WITNESSES ON STAND IN BEHALF OF HAYWOOD

man she had seen in the vicinity of the house in Cripple Creek several times. She was not cross-examined and gave way to Mrs. Alice Fitzhugh, who succeeded Mrs. King as proprietress of the Star rooming house. Mrs. Fitzhugh said that Detective Sterling continued to live in the house for some time after she took charge. She saw Harry Orchard go to Sterling's room at least a dozen times. She also saw McKinney, the man accused of the spike pulling, in Sterling's room, following his release from jail.

On cross-examination Mrs. Fitzhugh said she kept no record of her roomers and was testifying wholly from memory.

C. W. Aller of Leadville, Colo., formerly a telegraph operator in the employ of the Florence & Cripple Creek Railway, was the next witness. He told of seeing Harry Orchard, K. C. Sterling and D. C. Scott, a detective of the railway company, together in Scott's room at the Cripple Creek depot. He saw him there twice before the attempted train wreck

Could Not Fix Dates.

On cross-examination Aller said he could not remember what time of day it was that Orchard first came to the depot. He did not know whether Scott and Orchard had ever met before. Aller said his recollection was not very clear as the matter had made no particular impression upon him.

Aller said he could not remember the dates of Orchard's visits even as to the approximate time with reference to the train wreck.

"You are just guessing about the matter, aren't you?" said Attorney Hawley, for the state, "and you are not sure about anything?"

"I am only sure about it being Orchard," replied the witness.

Two of the next witnesses desired by the defense were not in the room and an early luncheon adjournment until 1:30 p. m. was ordered.

Conductor on the Stand.

Ira Blizard of Cripple Creek, a railway conductor and yard master, was called to the stand as the first witness after recess.

"Did you testify before the United States commission appointed to investigate the Cripple Creek disturbances?" asked Mr. Darrow.

"No, sir," replied the witness.

"Do you know K. C. Sterling?"

"Yes, sir."

The witness said he understood Sterling was in the employ of the Mine Owners' association and he had communicated with Sterling at the headquarters of the association. Blizard was contracting freight agent of the Florence & Cripple Creek railroad at the time of the Independence depot explosion. He immediately went there and saw the wire and chair rung which served as clues.

The defense claims the Independence depot was an all but abandoned affair and that its destruction might have been planned by others than the Western Federation of Miners.

"What sort of a depot was it?" asked Mr. Darrow of the witness.

"The depot was in good condition," replied Blizard. "It was a nice, up-to-date station with a good waiting room. It had a platform in front of it."

Bloodhounds on the Trail.

The witness next told of putting the bloodhounds on the trail of the men who were supposed to have perpetrated the outrage.

The prosecution objected on the ground that the dogs had not been qualified, but Judge Wood allowed the evidence to go in. Blizard detailed the route taken by the dogs, who went toward Colorado Springs. At a water tank Blizard called up K. C. Sterling on the telephone.

Senator Borah objected to any conversation between the witness as hearsay. He declared that the defense had the right to show that some one other than Orchard blew up the Independence depot if it could, but the evidence must be competent and not hearsay.

Charge Against Sterling.

"We expect to show," said Attorney Darrow in reply, "that K. C. Sterling was responsible for the blowing up of the depot, that he knew all about it and we expect to connect Orchard with the Mine Owners' association."

"Upon that showing the evidence will be admitted," declared Judge Wood.

"I called Sterling up and told him the dogs were on a good, safe trail. He said: 'Call the dogs off; we know who did it.' I called the dogs off. Some days later I saw Sterling and he told me the reason he called the dogs off was that he knew who caused the explosion; that it was Steve Adams."

On cross-examination Blizard said he did not know either Orchard or Adams, that Sterling told him nothing about Adams other than that he was the man who blew up the depot

Blizard declared that the Independence depot was used as a stopping place, but there was no ticket agent there.

Dr. McGee's Testimony.

Blizard was followed on the stand by Dr. A. L. McGee, formerly a physician and surgeon in the Coeur d'Alenes and is now a mining broker.

"Where do you live?" asked Darrow.

"On Coeur d'Alene lake."

"Right in the water?"

"No—on a boat," replied the witness amid laughter.

He said he had known Orchard since 1897. Orchard delivered milk to his house. The day of the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mill explosion at Wardner, Dr. McGee said he thought he saw Orchard at Mullan, eighteen miles distant.

"I am not sure of it, but if I am not mistaken I saw Orchard playing poker that day in a saloon or cigar store," said the witness.

Dr. McGee also related a conversation he had with Orchard in the Coeur d'Alenes in 1904. Orchard, according to the witness, said he was "spotting" for a detective agency.

On cross-examination the witness said he saw Orchard at the depot one day at Wallace, Ida., talking to a man named Cunningham. Orchard claims he gave the Peabody bomb to a man named Cunningham who said he wanted to blow up a "scab" boarding house. The witness positively fixed the time of his conversation with Orchard as the latter part of July, 1904.

D. C. Scott, who came to Boise in behalf of the state, was called to the stand to establish the identity of K. C. Sterling, who it was claimed was a secret service man in the employ of the Mine Owners' association in 1903 and several years thereafter.

Next came F. R. Redd, a miner, now living at Goldfield, Nev., but formerly of Cripple Creek. Redd said he had known Harry Orchard a long while. In union hall No. 40 at Cripple Creek in 1903 he said he had a conversation with Orchard in which the latter called Governor Steunenberg hard names and said he was responsible for his (Orchard's) poverty and that he would get even with the governor.

Objection by the State.

Mr. Darrow here precipitated a heated and lengthy discussion by asking the witness to detail his personal experiences in the Cripple Creek labor troubles. Mr. Hawley voiced for the prosecution a strenuous objection, declaring the labor war in Colorado had nothing to do with the inquiry into the murder of Governor Steunenberg. He declared the question was asked for the purpose of possibly arousing sympathy by showing the Colorado militia may have done things it ought not have done.

Mr. Darrow in reply asserted that the prosecution could not pick out of the history of the past few years the isolated incidents it wanted to place before the jury and then shut the defense off in its purpose to present the other side of the case and show who was responsible for the acts complained of. Mr. Darrow once more made the declaration that if Orchard committed the crimes he has confessed to he acted for some one other than the Western Federation of Miners. The whole history of the labor struggles associated with the Western Federation of Miners could alone locate the responsibility, declared the attorney.

"Ever since this strife began between the Mine Owners and the Western Federation of Miners the mine owners have been in the aggressive," concluded Mr. Darrow. "They determined to get rid of this organization and it is only by taking both sides that the truth can be arrived at."

Senator Borah entered the argument to suggest that the defense to open up the labor troubles in Colorado must have a specific theory in view—some one to connect the matter with.

Witness Allowed to Testify.

Judge Wood allowed the witness to give his experience. Redd said he was arrested by several deputies on June 7, 1904, and taken aboard a train to Cripple Creek, where he was put in the bull-pen and held four days without trial and without any charge being laid against him.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hawley, Redd said he was a member of the Western Federation of Miners and had been a member since the organization was formed. It was the day after the Independence depot explosion that he was taken to the bull-pen.

Military officers were in control at the pull-pen, where there were 150 men confined when the witness was arrested. Asked if he did not know that the military were merely investigating the depot matter and that as soon as they learned a man had nothing to do with it he was allowed to go, Redd said he knew nothing about it at all. The witness was at Clyde, Colo., when arrested. He said he had never seen Steve Adams until he came to Boise.

Redd was released by the colonel commanding the bull-pen, who told him on leaving that if he was molested to let him know and he would see that he was released. The witness said the colonel also advised him that it might be a good plan to leave Cripple Creek while existing conditions prevailed. He left two days later and has not been back since.

Threat to Kill Steunenberg.

Charles A. Sullivan, watchman at the Brown hotel, Denver, and a former miner in the Cripple Creek district, followed Redd on the witness stand. Sullivan said he knew Orchard at Cripple Creek in 1902. He then detailed the statement Orchard is alleged to have made to him and which Orchard denied this morning. Sullivan said Orchard declared that if it had not been for Steunenberg he would be rich; that Steunenberg ought to be killed, would be killed and if he was not killed, he (Orchard) would kill him.

Sullivan was cross-examined by Senator Borah. He said he had known Haywood since 1903 and was also acquainted with Moyer, though he had never met Pettibone. He joined the Western Federation of Miners in 1902 and he was acquainted with Bill Easterly, W. F. Davis, Sherman Parker, Bill Aikman, Art Baston and Ed Minster. The witness met Orchard in July, 1902. The conversation as to Governor Steunenberg occurred in September and there was no one present but the witness and Orchard.

Repeated Several Times.

Sullivan declared that Orchard repeated his denunciation of Steunenberg several times at the breakfast table, but there was never anyone else present. He had never communicated what Orchard had said to anybody until after the trial had started. He then told an acquaintance who brought one of the attorneys for the defense to see him.

Orchard told the witness he was at Wardner when the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mill was blown up. He did not say he had helped to do the job.

Court here adjourned until 9:30 a. m. tomorrow.

OLD BUILDING TUMBLES DOWN

Another Tenement House Horror in the Italian Quarter of New York.

SEVEN PERSONS KILLED

HEROISM ON THE PART OF THE FIREMEN.

New York, June 25.—Seven persons, six of them members of one Italian family, were killed early today in the collapse of a ramshackle tenement in the downtown Italian quarter. Three other members of the same family, including the father and mother, are in a hospital, painfully injured, but will recover. There were some exciting scenes immediately following the accident, one of which was the rescue of an old man from a two-foot ledge, forty feet from the ground, this portion of the fallen building having adhered to the adjoining structure long enough to permit the firement to get to the scene, raise a ladder and take the man, Jacob Reigler, safely to the ground. Then it also fell into the ruins.

Danger Existed Long.

The collapsed building was a four-story affair, built over fifty years ago, and was located at the corner of Walker and Lafayette streets. It belonged to the Mose Taylor estate, and for some time has been in a dangerous condition because of excavations for a new building on the adjoining premises. It had been shored up, but its weakened condition caused it to fall in at 2 o'clock. Most of the tenants, warned by ominous creaking, fled a few minutes before it collapsed.

The dead were buried under tons of debris, and it was not until the firemen and volunteers had worked for four hours that their bodies were recovered.

Contractor Arrested.

George B. Lumenthal, the contractor who had charge of the recent repairs and shoring up of the building, was arrested and charged with homicide.

That many more persons did not lose their lives in the collapse of the old building was due to two of the younger occupants of the house having attended an Italian celebration last night. The boys reached home shortly before 2 o'clock this morning and, warned by the severe shaking and creaking of the house, ran through the building and warned the sleeping tenants of the impending danger. Dozens of persons ran into the street in their night clothes, and many of them had scarcely gained the street before the crash came. Five minutes later scores of firemen were at work tearing away at the piles of brick and broken timbers in the hope that some of the buried persons might be taken out alive. Over them tottered the remaining wall of the Lafayette extension, cracked in two places and threatening to fall upon the rescuers every moment.

Thought First of His Sister.

After a few minutes' tearing at the timbers and bricks, the firemen heard a low moan and in the dim light saw a man's hand moving convulsively. The men caught it and the man under the ruins murmured: "For God's sake, save my sister."

It was George Torchino, six of whose brothers and sisters perished in the ruins.

The firemen dragged away the debris trying to free the young man. Just then a watcher cried, "Look out, boys, run; she's falling." The fragment of wall tottered and fell, throwing up a cloud of dust and concealing from view of the anxious crowd in the street the firemen, whom everyone supposed were buried. Only Battalion Chief Galvin and Ladderman Samet were badly hurt. The others went back to digging in spite of their cuts and bruises.

Almost a Miracle.

It was thought that George Torchino would be killed by the second fall of brick, but his life was saved by a strange happening. Part of the wooden roof that had remained upon the wall fell directly over the hole which the firemen had opened to him, and the bricks and timbers rained harmlessly on this canopy. The firemen pulled it off and soon had Torchino out. A few moments later the firemen took out Torchino's father and mother. They were the last to be taken out of the wreck alive. They are suffering from wounded heads and contusions on their bodies.

LOGAN WILL CELEBRATE

Independence Day Will Be Enjoyed Amid Usual Festivities—Mat Thomas Will Speak.

Logan, June 25.—The Fourth of July celebration committee appointed some time ago announced the program for the day this afternoon. There will be the usual features, such as firing of early salute, parade, etc. At the meeting in the tabernacle there will be a fine musical program rendered, and Mathonihah Thomas of Salt Lake will deliver the oration.

The Oaks baseball team of this city and the Peterboro team are to play for a purse of $100, and later horse races are to be run. Five hundred dollars in prizes will be put up by the Driving Park association. A five-mile walking match, and a tug-of-war between the Danes and Swedes of the city are among the other features to be provided. Since The Herald's information as to the reputation of Kid Bernstein the desire for the boxing bout has very largely disappeared.

The people of the Hyrum stake held their quarterly conference at Paradise yesterday. B. H. Roberts and others were present. Two of the important things done were the releasing of Samuel Oldham as bishop of Paradise, and the releasing of Bishop N. J. Nielsen of the Hyrum Third ward. Mr. Oldham is one of the best known citizens of the county and has been a bishop for many years. He is succeeded by P. O. Hansen, and Bishop Nielsen is succeeded by James J. Facer.

The proposition to build a sewerage system in Logan has been killed, 21,731 feet out of about 28,000 feet having protested against the proposed tax for that purpose. The system was to have cost approximately $45,000, and a great many business men felt that because of other improvements causing a large tax levy, the sewer proposition would be a back-breaking burden. Then, too, the assessment fixed was glaringly unequal, and a great many men have but scant faith in the business ability of the present city administration.

ENTIRE CREW LOST.

Bellingham, Wash., June 25.—A special to the Herald from Vancouver, B. C., says: The tug Constance, Captain Neilsen, and crew of six men, all of New Westminster, has been lost at Rivers' Inlet, 300 miles up the coast, and every member of the crew drowned. No particulars have been received.

OFFICERS ARRESTED.

London, June 25.—A dispatch to a news agency from Odessa says it is authoritatively reported that sixty officers of the southern military district, several of them connected with the Odessa garrison, have been arrested.

LIZZIE LOVING TOOK BUGGY RIDE

Drank Whisky Out of a Flask Which Her Escort Had Taken Along.

USUAL RESULT FOLLOWED

FATHER ON TRIAL FOR KILLING YOUNG MAN.

Houston, Va., June 25.—Between stifling sobs, with tears streaming from her eyes, Miss Elizabeth Loving, who has occupied the center of the stage in the trial of her father, William C. Loving, for the murder of Theodore Estes, told on the witness stand here today the story of her alleged ruin by the young man whom her parent shot down. It was the same story she said she told to her father on the morning of the tragedy, and which culminated in his hunting down and slaying the man whom she charged with perpetrating the deed.

Gave Her Whisky.

Estes, she said, had given her a drink of whisky from a flask he had in his pocket, while they were out buggy riding on the afternoon prior to the killing. After taking the drink, she declared, she immediately began to feel dizzy and her head "spinned around" as if she had been given some powerful drug. In this condition, and despite her protests, she declared her escort drove her over an unfrequented road and, despite her screams, outraged her. Exhausted by the struggle, and her mental faculties rendered incapable from the stimulant, she declared that she recalled nothing more until she regained her senses while in bed late that night at the home of County Clerk E. L. Kidd, where she had been visiting Miss Kidd.

Confessed to Her Father.

She testified that on the following morning when her father asked for the cause of her being brought to the home of Mr. Kidd in an unconscious and drugged condition, she related to him on bended knees the same story she made today. It was this recital, declared the defense, which so affected the mind of Judge Loving that it impelled him to commit a crime which, according to his statement, could have been prevented by no power "except God Almighty."

Miss Loving admitted that she had taken two drinks with young Estes during the drive, the first one being while at Estes' store.

Dr. William Tunstall of Lovingston, who saw Judge Loving before and after the killing, testified that he thought Loving committed the crime while insane. Loving, he said, went on frequent debauches, ending in delirium tremens.

The witness stated that during the last few years Judge Loving had become very disagreeable and intolerant, although some years ago he was pleasant and affable.

When near the Rio Grande Western depot the horse took fright and ran away, throwing Mrs. Owens to the ground. The timely assistance of Ray Malmstrom prevented a very serious condition of affairs as he caught the animal just as Mrs. Owens struck the ground, thus preventing the animal from running farther. The injured woman was carried into the home of J. J. Williams, where the care of a doctor was necessary. She is now resting as easy as can be expected.

Mrs. Walter Diamond and her two children have arrived safely in England, where they intend to visit until Mr. Diamond is released from his missionary labors.

ALBERT LOSES INFLUENCE

Leader of the Winegrowers' Revolt Savagely Attacked During Meeting at Argelliers.

Argelliers, France, June 25.—Mercelin Albert, the leader of the winegrowers' movement, appears to have suffered a considerable diminution in influence. His speech this afternon before a big meeting of citizens, in which he described his interview with Premier Clemenceau at Paris on Sunday, sounded curiously like a defense. Although he was greeted by cheers from some 3,000 people, he frequently was interrupted. The "apostle" addressed his followers from the roof of a house. He related in detail the incidents of his trip to Paris and his reception by the premier, who received him as a friend and pressed upon him 100 francs to pay his passage back.

Albert indignantly denied that he wept in the presence of the premier. M. Clemenceau gave him this message:

"Will you go back and assemble the federated committee and tell them that I will not disarm until they abandon their illegal attitude?"

After reflection, Albert said, he undertook the mission and would now leave it to the delegates of the committees to decide what course should be taken. If they were for continuing the movement he would go to Montpellier and surrender.

After a stormy discussion lasting more than two hours, during which Albert was savagely attacked, the delegates decided to continue the struggle with unabated vigor. It was further decided to draw up a statement setting forth the minimum demands.

Calm now prevails throughout the department.

SECTION THREE OF DINGLEY ACT

Ambassador Jusserand Will Return to France to Aid in Making Tariff Agreement.

Washington, June 25.—Not a treaty but an "agreement" under section 3 of the Dingley act, is the purpose of the approaching visit to France of Ambassador Jusserand. For several weeks before Secretary Root's departure for his summer home he had been in frequent conference with the ambassador relative to the tariff relations of the two countries. The French government had taken notice of the conclusion of the German-American arrangement and was prompt in expressing a desire to share in the benefits thereof. The state department had announced that it was prepared to make similar arrangements with other countries where it was possible to reach an arrangement in the mutual reduction of duties.

Sparkling Wines Excepted.

America already has a tariff arrangement under section 3 with France covering the whole list of goods on which this country can grant a 25 per cent reduction of duty, with the single exception of champagnes, or sparkling wines. The French government is understood to desire to secure this last remaining favor upon the ground that a similar concession had been granted to Germany. But the factor of "equivalence" is lacking in this case, for the trade in German champagne is trifling and the loss of revenue to the American treasury in that case is insignificant. Upon the other hand, the champagne imports into the United States from France last year were valued at over $18,000,000, and a reduction of duty in that case would become very important.

Reciprocity Suggestions.

Therefore it is believed to be the intention of this government to suggest that, in consideration of granting a reduction in the duty on sparkling wines, France will make some substantial concessions in removing restrictions on the importation into France of some American staples and of reducing duties on others and still further of refraining from applying certain projected and excessive duties now pending before the French parliament. M. Jusserand knows generally what the American government wants and will doubtless acquaint the foreign office with the scheme, but detailed information is for the present withheld from the public.
