HARD WORK In New York, DOES IT WIN?

Here's a Man Who Says It Does and that the Previous Communications Denying the Fact Are Vicious in Their Effect—Cites President Roosevelt as an Example of What Hard Work Brings to a Man.

Does hard work win? A writer recently in these columns said it did, and told why. Then several men wrote and emphatically differed with the first writer. Here is another reader of The Evening World who believes hard work wins. What do you think? Read what he says:

To the Editor of The Evening World:

In your columns of yesterday I notice under the heading, "Hard Work in New York, Does It Win?" an article signed "D," carrying an air of every assurance that from his personal experience and observation, pull, not hard work wins.

I am a resident of New York only since Jan. 1; am thirty-two years of age; have lived in Michigan all my life. I have held a position (gained by promotion) of trust and one requiring executive ability. I have been both an employer and an employee, and perhaps my observation, "PULL, not hard work, wins."

I too am now an employee of a large and prominent concern here in New York, and I have opportunity to observe the rewards meted out to employees, either from "merit" or "PULL" as you like.

I quite agree with Mr. "D," when he speaks of employees of twenty years' standing being "anchored." I know of lots of them, and briefly I would say that in 99 cases out of 100 they should be "anchored." They are in almost every instance indebted to their employers for being retained at all, and I think it a godsend to them that they are treated as leniently as they are. "PAY-DAY, 6 TO 6 O'CLOCK" and DOING JUST THEIR SHARE are the milstones. Had their motto been "all I can do" instead of "just what I have got to do" when they started they would to-day have been out of the pale of needing "PULL," and would be the holders of commanding position and salary.

I see advancements every day, Mr. "D," honestly earned through no source other than of hard work, and these advancements will continue along the same line indefinitely.

Employers to-day are in constant need and search of men who are WORKERS, men who are HONEST, THOROUGH, COMPETENT, and who have some fixity of purpose in their make-up, and "PULL," to honest men and honest firms (of which it is refreshing to feel that there are many), is positively disgusting and nauseating.

No, Mr. "D," to use the vernacular of the street urchin, "you are wrong," and to preach such a theory as yours to young America growing up, is an outrage, and a sin. Your theory may apply to the "cheap politician or the sluggard," but to the man behind the the push and go, "NEVER."

Our President is not there through "PULL," the people who demanded he expend his snap and vim and get-up-and-get-ness to the country's welfare.

WHY? Because he has been doing things ever since he was a boy.

It is a hundred to one shot that if "D." were to inventory his past he would find a world of time spent in cutting corners through life, crying down wealth and high position, and the contracted spirit of anarchy rather than that of the typical American would be plainly evident.

WORK, WORK, WORK," DO NOT LOOK FOR OR DEPEND ON "PULL."

What our friend "D." is in need of is a few hypodermic injections of good horse sense. Some one to take him by the hand and lead him out on the road to "SUCCESSVILLE," which I assure you is not via "PULLVILLE," and then incidentally he might right as much as possible the wrong he has done to the young graduates who are just at this time starting out on the journey of life, by "fessing up his error and honestly telling them that the only way safely across the sea of life is to "ROW, NOT DRIFT."

Sale of High Art "Majestic" Shirts, Heretofore Always $1.50, at 69c

Retiring from the manufacture of men's shirts, the firm who made this world-famous brand closed out to us 500 dozen shirts way below the cost of production. They are $1.50 shirts, and still command that price in thousands of haberdashery shops. They are high-class garments, exclusive and up-to-date; no custom-made shirt can surpass them, and they have rightly been termed "Fit for a King." It is the shirt bargain of the year.
