WINTER WHEAT IN WESTERN NEBRASKA

Results of work with winter wheat at four Agricultural Experiment Stations are reported in Bulletin 179 now being distributed by the Nebraska Agricultural College. The North Platte and Scottsbluff stations are in Nebraska and the Akron, Col., and Ardmore, S. D., stations are so near the edges of Nebraska that conditions there are practically the same as at the two Nebraska stations. In tests of winter wheat varieties at North Platte and Akron, the most promising variety was Kanred. The lowest average yields per acre, at all stations, were secured from continuous cropping. Good yields of wheat, following corn, have been secured at all stations. The highest yields per acre have been those following summer tillage. Considering the value of the corn crop and the low cost of production, the most valuable yields of wheat have been those following corn. Many of the winter wheat problems of western Nebraska are discussed fully in this bulletin, which may be secured free from the Agricultural College, Lincoln.

POTATO VARIETIES FOR EASTERN NEBRASKA

For eastern Nebraska conditions, the Early Ohio variety of potatoes seems in past years to have given the best returns, therefore it is best to continue planting this variety until it is conclusively proven that some other variety is better suited to our conditions, says the Agriculture College. But it makes a difference under what conditions potatoes have been grown as to whether they are good for seed or not. Potatoes grown locally under clean cultivation are not suitable for seed, especially not if they were produced during a hot dry season. It has been demonstrated time and time again that the type of seed will yield 20% to 30% less than where good northern or western seed is planted. Conditions in the Red River Valley and in the northwest Nebraska are much more favorable for the proper development of potatoes that have the vigor and vitality to produce good yields. Then if the patch is mulched with straw this year, the potatoes grown can be used next year for seed as they will be practically as good for seed as those from the Red River Valley or Northwest Nebraska. Under the straw, the temperature is cool and the potatoes retain their natural vitality.

COUNTY SCHOOL NOTES

W. E. VOSS, Superintendent

We have well entered the season when teachers are seeking schools for next fall, and mindful parents and school boards are watchfully selecting the teachers who are best fitted for their schools. Each teacher has her reason for wanting to teach, while the parents and school boards are wondering what each reason is and whether it takes the equitable interests of the schools into consideration. Is it because she has friends or relatives who want her to teach? Is it because teaching is an employment easily drifted into for her that will afford extra spending money or a living? Is it because the circumstances in many schools permit her "to get by" with giving less time, hard work, and responsibility than would be required of her in other professions or positions? Does she see that the supervision over teachers is often such that she may do about as she pleases and carry out a program of enjoyment that seems with falderal, though it unfits her for teaching? Or, is her leading motive for teaching supported by the fact that she loves children, and wants to do her bit of good for them and for her country by choosing to teach? Then, is her love and desire to render such intrinsic service sufficiently backed by good health, sustained determination, and ample training to carry out her year's plans to a happy conclusion? These are some of the things that enter into the considerations of those who have children to send to school.

They, as well as the tax-payers, know that they are maintaining the schools for the sole benefit of the children, and that they want real teachers for them. They wish to avoid those persons who have arranged to have themselves classified as teachers and who look upon schools as institutions to be farmed out for themselves primarily. They fear the impostor and the drone. They are afraid that such will succeed in passing themselves off to them as good teachers. They hardly know what to do to assure themselves the benefits of a good school for their children and reasonable returns on their school taxes. It usually ends up in offering a low wage for teachers for self-protection in a measure. This hurts the wages of all kinds of teachers. A way must be found to assure satisfactory teachers for patrons to choose from, and to eliminate the others. If but all the persons who do not really care to aspire to be worthy teachers would get out and keep out of the profession, it would be no time at all until teachers would get proper wages with as little question as members of other professions get their rich fees. I know that almost every tax-payer is willing to pay more school taxes than he can in a sense afford when the teacher will deliver him value received for money. A fine example of this may be found in the school district containing Dakota City. There the teachers average over fifty hours per week of service in preparing for their classes and in teaching with such whole-hearted interest and a success that brings pleasing expressions from the tax-payers and other persons when the school is mentioned. What the teachers at Dakota City have done others can do and feel well rewarded for their efforts.

John Eoover of South Sioux City, was bound over to the district court at Pender, Neb., Wednesday of last week for the robbery of the Horak Bros. store in Winnebago. He was arrested at South Sioux City with some of the stolen goods in his possession. Several pairs of shoes, identified as those stolen from the S. A. Stinson store here several weeks ago, were among the loot recovered, according to reports from police headquarters in Sioux City.

Peter Shaska, charged with assaulting Mrs. Emma Brienza, of South Sioux City, with intent to do great bodily injury (in other words, threatening to shoot her with a double barreled shot gun) decided to plead guilty to the charge and was taken before Judge Guy T. Graves at Hartington, Neb., last Thursday where he entered a plea of guilty, and was given a penitentiary sentence of from 1 to 2 years. From Hartington he was taken to Lincoln and turned over to the warden at the penitentiary.

Joseph Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Jones of this place, died in a Sioux City hospital last Friday from the effects of an injury to his head received while skating a week before. The wound became infected and he was taken to the hospital Wednesday of last week for treatment, but his system could not overcome the effects of the injury. Joe was born here on June 1, 1911, and was a bright, industrious lad in his school and other work. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, from the Westcott Undertaking parlors in Sioux City. Burial was in a Sioux City cemetery.

In a letter from Chas. O. Johnson, who recently moved with his family to Argusville, N. D., he orders his Herald changed to that address, and adds: "We have lots of snow up here, but it is going fast—and if it keeps on going like it is now, we will be able to start seeding next month. We are going to put in 50 acres of potatoes and the balance in small grain. We are just three miles from town, and have neighbors one quarter of a mile from us. Tell Herman that the town where we live is where we stopped for water when we were up here last fall. Give my regards to all the folks."

THE HERALD FOR NEWS

Farm Bureau Field Notes

C. R. Young, County Agent

A meeting of vegetable market gardeners and those selling fruits on the Sioux City market, will be held at the building recently vacated by the Nebraska State bank at South Sioux City at 1:30 p. m., Friday Mar. 17th. The purpose of this meeting is to discuss plans for truck growers to sell their produce directly to consumers, and thus eliminate a large portion of the expense of the middleman. This should prove profitable to both the grower and the consumer.

Mr. George P. Boemer a marketing specialist who has studied this class of markets will address the meeting. It is planned to include in this organization not only Nebraska men but those from Iowa as well. All persons interested in marketing garden produce or fruit are urged to attend.

Considerable interest is being shown by potato growers as to the prospects for an increased acreage of potatoes for the year 1922. In answer to a letter on this subject, Mr. H. O. Werner, special horticulturist, estimates that the shipment of early potatoes before the middle of next September in western Nebraska may double last year's movement. However, the late potato crop he only places at 10% over those of last year. Mr. Arthur T. Evans, writing for the Agronomy department of the South Dakota College of Agriculture, places the yield of potatoes this year for his state at between 52,000 and 58,000 bushels. Last year's crop amounted to 52,000 bushels.

The Omaha Farm Bureau will hold a social as their regular monthly meeting on Friday evening of this week. Mr. George R. Boemer will give one of his entertaining talks along the line of co-operative marketing. A splendid time is expected.

CONSIDER THE DAIRY COW

Consider the dairy cow, she is the mother of prosperity; treat her with the respect and consideration that is her due, for literally speaking from her do great blessings flow. Feed her well that she may give you bounteous return and shelter her from winter's biting blasts and summer's scorching heat. Drive her not with a cudgel or a brick-bat nor kick and shove her in her stall. Meek is her manner and great is her desire and power to do much good. See that she liveth in cleanly quarters and keep from her immediate presence all filth and barnyard waste that she may reward you with a fluid sweet and clean life-giving element. Her's is a great power for good and always will she reward him that doth give unto her the maximum of care and attention. Consider the dairy cow—she is worth consideration.—H. E. Jump, Montana.
