BOER WAR DRAMA BIG AND STIRRING

"The Best of Friends" Brings Stupendous Scenes to Academy Stage and Only Its British Sentiment Misses Fire.

QUEEN'S TOAST IS EFFECTIVE

Lionel Barrymore Makes Character of Boer General Stand Out—Agnes Booth Returns to the Stage and Is Welcome.

The Boer war was a long time coming, but with the kindly assistance of Charles Frohman it finally reached here last night and plumped itself down on the Academy of Music stage—which is big enough for pretty nearly anything.

There was lots that was interesting and more that was picturesque in "The Best of Friends," but at the same time this big, booming war drama rather missed fire so far as exciting patriotic sentiment was concerned. Scenes which doubtless set London audiences aflame with national spirit were received in Fourteenth street with respectful, neutral silence. There were signs of sympathy for the bewhiskered Boers, but when it came to whooping 'er up for Britannia, the audience didn't whoop for sour apples.

Despite the conservative attitude of the audience, however, the splendid spirit and fine effectiveness of a scene where a banqueting regiment of dashingly uniformed English Yeomanry stood on their chairs and, drinking a toast to the Queen, dashed their empty glasses to the floor, sending broken crystal in every direction, won admiration and applause.

Scenes Are Gigantic.

There were other striking scenes, nearly all on a gigantic scale, which alone should insure the success of the play in this country. One of these was a country house setting as big and green as all outdoors.

The piece started off with two of the characters riding in on horseback; next there was a swarm of Oxford students, and then came a circus parade with band-wagon, animal cages, floats and other cherished reminders of our sawdust days.

And who should ride in on the grandest of these floats but the long-absent Agnes Booth rigged up as Britannia, and seeming every inch a goddess until she opened her mouth and let flow a flood of cockney. It was good to see this excellent actress back again, though, it must be admitted, somewhat of a surprise to have her return in such a guise. However, she was wholesome and amusing and happily successful in her handling of the part.

Katherine Grey started in as a circus girl with a broken collarbone and wound up as the long-lost granddaughter of a duke with a dowry. She furnished the excuse for the plot, a girl loved by friends who became deadly rivals and went through several acts simply aching to wipe each other off the centre of the stage.

Barrymore's Success.

In the acting sense, young Lionel Barrymore, disguised as a Boer general of sixty-odd, dominated the play. His own mother wouldn't have known him. He was gray and grim, with a suggestion of Svengali in his make-up. He seemed and sounded old. He spoke slowly and solemnly. He was a walking tradition of the Transvaal, and when final defeat and surrender came, and the old warrior fell dead at sight of the English flag raised above the hut where the last handful of fighting farmers was huddled, and they covered him over with the flag that was carried in vain, the thud struck home to every heart.

"Well done, good and faithful actor," was a sentiment generally shared.

There were a score or more well-played characters, so many in fact that the circus episode suggested the fitness of a ringmaster to announce to the audience, "Ladies and gentlemen, I take pleasure in next introducing," and so forth.

Conscientious persons who take the theatre seriously were poring over their programmes half the time trying to figure out who this one and that one was.

It really didn't matter much who most of them were, for their identities were not of much more importance than the identities of performers in a three-ring circus.

The play is chiefly notable for its stupendous, well-staged pictures, which make it one of the biggest melodramas ever produced here.

"The Best of Friends" must part, of course, but there is every reason for believing that the parting from the Academy is a long way off. C. D.

ACTRESS PLAYED ON, BROTHER WAS DEAD

News Was Kept from Miss Ada Rehan When She Opened Her Season in Atlantic City Monday Night.

FEARED HER COLLAPSE.

Every Effort Will Be Made to Keep Sad Tidings from Her, as She Might Conclude to at Once End Her Tour.

Unless her secretary succeeds in keeping the newspapers from her Miss Ada Rehan probably will learn to-day that her brother, William Crehan, was lying dead at her home on Monday night last when she opened her season at Atlantic City.

Crehan died of heart disease at Miss Rehan's home, No. 164 West Ninety-third street. The news was kept from her for fear the shock would upset her and cause her to give up the tour that had been planned for her this season. Crehan was buried yesterday and it is the intention of the family and Miss Rehan's managers to keep the news from her as long as possible.

The death of her mother three years ago was a severe shock to the actress, and the death of her brother, Arthur, following, aggravated the illness from which she was suffering. Plans were made some months ago for a tour in which Miss Rehan would star jointly with Otis Skinner in "The Taming of the Shrew." The tour opened Monday night at Atlantic City.

When William Crehan died it was feared that if the news were broken to Miss Rehan she would not play, and might give up her stage career entirely. This would have meant the disbanding of the company and the throwing of fifty persons out of engagements. It is thought that if the news can be kept from her for a week or two she will have become so interested in her tour that the effect of the shock will be lessened, and she will go on with the company.

Miss Rehan has a woman companion who will protect her from any conversation that might reveal the fact of her brother's death, and the members of the company have been warned not to refer to the subject in her presence. All newspapers will be kept from her, and her mail is opened by a secretary, who will withhold all letters that refer to the brother's death.

Crehan was fifty-nine years of age at the time of his death, and for twenty years had been business manager for Oliver Dowd Byron. Besides Miss Rehan he had as sisters Mrs. Oliver Dowd Byron and Mrs. Hattie Russell.

SPEEDING AUTO WAS ABLAZE.

Occupants Didn't Know of Danger Until Warned by Motorman.

Passengers on a Nostrand avenue car of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company's line were astonished when crossing the Eastern Parkway early to-day to see a big automobile ablaze, while the five occupants were unconscious of their danger.

Frank Kelly, the motorman, yelled to the chauffeur, and when the machine came to a stop helped put out the flames, which enveloped all the lower part of the auto. The three women passengers were badly frightened, but were lifted out by their escorts without accident.

The owner of the machine refused to give his name, but handed the motorman a bank note. The machinery of the auto had not been seriously injured, and after some repairs the machine went on.

Burglars Blew Open Safe and Got Away with Money and Stamps.

SUPERIOR, Wis., Oct. 21.—Burglars who broke into the post-office here early to-day got a rich haul, they carrying away $10,000 in money and stamps.

The gang blew open the safe, badly damaging the office. They worked quickly and had secured their plunder before they were discovered.

Seven Sutherland Sisters' HAIR GROWER and SCALP CLEANER

The Standard of All Hair Preparations.

Have stood the test of time. For nearly a quarter century they have done noble work in the restoration of decaying, harsh and lustreless hair. They possess vital, health-giving principals lacking in all other hair preparations. They are purely vegetable, absolutely harmless, and contain nothing but what is good for the hair and scalp. They will not grow hair on a billiard ball, nor will they restore hair on the heads of aged persons to youthful color, but where there exists a particle of life in the hair roots, they will bring forth an abundance of luxurious, healthy hair.

The Scalp Cleaner

Is a fine powder, which, when dissolved in warm water, makes a delightful, creamy, lathering fluid, that cleanses the hair thoroughly, removes dandruff and all other hindrances to healthy hair growth.

It is antiseptic, purifying and destroys all germs. It is far superior and more economical than good soap, or any other shampoo preparation. One shampoo with Seven Sutherland Sisters' "Scalp Cleaner" will demonstrate these facts.

The Hair Grower

Is a soothing, health-giving tonic, that renews life and vigor to non-growing hair, and makes and keeps the hair soft and lustrous. By using the "Hair Grower" after each shampoo with the "Scalp Cleaner," the hair roots are invigorated and life is once more established. Microbes and dandruff cannot exist in its presence. A daily application of the "Hair Grower" for a short time will insure a continuous good condition of the hair and scalp.

Extracts from a Few Commendatory Letters.

It would require more sheets than this paper contains to publish the letters of commendation received as to the merits of the Seven Sutherland Sisters Scalp Cleaner and Hair Grower; but the fact that the demand for these meritorious preparations is yearly increasing, and the fact that over 28,000 dealers in the United States alone are selling these goods must be evidence of their popularity and real worth.

A perusal of the following will give you an idea of what may be expected from the use of Seven Sutherland Sisters famous preparations:

Miss Lisetta Regina Mariani, of Los Angeles, Cal., writes: "It gives me great pleasure to state that all of your preparations are simply perfect."

Mrs. Crissman, wife of the U. P. ticket agent at Boise City, Idaho, says: "I have used the 'Scalp Cleaner' for six years, for myself and family, and find it excellent for removing dandruff and for preserving the color of the hair."

Mr. N. N. Knight, of Cambridgeport, Mass., is a strong advocate of "Seven Sutherland Sisters 'Hair Grower.'" He says: "I have tried all the most popular preparations, but your 'Hair Grower' does the work. It stops the hair falling out, and also stops the irritating sensation that all will admit is a constant trouble."

Miss L. K. Talbert, Louisville Hotel, Louisville, Ky., says: "I can, with pleasure and gratitude, say I used at three different times your Hair Grower and Scalp Cleaner, and each time they arrested the falling out of my hair."

Mrs. Ida Chittenden, of Sedan, Kan., writes: "Three years ago my hair began to fall out. I was induced to try the Seven Sutherland Sisters preparations. The falling was quickly and permanently stopped and without destroying the natural curling. The growth of my hair increased."

Mrs. L. Aylsworth, 3136 Harrison st., Kansas City, Mo., says: "I have been benefitted greatly. The itching has entirely disappeared. The Scalp Cleaner I cannot praise enough. Would be glad to answer any question in reference to either of the remedies."

Another Kansas City lady, Mrs. D. R. Meridith, 500 Holmes st., says: "Three years ago, when I began using Seven Sutherland Sisters Hair Grower, I was entirely bald. Now I have a heavy growth of hair and attribute it to the Hair Grower, of which I cannot say too great praise."

Mrs. N. J. Bell, of University Place, Neb., writes: "My hair had never grown above the temples, but by the use of your 'Grower' my hair is coming in nicely. My hair is coming in on what was before quite a bare spot. I recommend the remedies as being all claimed for them."

There are hundreds—yes, thousands—of letters from thankful people from all parts of the country highly praising the merits of the Seven Sutherland Sisters Hair Grower and Scalp Cleaner, but the best way to test the merits is to try them. You will not be disappointed.

WIFE SEEKS FOR MISSING HUSBAND

Unable to Find Any Trace of E. J. Collier, Who Disappeared from His Home More Than a Week Ago.

A general alarm has been sent out in Brooklyn for Edward J. Collier, of No. 324 South Second street. A week ago last Monday he disappeared from home and has not been seen or heard of since by any of his friends.

Mrs. Minnie Collier, his wife, reported the strange disappearance to the police to-day. She said: "My husband is an engineer in the employ of the Butterick Pattern Company, Manhattan. A week ago last Monday he left the house to go to his work. As he did not return home that night I went to the office the next day and was told he had not put in an appearance Monday.

"He was a man of domestic habits, was not given to drink and I cannot understand what could have happened to him. It is possible he met with some accident and is in a hospital, but I have visited many and have been unable to find him."

The police are making an exhausting search for Collier.

CONCERT PLEASES AUDIENCE

Siegel-Cooper Co. Gives First of Its Invitation Recitals.

The seating capacity of the Siegel-Cooper Company's new music auditorium was taxed to its utmost last night at the first series of the invitation recitals. The programme was varied and pleasing. The artists included: Evan Williams, tenor; Miss Mary Louise Clary, contralto; Samuel M. Fabian, pianist, and Michael Banner, violinist. Miss A. Doris Ward was the accompanist.

Mr. Williams's numbers included Gounod's "Queen of Sheba" and some of Charles Hawley's ballads. His treatment of "Greeting" and "Sleep" was especially well done.

Miss Clary's rendition of the aria, "O Mio Fernando" from "La Favorita," was sung in telling bravura, and some songs of d'Ardelot, Wallace and Roeckel elicited applause which showed genuine appreciation.

The recital last night will be followed by three others at which the Dannreuther uQartet, the Greinauer Trio and other artists prominent in musical circles will be heard. ***

SEEK A FATHER LOST 25 YEARS

Son and Daughter Hunt for John J. Sullivan, Reputed to Be Now a Wealthy Silversmith Living in South.

Joseph A. Sullivan and his sister, Mrs. Mamie Tobin, have asked The Evening World to help them find their father, from whom they have been parted for twenty-five years.

The father is John J. Sullivan. He is about sixty years old and was formerly a silversmith. He is believed to be somewhere in the South and is said to be wealthy.

Joseph Sullivan is an actor who was lately with George W. Lederer's "Jersey Lily" company. Up to a few days ago he believed his father had died years ago.

Twenty-five years ago the Sullivans were living in Elizabeth, N. J., having moved there from New York, where the two children were born. The father disappeared and the mother never spoke of him to the children up to the time of her death, which occurred eight years ago. They believed the father dead until a few days ago, when a relative informed Joseph Sullivan that he had seen his father some time ago in Richmond, Va.

This relative informed young Sullivan that his father had asked for the children and had said that he wished he could see them. The relative did not get his address and letters to Richmond brought no reply. No trace of the father has been found by either the son or daughter since this communication.

Joseph Sullivan lives at No. 119 West Thirteenth street. His sister, Mrs. Mamie Tobin, lives at No. 239 Norfolk street, Newark, N. J.

NOT TO TOUCH AT PLYMOUTH.

Clement Griscom, jr., said to-day that there is absolutely no truth in the report cabled from London that ships of the American line will begin early in December making stops at Plymouth. The only change contemplated in the service is from Wednesday to Saturday sailings, which will go into effect on Nov. 7.

GIRL BIGAMIST TELLS HER STORY

Maggie Familton Explains to Friends Circumstances of Marriage to One Man One Day and Another the Next.

To her friends in Whitestone, L. I., to-day Maggie Familton, the young girl who married one man one day and another man the next, told the story of her double marriage, exposing the workings of her heart and the reasons for her act. As both marriages occurred in Manhattan there is every likelihood that the scene of trial will shift from the Long Island village to this city.

The young girl returned to her home last night and all her old-time friends were gathered in her house to give her a welcome and express their sympathy. It was very much like all the world loving a lover to Maggie Familton. Her homecoming seemed in the nature of a triumph.

Judge Healy, of Flushing, after deciding that the case was not in his jurisdiction, paroled the girl in the custody of her father on $500 bail. District-Attorney Griggs will determine whether he has any right in the premises to hold the girl, and if not he will transfer the case to the District-Attorney's office of the Borough of Manhattan.

The Girl's Own Story.

This is Maggie Familton's own story: "I have known Frederick Kirkman a long time. I promised to marry him six months ago and at that time he bought a ring to seal our betrothal. Then I met George Roach, with whom I immediately became infatuated. Roach is a soldier and he went right into my heart."

The girl then told of her meetings with the young naval man stationed at Willet's Point, drawing comparisons between the two suitors, all of which redounded to the credit of the one who was in the country's service.

Continuing her story Maggie said: "Kirkman then insisted upon our marriage. On Sunday, Oct. 12, he lay in wait for me at the Long Island station with a revolver. He showed me the pistol and said that I must marry him. That very day I had read of a man shooting a girl because she did not marry him at his bidding. I was frightened that he might do the same. So I consented after the threat to kill me and we went to New York. I thought that afterwards I could have the marriage annulled without any trouble. We were married.

Wanted to Keep Roach.

"Then I feared that Roach, whom I deeply loved, would hear of my marriage and I would lose him. If he heard of it I knew that he would throw me over. If we were married first, then I could tell him and have the marriage with Kirkman annulled. After the ceremony was performed I went home, as I said before.

"There I met Roach, who had come from Willets Point to see me. He talked marriage, insisting that we be made one the following day. My infatuation was so great and my fear that he would discover the first marriage forced my consent. I came to New York with him on a Monday and then the second marriage was performed."
