GIRL CHOKED AND ROBBED OF DIAMOND RING

Miss Sands Accuses Four Young Men Known to Her Since Childhood.

That she was cruelly choked and robbed by four boys whom she had known for years as playmates was the story told in the West Side Court to-day by sixteen-year-old Loretta Sands, of No. 445 West Twenty-sixth street. The only one of her alleged assailants who has been arrested is Edward Sands, nineteen years old, of No. 551 West Thirtieth street, who was held in $1,000 by Magistrate Cornell for further examination next Thursday. By then the police hope to have the others under arrest.

Miss Sands, very pretty with her black hair in a braid down her back, sobbed at the recollection of the incident as she told of it in court. She visited her grandmother, Mrs. Annie Devlin, at No. 341 Tenth avenue, Sunday night, and went out to mail a letter for her. On the stoop of the house she said she saw James Quinn, Joseph Kelley, Arthur McCarthy and Edward Sands, all boys she had known in the neighborhood since she was a small child. She said they spoke to her and she hurried off to the letter-box.

On her return, she said, only Shea and Quinn were in front of the house. She entered and was going up the stairs when she said they seized her, choking her so she could not cry out. She said the two others then came in and one of them held the door while the other three threw her over the banisters to the floor. Then, according to her story, the three held her while they took her diamond ring worth $75. At this time she managed to bite the hand of the one who was holding her mouth closed.

Her screams summoned her grandmother, Mrs. Devlin cried for help and the boys ran away.

CONRIED GETS DELAY FOR SUNDAY CONCERT.

Grand Opera Director Wants Magistrate to Hear Verdi's Music Before He Gives Decision.

That Magistrate Mayo should hear a rendition of Verdi's Requiem Mass is the wish Herr Director Heinrich Conried expressed to-day when he was arraigned in the Jefferson Market Court [illegible] held a theatrical performance on Sunday. He was expressly charged with presenting Verdi's mass last Sunday night, and in the complaint was accused of violating sections 260, 263 and 277 of the Penal Code and Section 1453 of the New York Charter. After some discussion of the charges and admission by counsel of the main facts, Magistrate Mayo adjourned the hearing until next Tuesday afternoon.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Farley, who appeared as prosecutor, strongly opposed the motion of Judge Dittenhoefer, Conried's counsel, for the adjournment.

"If we let it go over till next week," said Mr. Farley, "there will be a performance in the Metropolitan Opera-House. We don't care so much about it, but the Sabbath societies are complaining about it right along."

After the adjournment Judge Dittenhoefer said: "While I am not positive, I feel pretty sure that we will present no evidence in the way of testimony, but will allow the case to be sent to Special Sessions for trial. We want to have it settled once for all."

LAWYERS ROBBED HER IS CHARGE OF MRS. POILLON.

turn of the money that had been given to Mr. Hansen, my persecutor and the man who moved against me, threatening if I did not get it to go before the Judge and disclose everything, and make a great fuss about it.

"The fee these lawyers took from me was illegal and unfair and I disputed it. But what could I do. I was then a saleswoman in a Fifth avenue millinery store, earning scarcely enough to support me.

"Later I had demanded the return of the Hansen money Mr. Olcott went to the telephone, called some one up and said to tell Mr. Hansen that Mrs. Poillon was making a fuss about the $2,500. Later the salesman said I never got back one cent of that money and never even saw a receipt for it.

The Money to Hansen.

"One time my lawyers tried to explain that Mr. Hansen had paid $500 to a man to have him live at the Waldorf and wrote stories about me, so that there would be plenty in the newspapers. Mr. Olcott said he thought he could get me back $375 of the $2,500 he gave to Hansen, but I refused to take it.

"They also told me that they had given $500 to 'Suspender Jim' or 'Suspender Jack McGee,' a policeman, for information about me.

"Now, I want to say this: 'I was robbed as crudely and heartlessly as any highwayman ever robbed a poor unprotected woman.

"After this I went to many prominent lawyers, but, though they agreed with me that I had been wronged, they said that their social relations with members of the firm were such that they could not force proceedings against them.

"Now, aside from all this, can't you see I had small judgment? Have you an angel now?" asked Mr. Rosenthal.

"I have no angels now," responded Mrs. Poillon, "but I can borrow $50,000. The only trouble is that I might have to pay it back."

"Have you no income now?" asked the lawyer.

"No," replied the Frenchwoman wistfully. "Everything is going out and nothing coming in."

Mrs. Poillon said the baby lamb coat she wore was borrowed, though it fitted her perfectly. This concluded the examination for to-day.

When Abe Gruber was seen at his office, No. 170 Broadway, this afternoon, and told of Mrs. Poillon's testimony, he laughed heartily and said: "She got every dollar that was coming to her. We yet have the receipts to show for it."

When asked for one of the receipts, he said: "The time hasn't come yet. When we must show them we will."

HAVE NO RIGHT TO ARREST PICKETS

Magistrate Scores Policeman Who Accused Union Printer of "Obstructing Walk."

Magistrate Walsh, sitting in chambers in Centre Street Court to-day, made plain that he does not seriously regard the injunction of Justice Gildersleeve prohibiting union printers on strike against the Typothetae from even speaking to the men who have taken their places. The case was that of Charles Holman, a member of "Big Six," formerly an employee of the Andrew H. Kellogg Press, at No. 408 Pearl street, who was arrested on Feb. 8 at Mr. Kellogg's request by Policeman Murphy, of the Oak street station.

Holman was posted as a picket outside the Kellogg shop. It was his duty to speak to the non-union printers as they entered or left the place, and endeavor to persuade them to join the union. Mr. Kellogg had him arrested on the ground that he was loitering and obstructing the sidewalk. After hearing the evidence Magistrate Walsh said:

"You, Mr. Kellogg, as a citizen, had the right to arrest this man if you honestly believed that he was guilty of a crime. The policeman, however, had absolutely no right to place him under arrest at your direction. He clearly exceeded his authority.

"All that could have been proved against him was the violation of a corporation ordinance in obstructing the sidewalk, and the remedy for that lies in a summons from a magistrate, not in subjecting a citizen to the indignity of being locked up in a cell. The defendant is discharged."

MURPHY AND BAND SWARM THE CAPITOL.

(Special to The Evening World.)

ALBANY, Feb. 13.—Eighty-three Tammanyites, headed by Charles F. Murphy, swarmed over the State Capitol to-day doing missionary work for their organization and looking for information as to the attitude of up-State Democrats regarding the coming State campaign.

The ostensible cause of their mission is to urge the Legislature to pass the Grady bill creating a public utilities commission. Grady and Congressman Bourke Cockran are the principal advocates of the measure.

and fired point blank at the astonished foreman. Tully dodged. The bullet clipped a piece out of the right shoulder of his coat. He wrenched himself free and ran, his assailant following.

About ten feet away there was a plank leading to the entrance of one of the buildings. Tully turned to cross this plank, figuring that if he got into the building he had a chance to escape. But the stranger fired just as he placed his foot on the plank, striking him on the left side, and Tully fell against a pile of lumber.

Shot Him Again.

With a bound the assassin was on top of him. Tully grasped him around the arms, but he squirmed and twisted until he got the muzzle of the revolver against the prostrate man's left breast and again he pulled the trigger. The bullet went clear through Tully's body and the flash of the revolver set his clothing on fire.

By this time Marie had reached the struggling men. Workmen attracted by the shot were pouring out of the building, down ladders and half completed stairways. The murderer fought like a demon, but his revolver was wrenched from him and he was finally overpowered after he had succeeded in breaking Tully's death grip. Policemen Mangan and Donnelly arrived and placed him under arrest.

Never Saw His Assailant.

Donnelly telephoned to J. Hood Wright Hospital for an ambulance, urging speed, and in a few minutes the ambulance was on the ground. Tully, half conscious, while awaiting the arrival of the surgeon, told the policemen that he never had seen the man who shot him before.

Dr. Sharp, realizing that Tully was in a bad way, ordered Driver Bierman to break all records getting back to the hospital. He and Policeman Mangan climbed into the body of the ambulance to render what assistance they could to the wounded man. Just before Eighth avenue was reached Tully died and Dr. Sharp called to Bierman to go to the police station instead of the hospital.

The horse was going too fast to negotiate the turn down Eighth avenue, and Bierman kept right on across the street. Then came the crash of the collision.

Murderer Is Reticent.

Another ambulance was called from the hospital and the wounded driver was taken there. Dr. Sharp said that the fracture was very serious and could hold out but little hope for Bierman's recovery.

In the meantime Policeman Donnelly had taken the murderer to the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street station. He described himself as Michael Farley, a father, of No. 253 Bowery, but refused to tell why he shot Tully or anything about himself. The workmen agree that he had not been employed about the buildings.

Philip McCarthy, the motorman under arrest, said that he did not see the ambulance until too late.

MAGIC BOOTS CASE IS AGAIN IN COURT

Room Crowded with Cripples Who Had Dealings with Hilgert and Whitehouse.

Magistrate Pool resumed in Centre Street Police Court this afternoon the hearing of "Prof." Matthew Hilgert and Dr. Albert Whitehouse, the "magic boots" men. The charge against them is practising medicine without a license. Another charge, grand larceny, is pending.

The court-room looked like a dispensary on a busy day. It was crowded with pitiful cripples—children, men and women, whose malformations and suffering would wring the hardest heart. It was upon such as these that Hilgert and Whitehouse are alleged to have preyed with their boots upholstered with red pepper and their powerful electric treatments.

At the last hearing the principal witness for the prosecution was Mrs. Helena Lubbe, of No. 408 East Twenty-fifth street. Her seven-year-old son had hip disease, and was being treated by a regular physician. Results were disappointing. She heard of the "magic boots" and went to see Hilgert. He gave her a pair of alleged "magic boots" for her son, she alleges, and Whitehouse literally seared the little fellow's spinal column with electricity.

"Where is the little boy?" asked the Magistrate on that occasion.

"I could not bring him," replied the mother, as tears streamed down her cheeks. "He will never walk again."

Mrs. Lubbe took the stand for cross-examination this afternoon. Clarence Seymour conducted the examination for the defense. In answer to his questions Mrs. Lubbe admitted that her husband had tried to get back the money she had paid Hilgert and had threatened to take the matter into the courts.

COLUMBIA TIGHTENS FOOTBALL SCREWS

No Chance of University Taking Up Game Again, Official Statement Says.

The following authoritative statement of Columbia University's attitude on football and sporting events was issued to-day:

"The reports to-day that Columbia University was considering taking up football this fall with a short schedule, abolition of the training table, &c., are without foundation and made up for the purpose of stirring up strife among the students.

"Football is not a topic of discussion at the university as the game has been abolished. It will not be resumed, and if any sport takes its place it will be one that is free from all the evils of the present game, chief among which is the extravagant interest which has caused excesses of all kinds among students and has made the game an obsession on the university. It will never be allowed to creep in and undo the good that has been done through its abolition.

"Committees have been formed to regulate all sports at the university and while they may consider something to take the place of the present game no recommendations which will allow a modified game such as has been proposed by the Football Rules Committee will be considered by the university authorities."

BURGLAR HAD DEUEL MEDAL.

When Justice Deuel, of Town Topics fame, was in charge of the Children's Court it was his custom to give boys who had not violated their parole for a year a "good certificate." This was an ornate guarantee of merit printed at Justice Deuel's expense. On Dec. 24, 1904, Dudley Snow, sixteen years old, got his certificate. Dudley was in the Court of General Sessions to-day before Judge Mealhahon to answer to a charge of burglary. He answered that he was guilty and was sent to Elmira Reformatory.

Word was received at the White House to-day from an unquestionable source that an invitation to the wedding was sold to a person more anxious to witness the ceremony than the original holder of a card of invitation.

Efforts are being made to locate the purchaser of the ticket, with a view to cancelling the invitation. The limited list of invitations has been carefully scrutinized, and White House officials realize that they have a difficult task before them to spot the holder of the $400 card and turn it down when it is presented.

"DOC" LANGLEY IS AGAIN CONVICTED.

James H. Langley, better known as "Doc" Langley along the crooked path of the under world that has known him the greater part of the sixty-five years of his life, was convicted of grand larceny in the second degree before Judge Foster, in General Sessions to-day. He will be sentenced on Friday and will probably get the limit of five years. He served his last term of four years in the Massachusetts State Prison as Charleston.

Peter B. Ranke, of No. 493 Lexington avenue, was Langley's victim in his latest chain of frauds, or, rather, one of many victims whose get-rich-quick desires were inflamed by a scheme for obtaining an interest in a great tract of land in West Virginia.

Ranke gave Langley $400 in cash and a note for $100 for an interest in ten square miles of land said to be rich in marble, brownstone and timber and to possess the most delightful climate on the nether side of Utopia. It turned out, however, that "Doc" Langley didn't own a blade of grass in this land.
