BUSINESS AND HOMES.

The Cause of the Trolley Car and the Street Railway.

On one point the American is determined—he will not live near his work. You shall see him in the morning, one of sixty people in a car built for twenty-four, reading his paper, clinging to a strap, trodden, jostled, smothered, thrown into harrowing relations with men who drink whisky, chew tobacco, eat raw onions and incontinently breathe, and after thirty minutes of this contact, with the roar of the streets in his ears, with languid clerks and pinguid market women leaning against him, he arrives at his office. The problems of his homeward journey in the evening will be still more difficult, because, in addition to the workers, the cars must carry the multitude of demoiselles who shop and go to matinees.

To many men and women of business a seat is an undreamed of luxury. Yet they would be insulted if one were to ask why they did not live over their shops, as Frenchmen do, or back of them, like Englishmen. It is this uneasy instinct of Americans, this desire of their families to separate industrial and social life, that makes the use of the trolley car imperative, and the street railway in this manner widens the life and dominion of the people. It enables them to distribute themselves over wider spaces and unwittingly to symbolize the expansiveness of the nation.

Heroic Courtesy.

A French writer on "The Revolution, the Empire and the Restoration" cites an amusing instance of what he calls heroic courtesy. Percy, Lord Beverly, invited to dine with him a marquis who was one of the most valiant soldiers of the army of Conde. Wishing to honor his guest and the cause which he served, that of the French king, the English peer ordered his butler to bring him a bottle of fine wine 100 years ago, "a ray of sun shut in crystal." He opened it carefully and offered a glass to the marquis, saying, "If you deem it worthy the honor, will you drink in this wine the health of the king?"

The marquis tasted the wine. "How do you like it?" asked the host. "Exquisite," replied the marquis. "Then," said Lord Beverly, "finish the glass. Only in a full glass can one drink the health of so great and so unfortunate a king." Without hesitation the marquis did as he was bidden. Only when the Englishman tasted the wine did he learn that what he had forced on his guest was castor oil.

At John Knox's Grave.

The guidebooks unite in telling the visitor in Edinburgh to see the grave of John Knox. It is situated in Parliament square and is marked by a small rectangular slab of stone sunk in the cobblestone paving of the street, with the chiseled inscription, "J. K. 1573." But it is odds against even the acute tourist that he finds the great reformer at once, for only five feet away from the holy ground there is a similar sunken slab, and many times a day parties of tourists may be seen approaching on tiptoe the second stone and bending over it with keen interest only to read, "Wilking Patent Hydrant," and find themselves face to face with the water supply system of a modern town instead of the bones of the eminent clergyman.

He Overdid It.

Beggem (to himself)—I've got around that rich old great-aunt of mine at last. She's interested in benevolent schemes, and I'm helping her night and day to search out worthy objects. Today she said I'd have cause for rejoicing when her will was read.

His Great-aunt (to herself)—I had no idea my grandnephew was so good. It worries him almost sick to see so much misery in the world. How delighted he will be to find that all my money is to go to the support of the poor friendless orphans!—New York Weekly.

Dodging a Tip.

Polite Diner—You have waited upon me very acceptably, and I have enjoyed my meal thoroughly. You have behaved like a gentleman, and a gentleman you certainly are, notwithstanding your humble occupation.

Walter—I hope, sir, that I am a gentleman. I always try to be one.
Polite Diner—It is as I suspected, and, being a gentleman, I shall not insult you by offering you money. Perhaps at some time I may be able to reciprocate your courtesy. Till then farewell.

Conditions So Similar.

"Does that moon remind you of anything?" he asked, his mind reverting to their courtship days.

"Yes," she answered.
"What?" he asked.
"You," she said; "on club nights."
He looked again. Yes, the moon was in that condition.—Chicago Post.

Negative Virtue's Poor Reward.

"Why, papa," she argued, "you know Arbuthnot never drinks, chews, smokes, gambles or swears."

"Yes, I know," the rugged unromantic old man answered, "but I don't want a chap for a son-in-law who merely doesn't do things."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Charge.

Blobbs—I hear you lost your suit. Was the judge's charge unfavorable?
Slobbs—Oh, I'm not kicking about that. What makes me sore is my lawyer's charge.—Philadelphia Record.

Wrinkles come, the face fades, but the soul speaks just as eloquently from the eye where hope has conquered care.—Schoolmaster.
