate added to its holdings until, at the inauguration of the present market crisis, it held $90,000,000 and was within $9,000,000 of owning a majority of the stock.

By the purchase of the $12,000,000 additional stock this week the syndicate now owns the road.

Pool Lost Millions.

It was stated positively in Wall street this afternoon, that the Union Pacific syndicate had taken over the Southern Pacific holdings of the firm so long identified with the Southern Pacific pool.

It was also stated that James R. Keene had let most of his Southern Pacific stock go, but this was emphatically denied.

The Southern Pacific pool, in which Mr. Keene has long been the leader, has undoubtedly lost several millions of dollars in the recent slump, and it may now be dissolved, because, with the vesting of actual control in the Union Pacific group passes the possibility of a stock pool doing more than transient rallies or declines.

Included in the original Union Pacific syndicate were Edward H. Harriman, John D. Rockefeller, George J. Gould, D. O. Mills, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and Speyer & Co., which comprises a group of the richest men in New York and the world.

In connection with the big transaction it was said that James R. Keene had quarrelled with his broker because the latter sold to the Union Pacific syndicate his Southern Pacific holdings, which went to make up the $12,000,000 block bought.

This was also denied by Mr. Keene and all interested as idle gossip.

The price of Southern Pacific sagged in the Stock Exchange to-day and sold as low as 62 on heavy sales caused by the report that the stock pool in it had disintegrated.

Keene Made a Boast.

Shortly before Mr. Keene's return from Europe the stock was bulled from 65 to 79, and the day after he arrived he predicted par for Southern Pacific within a few months.

Since then the $100,000,000 bond issue proposed has been abandoned and the securing of complete control by the Union Pacific means a postponement of dividends about a year.

Heretofore the Union Pacific has controlled the Southern Pacific as the strongest minority holder. This, of course, left it open to attacks by such combinations as the Western group, and evidently Mr. Harriman and his associates decided to take such steps as would prevent, in their neck of the woods, a repetition of the Louisville and Nashville deal.

The entire capital stock of the Southern Pacific is $197,800,000 and as Mr. Harriman holds for the Union Pacific about $102,000,000 the control cannot be taken away from him.

Just as W. K. Vanderbilt took advantage of the exigencies of the crisis to take over the Western speculators' Chicago and Northwestern stock at prices $50 a share less than they paid for it, so Edward H. Harriman has fortified his position by buying control outright.

Hereafter Mr. Harriman need not sit up all night to watch his railroad system. It is out of the reach of raiders and safe from the attacks of speculative or covetous operators.

Courtney Back at Cornell.

ITHACA, Nov. 14.—Through Coach Edward Courtney's work in preparing the Harvard oarsmen for their annual class races it is likely now that closer aquatic relations between Cornell and the Cambridge university will result. Courtney has returned to Cornell, where he will again take up his duties as coach for the Ithacan oarsmen.

"SHARE PROFITS," SAYS MR. CASSATT

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—President A. J. Cassatt, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, in urging upon the directors the advisability of making the advance in wages which has just been granted to 100,000 employees, made this remarkable statement:

"The country is passing through an unexampled period of prosperity, and as far as the Pennsylvania Railroad is concerned this prosperity is bound to continue for at least two years, if contracts are kept. It is time our employees be given a share of this prosperity. All the railroads in the United States and all the employers of labor are contemplating an advance in wages. The cost of living has increased 20 to 25 per cent., but wages have not increased accordingly.

"This movement is bound to come, and the Pennsylvania may as well lead as follow. We have more business than we can handle, and can't see our way out of that difficulty unless we keep our men loyal to the company and help them while they help us. I therefore recommend a flat increase of 10 per cent. in wages, and advise that the announcement be made to the employees first and to the public later."

MORE ROADS TO ADVANCE WAGES.

President Cassatt, of the Pennsylvania Company, Says Their Move Is Only a Beginning.

MANY MILLIONS INVOLVED.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 14.—Forty thousand more of the employees of the Pennsylvania Railroad are to benefit by the action of the Board of Directors in authorizing an increase of 10 per cent. in the wages of its employees. The order was extended to-day to the lines west of Pittsburg, and it is estimated that it will cost the company more than $3,000,000, in addition to the $4,200,000 required annually to meet the increase east of Pittsburg. It is believed that this action will be followed by other roads, as is indicated in the statement made by President Cassatt when he recommended the advance.

The sum involved represents 3 per cent. on the capital stock of the Pennsylvania and means just that much less in dividends. A similar advance by all the lines in the United States would put $24,000,000 into the pockets of the employees.

TOOK POISON ON CHURCH STEPS

After Being Turned Out of a Saloon and a Drug Store James Ross Went to a Church

NOT ALLOWED TO DIE THERE.

Rather than have a suicide disgrace the stone steps leading into St. Monica's Catholic Church, in Seventy-ninth street, Policeman Edward Burns to-day carried the writhing body of James Ross for half a block before calling an ambulance. Ross had swallowed the contents of a bottle of vermin poison. He was taken to the Presbyterian Hospital.

Policeman Burns, big and scrupulously conscientious over the custody of streets in the vicinity of St. Monica's Church, was dumfounded early to-day when he discovered the form of a poorly dressed man lying on the steps over which he and his family went to worship last Sunday. The man said he was James Ross, ashcart driver, of No. 1497 Avenue A, and added:

"I have just committed suicide."

Without a moment's delay Burns grabbed Ross about the waist and dragged him to First avenue and then turned in a call for an ambulance.

Ross was found to have taken a mixture of benzine and naphtha. Although he intended to kill himself because he lost his position in the Street Cleaning Department last Wednesday, Ross will not die, as this vermin poison is not fatal to a human being. He is a prisoner at the hospital.

Policeman Burns is very indignant. He said:

"The idea of his taking the dope on the church steps. He ought to get six months for that alone. I am going to see that he gets his due, for I think he did it on purpose. Just to think of trying to die in front of a church after being thrown out of a saloon and a drug store! He must have thought the church was easy, but I nabbed him in time."

FRANK KINNEY BEATS BIG FIELD

Craneville at 7 to 2 Outruns Alhambra and Ornature in Second Event at Bennings To-Day.

TRUE BLUE WINS THIRD RACE

THE WINNERS.

FIRST RACE—Frank Kinney 1, Slidell 2, Guesswork 3.

SECOND RACE—Craneville 1, Alhambra 2, Ornature 3.

THIRD RACE—True Blue 1, Malden 2, Dandie Belle 3.

FOURTH RACE—Merry Maker 1, Grail 2, Black Dick 3.

FIFTH RACE—Emshee 1, Extinguisher 2, Blackstock 3.

SIXTH RACE—Wilful 1, Bondage 2, Sailmaker 3.

(Special to The Evening World.)

RACE TRACK, BENNINGS, Nov. 14.—Large fields were the rule at Bennings this afternoon. In the first three races there were a total of seventy-eight entries. The first race had thirty entries, but all of these could not start, because the Jockey Club rule which permits only one horse to every four feet of track width prevented.

Large fields are an abomination from every point of view. Not only is there great danger to the riders, but such races are never run true.

There were no stakes down for decision and not even a handicap appeared on the card. The best race looked to be the fifth, which was for three-year-olds at seven furlongs. Huntressa, Blackstock, Extinguisher, Setauket, Remorse, Emshee, Cornwall and others were engaged.

The weather was cool and pleasant and the attendance was good. It picks up each day, and Saturday will probably furnish the banner crowd of the meeting.

The track was in its usual fine shape.

STABBER IS SOUGHT FOR BY POLICE.

Mystery Shrouds the Motive That Prompted Him to Attack Pretty Mrs. Gardiner, of Bath Beach.

SHE TELLS QUEER STORY.

Man Knocked at the Door of Her Home and When Ordered Away Attacked Neighbors Who Came to Her Assistance.

Who was the desperate man who tried to lure Mrs. W. R. Gardiner, of Bath and Fifteenth avenues, within reach of his murderous knife on the porch of her home on Thursday night?

An all-night search of the woods and swamps around Dyker Meadows failed to give any trace of the fugitive, who now stands a good chance of being a murderer, for one of the men he stabbed in his furious dash for freedom will probably die.

The story of the visit of the queer "unknown" was told in the following was to-day by Mrs. Gardiner:

Mrs. Gardiner's Statement.

Mrs. Gardiner, who is a remarkably pretty woman, made the following statement to-day to a reporter for The Evening World:

"I was in the kitchen shortly after 6 o'clock last night with my two little step-daughters, Alva and Helen, when there was a knock at the door. Alva asked, 'Who is there, and what do you want?'

"'I want to see Mrs. Gardiner,' a voice replied, but I could tell that the speaker was trying to disguise his voice.

She Describes the Man.

"The man stood in front of the house and I got a good look at him. He wore a light overcoat and derby hat and I would know him again in a crowd. He walked down past the porch where we were hidden, but he could not see us and when he had gone we rang the bell and went into Mrs. Catherwood's house. She sent for Policeman McMann, who lives down the street, but he was not at home and his father and brother came back. They met a Mr. Buchmueller on the way, and the three men came together.

"They went with me and the children to our house and looked around. When we came to the front again the man was standing on the front steps. I stood there in plain sight, but he walked up and said, 'I want to see Mrs. Gardiner.'

"Mr. Buchmueller said, 'What do you want to see her about?' and he replied that it was none of his business. I stood there, but was afraid to speak, and Mr. Buchmueller told him to get away from the house.

"'I came to see Mrs. Annie Gardiner,' he said. 'My name is Norah Gardiner.' At that Mr. Buchmueller tried to push the man off the steps, and they both went down together. When it seemed that the stranger was getting the better of the fight the younger Mr. McMahon ran out. I just saw the flash of a knife and Mr. McMahon ran away, saying he had been stabbed. His father ran out and got into the fight, and he, too, was stabbed.

Frightened Them Before.

"Then the man broke away and fled. I am sure he is the same man who frightened us so five weeks ago.

Concerning Mrs. Gardiner's relatives and who she was before marriage a little more than a year ago there seems to be an air of mystery. Questions along this line asked by the police are answered evasively.

Louis Steffens, who lives across the street from the McMahons, was at the Gardiner home when Mr. Gardiner returned home about 8 o'clock last night. When Gardiner was told of the occurrences of the night he asked if it was the same fellow who called five weeks before. When his wife said it was he said "Oh!" and went into the house.

The police who are working on the case will go over the whole mystery this evening with Mr. Gardner when he returns from New York.

Can Gardner Tell?

Special Policeman McMahon, the son of the man who was so grievously wounded by the "Stabber," is working hard on the case. He says he is convinced that Mr. Gardner can tell more about the case than he has done up to the present.

Mr. Gardner is employed by the J. Ottmann Lithographing Company, in East Houston street, and it was there that he met his wife. She was then a forewoman and had been employed there for a number of years. The superintendent stated to-day that he knew positively she was not a widow when she married Gardner.

MRS. GARDINER, OBJECT OF STABBER'S IRE

ORPHAN CHILD SEEKS TO DIE.

Little Grace Clark Attempts to Jump from the Fourth Story of the Foundling Asylum.

Appalled at the prospect of going out among strangers to make her way in the world, Grace Clark, a sixteen-year-old orphan, who has lived in asylums since she was a baby, attempted to commit suicide at the New York Foundling Asylum, Third avenue and Sixty-eighth street, to-day.

Only the quick intuition of one of the sisters in charge kept the little girl from hurling herself from the fourth-floor landing of an outside stairway.

She was taken to Yorkville Police Court, where her manner and appearance made such an impression on Magistrate Mayo that he offered to give her a position in his household.

So that after all the attempt of Grace Clark to end her life may be the means of beginning a brighter era of existence for her.

Left an orphan when a baby, the Clark girl was sent by her relatives to a foundling asylum. Several times she was transferred, her longest period in a retreat for orphans being spent in Spuyten Duyvil. She was transferred from this place to the New York Foundling Asylum six months ago because she had grown out of the age limit of the more northern institution.

When transferred downtown the girl was asked by the sisters to go out and work for her own support. They offered to secure a position for her and allow her to live at the asylum, but insisted that she should contribute something toward her support.

She was to have taken a new position to-day. The sisters had spoken of her to a gentlewoman, who had promised that she would do all she could to wean the orphan from her love of the asylum. One of the sisters was to have taken her to her new home at noon.

Two sisters of the institution, passing along a hallway in the fourth story, saw the Clark girl climbing through a window a few moments before she was to have been taken to her new home. They ran after her, screaming for assistance. A trained nurse heard their cries and joined them.

The three women reached the balcony just as the Clark girl was climbing over the rail with the intention of leaping to the street. Trained as they are in the handling of irresponsible children they had difficulty in restraining her until Dr. Joseph O'Dwyer came to their assistance and dragged the girl into the house.

Dr. O'Dwyer took her to the police court when she became composed.

From Yorkville police court the girl was taken back to the Foundling Asylum and placed in the hospital, where she was seen by an Evening World reporter. She is an exceptionally pretty child, evidently of a timid disposition, and, all things considered, the possessor of a good education.

"I didn't want to kill myself," she protested. "I have been taught, ever since I can remember, that my life does not belong to me, but to God. Some impulse carried me out onto that balcony. All I know of it is what the sisters tell me.

"I suppose that nobody can understand how I feel. I cannot recollect a time when I have not been in charge of the sisters. I don't know other people and I am afraid of strangers. Especially am I afraid of women who are married and keep house.

WOMAN OF SEVENTY-ONE HANGS HERSELF TO TRANSOM

Mrs. Honoria O'Flaherty, seventy-one years old, committed suicide this afternoon by hanging herself with a rope from the transom over the doorway of her room in her apartment on the top floor of the Ponce De Leon apartment-house at No. 1157 Lexington avenue.

The old woman was found dead by her daughter, who had only been absent from the house for a few minutes.

Mrs. O'Flaherty's son, William P. Flaherty, who is the principal of Public School No. 67, said he believed his mother was temporarily insane.

The coroners said the changes were made for the "good of the service."

BOGUS REDS BLACKMAIL MILLIONAIRES

Police Unearth Plot to Fleece Rich Men Through Mails by Band Posing as Nihilists.

GET FORTUNES BY THREATS.

Man Under Arrest Reveals that Band Is Composed of Famous Criminals and Operates in Many Cities.

As a result of the arrest of William Becker, a ship's carpenter on board the steamship Americus, accused of being one of the "Russian Nihilists" who for weeks have annoyed prominent millionaires and bankers in this and other cities by writing threatening letters, the police have extorted a confession that has put them on the trail of the boldest gang of blackmailers that ever operated in this country.

The man Becker, who is not a Nihilist, made a confession to-day in which he implicated five men and gave their names. Scores of detectives have been turned loose from Police Headquarters and are now scouring this and adjoining cities in search of the leaders of this band.

Famous Criminals in Band.

At first the police thought that the writers of supposed Nihilistic letters to J. P. Morgan, John W. Gates and other millionaires were written by some mad cranks, but from the startling revelations made by the prisoner Baker they have learned that the writers of these letters are some of the most famous criminals in the United States and that they have been operating successfully and collecting fortunes in blackmail for months.

Had these men been content to confine themselves to the smaller fry, whom they frightened with their blood curdling epistles into turning over small sums of money, they might have continued their machinations indefinitely. But emboldened by their success they thought that they could frighten such men as Morgan, the Vanderbilts and John W. Gates into disgorging to them great sums.

All of the letters which are now in the hands of the police are signed with five names, purporting to be the signatures of desperate Russian Nihilists. They are fictitious, and the real names of the leaders of the gang are now in the possession of the police.

According to the confession made by this man Becker the gang has operated in most all of the larger cities of the Union, and the police here have now corroboration of this statement in letters received from many cities in the country.

Operate in Many Cities.

Death or life-long insanity through the agency of a subtle poison was the penalty named in their blackmailing letters for failure to send $1,000 to "C. C. Barton" at the general delivery.

Becker practically convicted himself to-day through the strategy of Capt. Titus. The Captain asked him to write a letter to the mate of the steamer Americus, instructing the mate to permit Titus's men to search his room for evidence.

The prisoner readily agreed, and wrote a page. When it was compared to the threatening letter the similarity was so striking that no handwriting experts were needed to show that they were both penned by the same hand.

The letter writers have been so persistent and threatening that Captain Titus has had a force of men on watch at the Post-Office for two weeks. Their patience was finally rewarded when the stalwart German went to the window and asked for mail for "C. C. Barton."

Attacked Detective.

As threatened in the letters, the German turned on the detective, attacking him fiercely. But when other detectives came to the rescue he gave in and allowed himself to be handcuffed.

When taken to the station-house the man said he had been the victim of an acquaintance he had made in City Hall Park and knew nothing of Russian Nihilists nor the threats made to wealthy New Yorkers. He said he met a man in the park and after taking several drinks with him the fellow asked him to get his mail at the Post-Office. The German was taken to the park by a detective, but when he could not

MORGAN HOME CURING A COLD.

Financier Expected to Go to Office To-Day, but Changed His Mind and Transacted His Business by Telephone.

HE MET ALL HIS CALLERS.

Wall street was filled with rumors again to-day about J. Pierpont Morgan's health because the financier was absent from his office all day. He remained at his Madison avenue home and transacted all his business by telephone.

It was reported that Mr. Morgan was suffering from an attack of lumbago, but this was denied at his home. It was said that Mr. Morgan caught a cold the night of the Chamber of Commerce banquet, but the attack was not serious in any way.

He had intended to go to his office this afternoon, but at 2 o'clock telephoned for his secretary, who took a quantity of mail uptown and spent the remainder of the day with the magnate.

Mr. Morgan, it was said, would probably be at his office to-morrow.

There were a number of callers at his home to see him to-day, among them being Herbert Saterlee, Mr. Morgan's son-in-law, and Charles Lanier, the banker. Other visitors were men prominent in financial circles whose calls were of a business character.

KEENE'S AUTO IN TROUBLE AGAIN.

Millionaire's Machine Frightens Horse and Aged Farmer Is Badly Injured by Falling Boxes

Foxhall Keene, who was arrested near Norwich last Tuesday afternoon for overspeeding his automobile, was the cause of another accident yesterday, in which an octogenarian farmer of the village of Queens, L. I., was so badly injured that he may die.

Keene was driving along the Jericho turnpike, near Queens, in his machine. With him was Dr. John Mann. Coming in the opposite direction was Valentine H. Hallock, a farmer. He was driving a new horse hitched to a wagon in which were a lot of boxes. The horse became frightened at the machine and made a dash off the road. He ran into a tree and the wagon tipped over. The old man and the boxes were thrown to the ground and a number of the boxes fell on him.

Some of his ribs were broken and crushed into his lungs, and his collarbone was broken in two places.

Death in Massachusetts Fire.

REVERE, Mass., Nov. 14.—William Fallon lost his life and Edward Cotter was severely burned at a fire in the D. & L. Slade Company's spice mills here to-day. The men were grinding spice when fire burst from the machine. Fallon inhaled the flames and died.
