CHINESE BRITONS WAIT ON RED TAPE

Rich British Citizens of Mongolian Parentage Detained Five Days on Steamer Pending Action at Washington.

THEY MAKE ANGRY PROTEST.

Both Declare that Chinese Exclusion Act, Under Which They Are Held, Does Not Apply to Those Born Under England's Flag.

On the tar-grimed deck of the steamship Grenada, lying at the foot of Sixth street, Long Island City, Samuel Hosang, one of the wealthiest residents of the British Island of Trinidad, has been held a prisoner of the immigration inspectors since the Grenada reached New York on Wednesday last.

Mr. Hosang is a British subject, born in Demerara, the capital of British Guiana, of Chinese parents, who were both British subjects. But on the ground that he is a Chinaman and that his landing would be a violation of the Chinese Exclusion Act, the immigration inspectors held him upon the Trinidad line's pier in Brooklyn, and though he showed a certificate from the American Consul at Trinidad testifying to his British birth, compelled him to return to the Grenada, which he had left.

With Mr. Hosang was Alfred Richards, born in Trinidad of Chinese and English parents, a registered chemist; and he, too, was forced to return to the steamship and wait the decision of the Secretary of the Treasury, to whom Mr. Hosang's credentials have been forwarded. If the Secretary regards the matter as one requiring haste Mr. Hosang and his fellow traveller may be released by telegraph. But there is a chance that it may not be reached until next week, when the Grenada sails.

Guard on Pier.

Meantime Mr. Hosang and Mr. Richards are confined to their cabin on the ship's deck, stifled by the fumes of asphalt, which formed the Grenada's cargo, and which is now being placed in barrels on the pier, while a guard stationed there by the immigration authorities stalks watchfully up and down the landing place to see that they do not escape.

The atmosphere of the dock is stifling, and an Evening World reporter who threaded the difficult path through tar barrels and over sacks in piles to the steamer found Mr. Hosang and Mr. Richards seated on the Grenada's deck, whither they had gone for a breath of air

Mr. Hosang, a well dressed, portly gentleman of fifty, whose speech is that of a well-bred Englishman, and whose features alone betray his Celestial origin, told the story of his wrongs with a judicial calm that Confucius himself might have envied, but Mr. Richards, who is much younger and not wholly of Chinese blood, spoke with great indignation of their treatment by the immigration inspectors.

"I am a British subject," said Mr. Hosang with the familiar inflation of chest that seems to belong with the phrase. "I was born in Demerara, of Chinese parents, who were British subjects. When I was very young my family moved to Trinidad. There I made my fortune, which is not inconsiderable. I did clerking of various kinds, saved a little money and went into the produce business for myself. I made more money and bought a cocoa plantation. Gradually, as my business increased, I bought others.

Would See America.

"I made up my mind some time ago to visit England and determined to break the journey by going via New York, so that I could see something of the great free America, of which I had heard so much.

"I had never been in China, and though I am not ashamed of my Chinese blood, I knew my rights as a British subject. I knew the Chinese Exclusion act could not apply to me, a British subject in transit to London. But to be perfectly certain that I would not be detained I went with Mr. Richards to the American Consul at Trinidad and we obtained from him a certificate setting forth our British birth and covering all the facts of the case. These certificates cost us $19 a piece. We had besides letters of introduction to prominent importers in New York, and you may imagine our surprise and indignation when after we had landed in Brooklyn and our baggage was an the dock, the captain of the Grenada approached us and told us we would be obliged to return to the ship. In vain we explained to the inspector, who came up after him, that we were going to sail for England next Tuesday and showed him our letters of introduction and our consular certificate. He said we could not land.

"As a matter of fact, we had already landed, and could not have been forced back on the Grenada. But had we refused to return the steamship company would have been obliged to pay the United States Government a fine of $2,000 apiece for each of us. And," Mr. Hosang added, with a slight smile, "as I am not altogether penniless, they could have recovered the amount from me on my return. Beside, I did not want to make trouble for the company. We returned to the Grenada and have been here ever since.

Could Not Aid.

"Mr. A. M. Seixas, the importer, of No. 82 Wall street, to whom we brought letters, came down to the pier to meet us. He found that we would not be allowed to land, and though he did everything in his power to change the decision of the authorities, we were kept as prisoners.

"Our only hope now is that when we hear from Washington they will allow us to be transferred to an outgoing steamship and pursue our journey to London. We came by way of New York merely to see something of America. We intended to go to Boston and Philadelphia and Chicago, but our passage to Europe has been engaged for next week, and perhaps we have seen enough of a country which has treated us so badly.

"When we get to London we may visit the Colonial Office and find out if our government cannot obtain for us redress for what we consider an outrage.

"I do not believe in the Chinese Exclusion act. The Chinese would make equally good citizens with the Italians or the Russian Jews or the Poles. Anyway, it does not apply to British subjects."

HOW A WOMAN NOVELIST WOULD BRING UP A BABY.

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—Lillian Bell, novelist and essayist, who acquired fame by her "Love Affairs of an Old Maid," has a baby girl, and mother-like, she is already sketching out the young lady's future career. If baby turns out as mother wishes, her life will lie along these lines. The novelist writes:

"I desire for my baby neither great beauty nor great wealth nor fame nor anything to mar her happiness. But give her a contented spirit, ministering hands and willing feet that her presence may radiate joy wherever she may be.

"May she care nothing for society, but may she love her neighbor as herself. Let her motto through life be 'noblesse oblige.'

"May she never know ambition nor seek to explore life's mountain tops or steeps, either through curiosity or great yearning, but may her little feet tread tranquilly life's common way.

"May she be cursed neither with brilliance nor wit, but give her a sense of humor, a tender tact, a gracious presence and only sufficient beauty to make her face lovely to her friends. May the public pass her by in utter ignorance and never know of the existence of my little maid. May she never seek her own, but let her minister always to others without thought of reward. Thus give her happiness in great measure, pressed down, shaken together and running over, and as her crowning glory may she know the supreme joy of a great and selfless love."

Baby's father, Arthur Hoy Bogue, is thirty years old, six years his wife's junior. The young lady has already received a proposal of marriage from an old bachelor in Manhattan who was deeply interested in the mother's analysis of an old maid's love story.

TEETH AND RING SAME AS SUICIDE

But Mrs. Albert G. Conger Is Not Woman Who Killed Herself in the Park at Bridgeport, Conn.

George Conger, of No. 1007 State street, Brooklyn, learned to-day that his sister-in-law, Mrs. Albert G. Conger, of Madison, Conn., whose supposed body he had identified in the morgue at Bridgeport, Conn., is alive and well.

From the description of a mysterious woman, who drank carbolic acid in Beardsley Park, Bridgeport, Conger thought the dead woman must be his brother Albert's wife, and he went to Connecticut and viewed the body. He learned that the woman had registered at the Tremont House as Mrs. Temple, of Boston, and had spoken to no one but a mysterious man who she met several times in the park.

Before she killed herself she removed every mark from her clothing that would lead to her identification. Conger said her features were the same as those of his sister-in-law. He further identified her by the initials in a wedding ring and by a peculiar plate in her set of false teeth.

Investigation at Madison, Conn., today proved that Mrs. Conger is alive. She bears a remarkable likeness to the dead woman, teeth and the initials in their wedding rings being identical.

BOY STABS HIS FATHER.

Because he had been scolded for pawning his watch, Joseph Crisonie, nineteen years old, of Orange, stabbed his father, Dominick Crisonie, Saturday night and fled. The wounded man will probably die.

TRIP THAT PAID.

Ten Miles to Get a Package of Postum.

Some sufferers won't turn over a hand to help themselves, but there are others to whom health is worth something. A German woman living in the country made a 10-mile trip to get a package of Postum. She was well repaid, for it brought health and happiness in return.

A translation of the good frau's letter says: "From a child I had been used to drinking coffee daily, but the longer I continued drinking it the worse I felt. I suffered with heart trouble, headaches and dizziness. Then I had such an uneasy feeling around my heart that I often thought death to be near.

"I gave up drinking coffee and tried hot water, but that did not taste good and I did not get well. Then I read some letters from people who had been helped by Postum Food Coffee, and I determined to try it.

"I had to go 10 miles to get a package, but I went. I prepared it carefully according to directions, and we have used it now in our family for nearly two years, drinking it twice a day. It agrees well with all of us. My heart and bowel troubles slowly but surely disappeared, it is seldom that I ever have a headache, my nerves are steady and strong again and I am otherwise strong and well. My husband has been lately cured of his sick headaches since we threw coffee out of our home and have used Postum." Name furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look in each package for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

40,000 MARCH IN ST. LOUIS.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 7.—Labor Day was celebrated in St. Louis with two parades, in which it is estimated that at least 40,000 men participated.

HUNT FOR BODIES OF Y. M. C. A. BOYS

Double Drowning in Hudson River Breaks Up Camp on the New Jersey Shore Opposite 125th Street.

THEIR SKIFF OVERLOADED.

Edson M. Baldwin and William Park, of Newark, Unable to Save Themselves When Small Boat Capsizes—Persons Near by Gave No Aid.

Search is being made for the bodies of Edson M. Baldwin and William Parks, the Newark Y. M. C. A. youths who were drowned in the Hudson River off One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street. The camp on the New Jersey shore at that point is broken up, and the sorrowing companions of the boys who were drowned have returned home.

A party of the younger members of the Newark Y. M. C. A. went to the river for an outing of three days on Saturday. Several of the boys had been in New York and had borrowed a boat on the Manhattan shore to row across the river. Early yesterday Baldwin and Parks, George Wood and Alexander Mitchell returned it. They brought along another skiff for the return trip.

The water was rough in mid-stream, and the four boys overweighted the boat. They became excited and the craft capsized. Parks went down almost immediately, as he could not swim. Mitchell swam toward him, but the current was strong and his effort was futile.

Wood reached the unturned boat and clung to it. Baldwin called that he was going to swim to the New York shore, and Mitchell, who had on his gymnasium suit, said he would float until help came. Just then a boat came in sight. The boys are certain the men in it saw them but turned away. A tug also came down the river, but did not answer the calls for help.

Mitchell and Wood watched Baldwin for a long time as he swam toward the shore, but at last he disappeared. He became exhausted and went down. After fifteen minutes another boat appeared. Wood called to the men to pick up Mitchell first, and both were finally taken ashore nearly exhausted.

The camp was soon broken up and the party that had anticipated such an enjoyable outing turned homeward with sad hearts.

World's Greatest Grocery.

Inauguration Tuesday of an Extraordinary Sale of Housecleaning Soaps and Preparations at Very Low Prices.

Also Many Special Offerings in Pure, Wholesome and Reliable Groceries.

BECAUSE of the fact that in all lines of Fruits, Vegetables, Cereals and Meats a lamentably short supply exists, there is every indication of a sharp advance in the price of food products in the near future.

With its customary foresight the Siegel Cooper Store anticipated this advance and bought enormously of all lines. Consequently we are able to serve our thousands of customers at present at moderate prices, but hasten to assure them that future prices cannot possibly be as low as those quoted for this event.

Everything is new, fresh and eminently desirable. The tremendous business we do is ample guarantee of that fact.

MAIL ORDERS SPECIALLY SOLICITED—Promptly filled. No substitution tolerated at this store.

Because of the nearness of the Housecleaning season, we specialize at lowered prices those articles most needed.

2x3 yards—value $8.50..... 6.98

We might add one or two dollars more to the value figures, and still be within the mark, for, at advance cost now in effect, they would be the prices at which most houses would sell.

Brussels Rugs give splendid wear, don't gather dust, sweep off easily, and for all round service and looks seem to be great favorites with housekeepers.

Designs vary from small figures to large Medallions. Not too rich for dining rooms—rich enough for parlors.
