SPORTING NEWS AND COMMENT

EDITED BY ROBERT EDGREN.

EDGREN'S COLUMN

GEORGE DIXON, once the greatest little fighter in all the wide world, hero of a thousand ring battles—hero still, although defeat is his portion oftener than victory—is back in New York. Of all the fighting men Dixon has had the most varied career. Now opulent, now starving; now buying diamonds by the pint, now "boosing" the price of a "beer;" the undefeated ebony idol of American sportdom, defeated—down and out—touring the world as a second-rater in the old profession of which he was king.

The great little black champion came from John L. Sullivan's bailiwick, years ago, under the guardianship of Tom O'Rourke. Various sportsmen claim the credit of "discovering" Dixon when he was starting his boxing career. Whoever it was that first recognized Dixon's fighting ability, Tom O'Rourke alone is identified with him in the public mind, for it was O'Rourke who handled Dixon all through the successful part of his career, sat in the box-office, counted the gates at a hundred fights, and made a fortune out of it.

Dixon was a black diamond. Whoever lost him originally, Tom O'Rourke found him, and used him until a string of defeats destroyed his value as a drawing card.

Dixon was a natural-born fighter. He was as symmetrical as any Athenian bronze, broad-shouldered, long-armed, wiry, with unusually good legs for a negro. He developed wonderful cleverness, and was game and aggressive.

The black man held the world's feather-weight championship for ten solid years. During that time he fought continuously. He was a perfect Tanopaugh gold mine for productiveness. He made more money through his fighting than even the great John L. Sullivan ever did. He threw his share away—wine, wenches and riot. His manager, the astute Mr. O'Rourke, was more saving.

The marvellous little black man didn't feel the effects of his various dissipations until he met young, husky, eager Terry McGovern. Then his great skill failed to save him. In a furious battle Terry tore Dixon's perfect guard to tatters, threw off his blows and beat him down to defeat. Eight times the champion went to the floor in the final round, dazed, his black skin glistening and shining under the electric lights with the blood that streamed from his battered features. He was down in his own corner, sprawling helpless, with Terry standing over him, when O'Rourke at last threw up the sponge.

That was the end of Dixon as a champion. He never came back. The terror had departed from his name. Fighters whom he had whipped easily before turned the tables on him, and either beat him or got off with nothing worse than a draw. He soaked up more champagne as his dollars dwindled. At last, money and credit gone, left in the lurch by his old-time manager, George Dixon found the game too hard for him here where he had made and spent fortunes. He went to England, the land of easy marks in the boxing game.

Dixon has fought more than sixty battles across the water. He won a few at first, but his old stamina was dwindling fast. Toward the end he was whipped, taking the gaff gamely as of yore, by some of England's second raters.

Now the old-time champion is back here again. He finds things changed. There are new claimants to the old titles. The men who dispossessed him, "Terrible Terry" McGovern, has passed into ring history. "Young Corbett," who was a youngster in Dixon's time, is also falling back toward oblivion. Names that he never heard are coming up in place of theirs.

Dixon is to fight Tommy Murphy soon in Philadelphia, before the National A. C. The old warrior will draw a crowd. The shadow of his ancient greatness still lingers. Men will go to see the shadow. Perhaps it will be the last chance to see famous George Dixon in a fighting ring.

Tommy Murphy is one of the younger generation. He is a fighter with aggressiveness and a knack of hitting hard. He isn't very clever, but he can mix, and Dixon's mixing days are past.

Perhaps Tommy Murphy will have the joy of adding George Dixon's famous name to the list of his victims. It would look well on paper—no doubt of it.

TURNING POINTS IN CAREER OF GEORGE DIXON, ONCE THE KING OF THEM ALL.

AUTO WOMAN WINS AGAIN AT CAPE MAY

(Special to The Evening World.)

CAPE MAY, N. J., Aug. 26.—Mrs. Clarence Fitler gave another remarkable demonstration of her ability as a very nervy driver when she drove to victory in the second event of the speed trials to-day.

George Jones, in a fifty horse-power machine, was the only starter against Mrs. Fitler.

At the half-mile pole Mrs. Fitler forged to the front and then, like a veteran, she increased her lead until she finished one hundred yards in front, while the people cheered wildly.

Other results were:

Mile event for touring cars up to fifty horse-power—Won by J. N. Wilkins, jr.; time, 1m. 31s.; second, J. H. Thropp.

Mile event for touring cars up to forty horse-power, driven by owners, from moving start—Won by J. W. Wilkins, jr.; time, 1m. 16s.; second, J. H. Thropp; third, J. A. Depew.

In justice to the machines and drivers, it must be said that the course was easily three seconds slower than the course when McDonald established the record.

Al Campbell made the fastest mile, going the distance in 38 seconds flat. Louis Chevrolet, the daring Frenchman, made three trials. His first mile was in 40 2-5, the second in 39 3-5, and the third in 40 seconds flat.

Walter Christie had a like number of trials, but he could not get below the forty mark, his best time being 40 seconds flat.

Henry Ford made his initial appearance with his new racer. The machine is of 80 horse-power and built along light lines. After three trials, he made the first mile not within range of the record, going in 43 seconds. Then he took another flying start, and clipped exactly three seconds from his mark. The machine seemed to work better, and when he whirled over the course for the third time, he made the mile in 39 4-5.

ORMONDALE WINS GREAT FUTURITY

front, with Redfern urging him with all the skill at his command. Ormondale was reeling like a drunken man, but Redfern steadied him and sat riding with hand and heel.

"Come on, you Redfern," cried the crowd. Admirers of Flip Flap had not heart enough to oot, for her pink-jacketed rider was off at the tail.

Yet she closed up an immense gap and turned into the stretch about tenth. But she could not get into the money. Ormondale held his lead to the end, winning by a length from Timber, which in a hard drive beat Belmere a head for the place. A length away came Flip Flap fast, the best horse in the race.

The time, 1.11 4-5, was only 4-5 of a second behind the record.

After the race there were the usual scenes. A great calm swept over the multitude. Enthusiasm took on a different form. The tumult died away into a babel of gay, chattering voices. Hundreds rushed to the judges' stand to have a look at the winner and his tired out happy-faced rider. Hundreds leaped the fences and crowded about the judges' inclosure, ready to grab the jockey, toss him to their shoulders and carry him off to the paddock in triumph.

These were scenes familiar to the regular, but delightfully interesting to the man or woman who confines his race-track pilgrimages to the "big days" on which great races are run.

Betting Ring a Human Sea.

On these days the regular regards the betting ring as a pestilential place, to be avoided. But the transient plunges into the sea of turmoil and is happy in being buffeted about like a chip on a cross sea.

The transient sees a long fringe of bookmakers on the outside of the seething mass of which he is one, and he madly plunges in that direction. Hundreds of others do the same, so that the betting ring just before one of the big races resembles a great caldron of bubbling human beings bobbing here and there without any apparent purpose.

Every one bets on the Futurity. Hence the jam. Every one wants to bet at once. Every one moves to the ring at the same time. Every one fears that he will not get his money down in time. So there is a constant rush, constant pushing and hauling, which causes a series of rushes upon the bookmaker which at times threatens to sweep that individual and his clerks and his bank roll far out upon the lawn.

The crowd that arrived early burst in upon a course which seemed more beautiful than ever. The lawn, in perfect condition, stretched like great, velvety carpets of green, while flower beds of brilliant-hued geraniums and other plants were pleasing pictures to the eye. The tracks proper seemed in perfect condition, barring, of course, the soaking to which they were subjected yesterday; but harrows were constantly raking over the wet clods, and wherever there was a pool of water gangs of men with sponges were soaking it up and transferring it to buckets. Every effort possible was being made to have the course in the best possible shape by the time of the big race.

Fast going, however, was out of the question, and the owners and trainers of mudlarks viewed the situation with much complacence.

There were hundreds at the track before the average New Yorker was out of bed. They were the usual army of louts and others who had gathered to watch the early morning gallops. While all of the Futurity candidates were out on the track, none of them was asked to do anything in the shape of work.

Kneppp was engaged early in the season to ride Albert F. in the Futurity. At this time James R. Keene had some sort of a second call on Knapp's services. When Mr. Dwyer decided not to start Albert F., Knapp believed he was free to make an engagement and was given the mount on Flip Flap.

To-day James Rowe, acting for Mr. Keene, insisted that Knapp ride one of the Keene horses. The matter was brought before the stewards who, after hearing the evidence, decided in favor of Mr. Keene. Then Phil Dwyer grew wrathy. He did not think well of this action and promptly added Albert F. "Bring Albert F. over if he has only two legs. I will run him," he added.

Albert F. was added but later Mr. Dwyer withdrew and allowed Rowe to claim the services of Knapp. The matter was much commented upon by horsemen. Burns was engaged for Flip Flap.

Phantom in a Gallop.

Pagan Bey made the early running, but it was only on sufferance, for Phantom went to the front when he got ready and came in an easy winner by a length from Dick Roberts, who was eight lengths in front of Pagan Bey. Nitrate fell at the last jump, but had no chance to win.

Second Race.

Sir Caruthers went to the front at the start and made all the running. Inglescide and Cary went at him in the stretch, but Miller kept him going and won by a head from Ingleside, who beat Bribery a head, the latter closing very strong in the final furlong.

Hamburg Won Easily.

Lady Amelia raced to the front at the start and made the running, followed by Prince Hamburg and Roseben. These three outran the others making a three-horse-race of it. Lady Amelia began to tire after reaching the stretch and Prince Hamburg closing strong won by a length from Roseben, who beat Lady Amelia a head for the place.

Pretension Stops in Stretch.

Grapple went to the front soon after the start and made all the running and won cleverly by a length and a half from First Mason, which was a heavily backed favorite. Pretension, which raced head and head with Grapple to the stretch, stopped and was beaten five lengths for the place.

Lord Badge a Surprise.

Stroller made the running, followed by Novena and Lord Badge. This order held to the turn, when Lord Badge moved to the front, and, taking the lead, won easily by six lengths from Stroller, who was a length and a half in front of Noena.

FLANAGAN SETS NEW MARK IN WEIGHT THROW

A bright scorching sun burst upon the Pastime A. C. Club's new grounds at Ninety-first street and East River, today, so that the "Indians" might hold their annual outdoor track meet. The entire New York Athletic Club, Irish-American, Mohawk, Mott Haven West Side Y. M. C. A., New West Side A. C. and Xavier competed.

After the first few races, the meet resolved itself into a match between the Mercury Footers and the "Irish," for the point trophy.

In the 56-pound throw without follow, John Flanagan broke the world's record with a throw of 39 feet 10 inches. The former record, 39 feet 6½ inches was held by Flanagan himself.

John Eller, of the Irish-American Athletic Club, won a semi-final in the 100 yards dash handicap in 10 seconds flat, and P. J. Callahan, of the New York A. C., the other, in 10 1-5 seconds. Charles Daming, of the Irish, and A. E. John son, of the New York A. C., won the heats for second men, and qualified for the final in 10 1-5 seconds.

In the final, A. C. John son won from the 5-yard mark and Eller came second.

LARCENY CHARGE FOR FERGUSON

Brother of Co-Defendant with Convicted Attorney Wooten Under Arrest and His Right Name is Forgotson.

Martin E. Ferguson, who says he is a brother of Samuel I. Ferguson, the lawyer under indictment in connection with the Weisel estate robberies, with Armitage Mathews and John W. Wooten, was arrested this afternoon and charged with larceny.

It developed after the arrest, according to the police and the prisoner, that Fergusons right name is Forgotson. The prisoner said he was also a brother of Morris A. Forgotson, a pawnbroker at No. 178 Bowery.

Just before the arrest a young man, alleged to have been Ferguson, went to the grocery store of Charles Lipscher at No. 1292 Third avenue. He asked to use the telephone. A moment afterward a second man entered and started to purchase some goods. While Lipscher was waiting on the second man a third man frightened Lipscher's horse and the horse started to run away. Lipscher ran from the store to stop the animal and, during his absence, it is alleged, the two men in the store rifled the cash drawer of $14. All three then ran. The man, who said he was Ferguson, was caught by Detective McAvoy and Patrolman Campbell.
