ODELL BELIEVED TO BE READY TO THROW BLACK OVERBOARD

Stormy Scene at a Meeting Between Lou Payn and the Governor in Which the State Boss Was Asked to Come Out Flat-Footed for Ex-Governor.

Odell Is Accused of Having Broken His Promise, and Suspected of Planning the Re-election of Depew or to Secure the Senatorship for Himself.

Consternation was thrown into the camp of Frank S. Black to-day by the report that Gov. Odell had deserted the long, lean statesman from Troy, and would either throw his strength to Depew or reserve it for himself in the Senatorial fight. A committee was hurriedly dispatched to the Republican Club to force the Governor to commit himself one way or the other, but the Governor refused to say what he would do.

There was a scene in the Republican Club between Gov. Odell and Lou Payn. The statesman from Columbia, is said to have wawiked the boor and waved his arms and used language of a shocking character in trying to oonvince the Governor that it was his duty to declare for the candidacy of Mr. Black. Gov. Odell is something of a language \ penser himself, and house servants talk in awed whispers of the controversey.

Lou Payn, who is Mr. Black's chief Yeutenant and guide in his fight for the Senatorship to succeed Chauncey M. Depew, was the head of the committee. His immediate helpers were George W. Aldridge and Senator Brackett. Other high-minded statesmen from the rural districts filled out the committee, which was made up at Mr. Boack's headquarters in the Hotel Manhattan.

The committee nailed the Governor at the Republican Club just as he was starting for the Fifth Avenue Hotel. There is no love lost between the Governor and Lou Payn and Senator Brackett, and the conference started in with promise of much heat and recrimination.

Promise Not in Vain.

Nor was the promise vain. Lou Payn and his associates demanded that the Governor declare himself on the Senatorial situation immediately. They told hi that it had been understood all along that he was for Black and that if he was not they wanted to know it. They wanted him to call for the newspaper men and make an open statement or else give them private assurances to take back to Mr. Black that he would not stand in the way of the Black candidacy.

The Governor would not consent to state his position, but men like Lou Payn and Senator Brackett are not easily discouraged. They talked and talked, while the Governor smoked and gazed at them with cold, unspeaking eyes. At last he declared flat-footed that he would not commit himself.

Then it was that Lou Payn is said to have risen to flights of eloquence usually associated with the heated conversation of a canal boat captain. After more than four hours of argument the committee was forced to leave the Republican Club without any assurance from the Governor that he would support Black, and worse than this, they carried away a conviction that if the Governor does not try to swipe the Senatorship for himself he will throw his influence to Senator Depew.

All through the conference Mr. Black waited nervously in his rooms at the Manhattan. When the committee did not return in a couple of hours he knew that there had been a fight. As soon as Payn and his associates reported an executive session of the Black forces was called to form a new plan to get the Governor's influence.

Fight Grows Hotter.

The Senatorial fight to-night is hotter than it has been at any time since opposition developed to Senator Depew. It is the sole talk in Republican circles. Gov. Odell stuck close to the Republican Club all day, refusing to see any but his most intimate political associates, after the Black committee had departed.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 28.—There were no signs of the blizzard here to-day except in the difference in temperature, the air being crisp, cool and clear, a decided relief from the muggy, damp atmosphere of last week.

It was ideal racing weather and made outdoor sport thoroughly enjoyable. The card was fairly good and the track in excellent shape and almost fast.

There was a new drawing in the ring and half a dozen books laid off. There is not enough business on ordinary days for thirty-three books.

Jockey Nicol may ride for E. R. Thomas next season, or at least Mr. Thomas may have a second call on him if Fred Cook takes the boy East. Nicol is a very promising rider with excellent judgment.

DELEGATES ARRESTED.

John J. Henry, twenty-nine years old, of No. 1511 Lexington avenue, and Peter O'Neill, forty years old, of No. 526 West One Hundred and Thirty-third street, walking delegates of the Ornamental Plasterers' Union, were prisoners before Magistrate Mayo in Yorkville Court today charged with attempting to force workmen to go on strike at the building at Sixty-fifth street and Fifth avenue. They were paroled until to-morrow.

SAVED BY DOG FROM FIRE.

ITHACA, N. Y., Dec. 28.—A dog owned by William W. Walker saved five persons from burning to death early to-day by jumping upon the bed and awakening his master, who was nearly suffocated by smoke. Fire from a stove had spread through the upper part of the house, and Walker quickly roused the rest of the family, who escaped.

FREEDOM FOR NAN PATTERSON NEAR AT HAND

New Trial Indefinitely Postponed and "Florodora" Girl, It Is Expected, Will Be Released on Bail or on Parole.

MR. RAND INTIMATES SUCH MOVE IS LIKELY.

Allows Witness Millen to Go West and Assures Lawyer Levy Case Will Not Be Called for Trial Again Soon, if Ever.

From statements made at the District-Attorney's office to-day there is every reason to believe that Nan Patterson will not face the ordeal of another trial for the murder of "Caesar" Young, for several months, at least, if ever.

That there can be no trial for several months was learned when John D. Millen, the former racing partner of Young, and one of the witnesses for the prosecution, obtained permission from Mr. Rand to return to his stock farm in Sacramento, Cal. Mr. Millin said he would be detained West on business for at least three months and attaches of Mr. Rand's office declare it is impossible for the case to proceed without him.

Lawyer Abraham Levy, chief counsel for the accused, had a conference with Mr. Rand to-day after which he said he had been assured there was no prospect of a trial in the near future.

Mr. Levy expects Mr. Jerome will enter into an immediate arrangement to release Miss Patterson, either under bail or upon her own recognizance. The District-Attorney has made this attitude known to the girl's attorney through Mr. Rand.

Willing to Give Bail.

If the bail is fixed within a reasonable figure counsel for the young woman are confident they can secure it. Since the disagreement of her jury scores of persons have written to her lawyers and to herself offering to go on a bond for her.

A telegram received by the girl to-day and signed by four business men of Fairmount, W. Va., said they were willing to furnish bail up to $50,000. A telegram concerning these men brought this reply:

"T. A. Devaney, one of the wealthiest men in this city, confirmed the report that he, H. J. Price and Edward Slack, also local business men, would furnish Nan Patterson bond to the extent of $50,000 if necessary, because they believe her innocent of the crime with which she is charged."

The telegram received by the girl bore the names of the three men and also that of C. W. Swisher, Secretary of State-elect. Mr. Swisher says he never signed the telegram or authorized his name to be used.

It was stated in the office of the District-Attorney to-day by those intimately associated in the prosecution of Nan Patterson that the county will not incur the expense of another trial unless some trace can be found of the missing J. Morgan Smith. It is the firm belief of Mr. Rand that without Smith at hand to call as a witness or to be identified by Pawnbroker Stern as the purchaser of the revolver with which the bookmaker was slain no conviction can ever be secured.

Her release on bail, or on her own recognizance, however, would make her amenable at any time for another trial, should Smith turn up and the District-Attorney still desire to press the charge.

WHOLE CREW DRIVEN TO FROZEN RIGGING

Thirty-five Men on Board the Stranded Freighter Drumelzier, Off Fire Island, in Desperate Straits—Little Hope that They Will Survive the Night.

Her ice-coated deck become a death-trap in the sweep of every billow that breaks over the gunwale, the entire crew of thirty-five men aboard the big freighter Drumelzier, stranded on the Fire Island shoal, were driven to the frozen rigging this afternoon, where they are clinging with the desperate hope that some aid may reach them.

That they all will perish and drop off, one by one, into the seas that pound the ship seems more than probable, for the life-saving crews and tugs that have put off to the steamer's aid are powerless to reach them.

ICE GROWS THICKER.

A gale is blowing across the vessel's bow from the northeast, and with every spray the icy coats thicken upon the shrouds. As the tide rises the seas pile higher over the boat's sides, and toward sundown they were sweeping the decks from stem to stern.

All day the life-saving crews struggled to get a line to the stranded vessel, but in the face of the increasing gale and the ever-rising ranks of breakers their efforts became more and more feeble. The tragic plight of the crew became evident whn the wind had reached the proportions of a gale and the men were forced to climb into the rigging.

MAY NOT LIVE THROUGH NIGHT.

The boom of the surf as it pounded against the sides of the ship could be heard on shore and the seasoned watermen who have gathered on Fire Island to watch the fate of the doomed freighter shook their heads and voiced the opinion that she would never live through the night. The greatest peril will come with the high tide at midnight, and few entertain any hope that the Drumelzier will live through the moments when the seas reach their greatest power.

At noon an ocean-going tug was seen coming in toward the stranded steamer. After making a number of efforts to get within range of a line the tug steamed off to sea. Another tug made a similar ineffectual attempt to aid the marooned seamen later in the day with the same results.

Fog Lifted at Daybreak.

At the first lift of the fog to-day the life-savers from Oak Beach and Fire Island, who had been all night trying to locate the steamer, in the hope of getting a line to her, saw her in about the same position as she was yesterday morning. She was then flying signals of distress for the first time since she grounded. The life-savers got in communication with her with their own signals, and in this way learned that her boiler had worked loose, increasing the danger of her going to pieces.

It was a long and weary night for the life-savers. All yesterday they were on duty waiting for a chance to get a boat out. They lost the Drumelzier early in the day in the fog, and not for a minute did the veil lift sufficiently for them to locate her again. This made it impossible for them to try a line for the rigging of a breeches buoy. It is doubtful if a line could be sent to her anyway, as she is quite a distance from shore, but the life-savers were ready to try. As a matter of fact it was the only thing they could do.

The life-savers at the Quogue station, further down the coast, had work themselves early to-day. At 6.30 A. M., the lifting of the fog revealed a large steamer on the bar off that place. At first it was thought to be a revenue cutter. Then it was seen that it was too large and the life-savers made up their minds it was a tramp.

She sent up signals of distress, but it was impossible to launch a boat and go to her. While the life-savers were rigging their mortar to try to throw a line to her she got free and was last seen moving westward slowly. She continued to send up signals of distress, however, and is evidently badly crippled. The tramp is on her way to this city and will probably be here late this afternoon.

After standing by nearly all day awaiting an opportunity to render the desired assistance to the Drumelzier the revenue cutter gave up this afternoon and steamed away. The force of the wind continued to increase, and there seemed no chance whatever of reaching the stranded steamer under prevailing conditions.

25 PROBABLY LOST IN WRECK OFF HATTERAS.

(Special to The Evening World.)

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 28.—With great seas washing her from stern to stem a big steamer is fast going to pieces on a bar off Hatteras and her crew of twenty-five men have either perished or will soon meet death in the mountainous waves.

The vessel, which has three masts and one funnel, struck on the outer end of Diamond Shoals at dawn to-day and immediately sent up signals of distress.

The life savers gathered on the beach and through their glasses could make out the steamer but failed to get her name. They could do nothing, however, to save her, as none of their boats would float a minute in the violent seas.

They sent up reassuring signals, but it is doubtful whether the men aboard could see them, as no response was made.

All day long the life savers watched on the beach, hoping the storm would abate, but it increased if anything and they noted the ship as she sunk deeper in the sands.

Then they saw her turn on beam ends and the waves begin to batter her decks apart.

Suddenly the smoke that had been curling from her funnels ceased and the word went round that the engine washing over her had rushed below and put out her fires.

The vessel's plight became more desperate hourly, and this afternoon the crew could be dimly seen as, driven

SLAYERS OF GIRL IN RIVERSIDE TO BE CAUGHT SOON

Autopsy Shows that There Had Been a Struggle, in Which the Young Woman's Neck Was Broken, and the Police Are Now in Search of Her Companions.

TWO MEN AND A WOMAN WERE SEEN WITH HER IN A CAFE.

Assault Probably Committed Near the Point Where the Body Was Found, and Theory Is that the Murderer Bore Her Thither to Divert the Suspicion of the Police.

An autopsy having disclosed that the girl who was found dying in Riverside Park last Monday morning had a broken neck, the police of the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street station have been working to such good effect that an arrest is promised before to-morrow morning.

While the identity of the woman has not been established, a line has been secured upon two men and a woman who were with the unfortunate a few hours before she was discovered in the park.

Dr. Weston, who performed the autopsy, says that the nature of the fracture of the neck indicates that the woman's head was twisted until the third and fourth cervical vertebrae snapped. On the inside of the right forearm there is a long black and blue mark, such as might have been made by the grasp of powerful fingers.

Although hundreds have viewed the body in the morgue there has been no identification. This in itself is a peculiar feature in the case, for the dress of the woman indicated that she was a New Yorker, and there is a well-defined suspicion that she lived somewhere in the neighborhood of Riverside Drive and One Hundred and Twelfth street.

Coroner Scholer announced late this afternoon that he had discovered a new and important witness in the person of a prominent lawyer. The lawyer told the Coroner that some hours before the woman was found in the park he saw her, leaning on the arm of a man walking along Riverside Drive, southward at One Hundred and Sixteenth street. She was crying and appeared to be in deep distress.

Coroner Scholer asserts that he took the lawyer to the Morgue and showed him the body. He identified the woman as the one he had seen walking along Riverside Drive with a man Sunday night.

The prominent lawyer mentioned by the Coroner is supposed to be Recorder Goff, whose home is at No. 319 West One Hundred and Fourth street, and who is known to be given to the habit of taking long walks in the vicinity of his home at night. The Recorder and Coroner Scholer left the Criminal Courts Building together late this afternoon, and it was noticed that the Coroner had visited Recorder Goff's chambers several times during the day.

DETECTIVES RUSHED TO WORK AT LAST.

The police of the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street station were aroused to activity by the report of Dr. Weston. Inspector Elbert O. Smith took personal charge of the case and sent detectives in all directions. He ordered his men to pay particular attention to a report that a woman resembling the one who was found in the park fought with a man Christmas night in the River View Cafe, in One Hundred and Tenth street, near Riverside Drive.

The policemen in the afternoon platoon leaving the station-house were instructed to inquire from every family on their beats if there is a servant miscing. From the clothing of the dead woman, the condition of her hands and other indications it is inferred that she was either a servant in the neighborhood of Cathedral Heights or a woman who did her own housework.

According to Dr. Weston there is no indication that the woman was an inebriate. The autopsy showed that she had eaten heartily and had drunk some liquor about six hours before she died. The fight in the River View Cafe occurred just six hours before the woman was found dying against the park bench.

No attention is being paid by the detectives to the foolish theory that the woman was thrown from a passing automobile into the park and killed. There were no automobiles out in New York last Sunday night. The storm

BRIDE-TO-BE DISAPPOINTED, INIVTES GUESTS TO FEAST.

Twice the Bridegroom Failed to Appear for Wedding, but Girl Had Banquet Without Him.

(Special to The Evening World.)

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Dec. 28.—After waiting two nights for the bridegroom to appear Miss Lester Belle, of Ashley, last night invited the guests to dispose of the wedding feast and has now changed her mind about the wedding.

The bridegroom was to have been John G. McDonald, of this city. He failed to appear Monday night, and the minister and guests were sent away after waiting a couple of hours. Yesterday morning he sent to the bride's home and explained that his parents, who did not approve of the marriage, had detained him and arranged for it last night.

Again the minister and guests were present, the bride ready, the feast prepared and again McDonald failed to appear.

FURSMAN MUST ANSWER COMPLAINT IN TROY.

Court Denies Application for Dismissal of Perjury Action—Schwarzkopf Gets More Time.

TROY, N. Y., Dec. 28.—Lawyer John Schwarzkopf, of New York, the complainant in a warrant charging former Supreme Court Justice Fursman, of this city, with perjury in connection with the indictment of Schwarzkopf in Rensselaer County for grand larceny, appeared in police court this morning and requested an adjournment of the examination of the Fursman case on the ground that he had not been given a sufficient length of time to procure his witnesses from New York.

The adjournment was granted and the case will be heard on Saturday.

The Court denied the application of former County Judge Grimith, appearing for Judge Fursman, for a dismissal of the complaint.
