CROWD TO SEE LORENZ WORK.

The Post-Graduate Operating-Room Packed with Doctors Anxious to Study the Great Surgeon's Methods.

MANY WOMEN AMONG THEM.

His Morning Given Up to Private Patients, Who Flock from New England Cities to Consult with Him.

Dr. Adolph Lorenz perormed the third of his series of surgical operations in this city this afternoon at the Post-Graduate Hospital, Twentieth street and Second avenue. He was assisted by Dr. Warren O. Plimpton, who usually conducts the clinics at this hospital, and by Dr. Frederic Mubller, his travelling companion and personal assistant. He was introduced to the clinic by Dr. D. B. St. John Roosa.

The amphitheatre, which was meant to hold about 300 persons, was jammed with nearly 500 when 3 o'clock, the hour for the operations to commence—came. There were sixty women nurses and at least twenty women doctors in the crowd.

Dr. Lorenz was a little late in arriving, as he had been examining private patients at the office of Dr. Ashley, No. 63 East Thirty-fourth street, all the early part of the day. These patients had been brought here from New England to take advantage of the famous Austrian's skill.

While the crowd waited for the distinguished foreigner to come, the seven little patients who had been chosen for Dr. Lorenz to select his two or three from waited with wondering fear in their tiny cots. Each was hoping that the big doctor with the long beard, whose picture in the newspapers had been shown to them, would select him or her, although they all trembled in childish awe at the thought of what he might make them suffer. The names of the seven were Charles Zoubek, nine years old; Florence Wolfel, five years old; Lena Purcell, two and one-half years old; Lilliam Czarmedy, nine years old; Alberta Winkellan, two years old; Minnie Gerhardt, six years old, and Susan Hoos, five years old.

FULLER IS LIKELY TO SUCCEED DADY.

Brooklyn Republican Executive Committee Will Unite in Sending His Name to Mayor Low.

At the meeting of the Republican Executive Committee, of Brooklyn, this afternoon it is expected by the "machine" supporters that all factions will agree on Senator Rudolph C. Fuller as the man to be recommended to Mayor Low for appointment as Election Commissioner to succeed Col. Michael J. Dady, whom the Mayor refused to reappoint because his business takes him out of the country much of the time.

At a conference held by the party leaders with Mr. Low yesterday several names were presented, but the Mayor decided that he would let the whole Executive Committee act on the matter, promising to appoint the man it recommended.

It is said that the committee will be unanimous for Fuller. Other names have been mentioned, among them those of Hanbury and Sperry, but Fuler is the choice.

The politicians say this is the first time in his administration that Mayor Low has dealt directly with the Republican machine in Brooklyn.

GAMBLING IN CANFIELD'S DESCRIBED.

at the same time we are not throwing away any facts that might form such a case."

SLEUTH JACOBS TELLS OF CANFIELD'S PLACE

The preliminary examination of David W. Bucklin, supposed manager of Richard Canfield's New York gambling house, was begun to-day before Justice Wyatt in the library of the office of the District-Attorney. Mr. Jerome was assisted in the examination by his assistants Osborne and Sandford.

For the gamblers there appeared former Justice of the Supreme Court Fursman, representing Canfield and Bucklin, together with Forbes Hennessy, Daniel O'Reilly and John J. Delahunty.

Ex-Gov. Black appeared in the interest of Frank Farrell and William Burbridge, whose Thirty-third street house was raided by the same party that raided Canfield's on the night of Dec. 1.

Bucklin entered a plea of not guilty. He said he was forty-five years old, was born in Massachusetts and lived at No. 5 East Forty-fourth street, the house that was raided. When asked to state his business he declined to answer.

The first witness called was Joseph Jacobs, commonly known as the "Rubber-Faced Detective," the man who says he gambled in Canfield's, and upon whose affidavit to that effect the raid was based. He was examined by Assistant District-Attorney Osborne.

Jacobs recited that on the night of Nov. 25 he went to Canfield's with a man of the name of Willard, was admitted and was introduced to Bucklin, who told him to make himself at home. He said that he went to the faro table and bought $50 worth of checks at $2.50 apiece.

He was asked to describe the faro layout and did so to the satisfaction of Justice Fursman, who said that he admitted that a table equipped as the one described by Jacobs was a faro table.

At this game, Jacobs said, he lost $50. Then he went to one of the two roulette tables in the room and dropped $25 more.

The next time he saw Bucklin, he said, was on the night of the raid, when he also saw a man in the gambling house who he was told was Canfield. He walked up to Bucklin and after asking him the time said:

"Well, this is pretty tough on you."

"Yes," replied Bucklin, "especially when we have nothing here. I don't see why they raided this house."

Justice Fursman cross-examined. He began in the thorough way that characterized him in clearing up conflicting testimony when he was on the bench and started in to make Jacobs tell every incident of his career from his birth down to the present time. Jacobs was hazy as to details in many instances, which is not surprising considering what he says he has been through.

In answer to questions by Justice Fursman he said that at the age of fourteen he shipped as a cabin boy in Boston on a sailing vessel and went around the Horn to San Francisco, where he remained twenty-four hours, when he shipped again for Hong Kong. From there he went to Manila on a ship called the Wild Rover, and finally found himself back in Denver, where he worked as a teamster between that city and Mexico. He lived in New Mexico, Mexico, Nevada, Washington and other Western States, and in his varied life worked as cabin boy, teamster, waiter, cowboy, ranch hand, farmer, town marshal, deputy sheriff, carpenter and laborer.

Jacobs came to New York eight years ago, he said, and went to work as conductor on the Third avenue surface line. He also worked for this line as transfer agent and private detective, and said he was discharged because he "knew too much about the crooked work on the road."

When asked if he had not been discharged because he failed to turn in fares he answered in the negative, but when Justice Fursman made as though he would examine a bundle of documents close at hand he said he had "heard something about it."

At this point Lawyer Delahunty informed the Court that he was due to argue a case this afternoon in the Appellate Division. Justice Wyatt adjourned the case until 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

After the adjournment of the Bucklin hearing, Justice Wyatt called the case of Samuel G. Smith, the doorkeeper at Farrell's, in West Thirty-third street, who was arrested in the raid. Gov. Black made a number of motions "to clear the record," which he declared was faulty, but they were all overruled by the court.

Jacobs was called to the stand again. He said he visited Farrell's on the night of Nov. 6 with Willard and was admitted without question. After he had lost $5 at faro Smith shook hands with him and asked him to call again. He did call on Dec. 1, previous to the raid, but Smith refused to let him in, saying that he was afraid of reporters.

Gov. Black cross-examined Jacobs, bringing out that he made some statements in his testimony that contradicted statements made in his affidavit. Jacobs said that they were "overshots." He said he received $25 a week from the Citizens' Union for detective work. The hearing was adjourned until to-morrow morning.

Another of the legal cases growing out of the raid on Canfield's gambling-house came up in the Yorkville Court to-day when Inspector Brooks responded to the summons obtained yesterday by Canfield charging him with exceeding his authority in the raid. The Inspector was represented by Lawyer Isaac Well, who said he was ready to go on with the case. Forbes Hennessy, representing Canfield, asked for more time, and an adjournment was taken to 2 o'clock Monday afternoon.

ENGLAND AND VENEZUELA ARE ACTUALLY AT WAR.

military or other grounds. All the conditions governing such a blockade have been carefully considered and will be published in due time for the information of neutrals.

"The Government is most anxious that these operations, the necessity for which we deeply regret, should be as little inconvenient to neutrals as they can possibly be made. No difference will be made between the vessels of the various neutral powers.

"I think it is quite likely that the United States will think that there cannot be such a thing as a 'pacific blockade,' and I personally take the same view. Evidently a blockade involves a state of war."

He believed that the Germans also had claims besides the financial ones.

SAYS WAR NOW EXISTS.

Mr. Healy, Irish Nationalist, asked if the United States assented to a blockade which would exclude United States vessels.

Mr. Balfour replied: "Neutrals are not consulted when you are in a state of war with a third party."

"Is war declared?" asked Mr. Healy.

The Premier replied: "Does the Honorable Member suppose that without a state of war you can take vessels and have a blockade?"

Replying to further questions, Mr. Balfour said he had nothing to add regarding arbitration beyond what was contained in his previous statement on the subject. Papers were being prepared and would be presented to the House as soon as possible. He assumed they would include the communications which had passed on the subject of the blockade between the United States and Great Britain.

the news aNt any rate. Let them all come in is what I say. The more the merrier."

Alderman "Tim" Sullivan said:, "The Pennsylvania has hogged the whole affair it seems to me. It gets fifty times as much as the two other roads and pays twenty times less. I voted against the New York and New Jersey hunnel franchise and the Pennsylvania tunnel franchise and would vote against them again."

CENTRAL'S PLAN FOR TERMINAL.

Asks the City to Give It Street Privileges Valued at $2,497,346 for Depressing Its Tracks,

AND SPEND $848,000 BESIDE.

Comptroller Grout to-day received a letter from Eugene E. McLean, engineer of the New York Central Road, in which he describes at length the proposal made some time ago by President W. H. Newman for the enlargement of its terminal yards from Forty-second to Fifty-seventh street.

This proposal is that the company shall depress all of its tracks between Forty-fifth and Fifty-seventh streets to such an extent as may enable the city to carry by viaducts or bridges over the tracks at a grade not exceeding 4 per cent. such of the intersecting streets as may be necessary in the public interest, the expense of extending these streets over the tracks to be borne by the city.

President Newman asks that the railroad company be given the right to use those portions of the streets included within the limits of its enlarged yard, and of Park avenue from the southerly side of Forty-fifth street northerly to Fifty-seventh street (the existing roadways of Park avenue not to be interfered with), and to a connection with the Rapid Transit subway at Forty-second street.

"Using the usual methods, and customary charges for similar privileges granted to private parties," says Mr. McLean, "I estimate the city would give the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad privileges which are worth $2,497,346 and be obliged to construct eight short bridges and four viaducts at a total cost of $848,000. This does not include the item of maintenance, which will be at least $25,000 per annum."

The proposition will be submitted to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

MAYOR VISITS NEW TOMBS.

Has a Plank-Walking Experience, but Thinks It a Fine Building.

The new Tombs prison wasformally inspected this morning by Mayor Seth Low and other officials of the city departments. The Mayor called at the Tombs about 10.30 o'clock, accompanied by Secretary Beebe. He was met by Commissioner of Corrections Hynes, Warden Van de Carr and Inspector of Buildings Jamer.

He then visited the Protestant chapel and met the Rev. H. C. Wendell, the chaplain, and started on his expedition to higher realms, making cursory inspections of the cells, the plumbing and the various complicated systems of locking the cell doors.

He then returned downstairs and inspected the Catholic chapel and met Mrs. G. Stanton Floyd-Jones, Mrs. Neilson, the women having charge there, and Rev. James E. Smith, the chaplain. On the ground floor he greeted Rev. Alexander P. Doyle, the missionary, whom he knew.

The Mayor was afterward escorted to the basement to inspect the boiler rooms and electric light plant. While the lights and heating are in working order the floors are not yet finished in the basement, and there was considerable water about. He had to walk a ten-inch plank for twenty feet to get from one room to another, and his arms were busy acting as a balancing rod as he did so.

At the further end of the plank he was unexpectedly introduced to Messrs. Horgan & Slattery, the architects of the building. Mayor Low had never met them, although he has, at frequent intervals, taken them to task for various plans drawn for city buildings.

The greeting was not noticeable for cordiality. He said:

"I think for the purpose it is an excellent building."

TWO FALL INTO CANAL.

Captain and Mate of Barge Are Rescued with Difficulty.

Eugene Dilman, the captain, and Charles Cooper, the mate, of the canal-boat Daniel Cotter, tied in the Morris Canal basin at the foot of Henderson street, Jersey City, fell into the basin when they returned to the boat to-day. Their cries for help were heard by Frank Foote, a boatman on a neighboring boat, who rescued them. The men were severely chilled and are under a doctor's care on the boat.
