WOMEN MOB POLICE ON BROADWAY AT ROCHE WEDDING

5,000 in Hysterical Crowd, Some with Babies, Fight and Trample Each Other for Blocks Around Grace Church.

Five thousand hysterical, struggling women, some of them bearing helpless babies in their arms, pressed around the doors of Grace Church to-day and fought with the police in their efforts to see Miss Cynthia Burke Roche marry Arthur S. Burden. Not since the Duke of Roxburgh wedded Miss May Goelet has the Police Department been obliged to handle such a mob of frantic women.

Many of the women fainted. One, clinging tightly to a wailing infant, fell beneath the feet of her excited sisters and was badly trampled before she was dragged to safety.

Up and down Broadway on both sides, from Ninth to Fourteenth street, the women struggled and fretted and loudly screamed at one another under the hot sun of high noon. Not a man was in sight. The policemen tried kind words and the pressure of their hands to keep something like order.

The wedding was the great social event of the year. A list of the 500 guests would read like an index to "Who's Who." The women guests were of course exemplifications of what's what in summer styles. That may have been why the women on the sidewalk had come from Harlem and the Bronx and Brooklyn to stand two hours in the sun and humble with the men in blue and brass.

Fought to See Bride.

When the bride's carriage drew up there was the wildest confusion. The women lined up alongside the awning were held back by ten policemen, but the hundreds pressing behind them sent them stumbling and clawing out upon the sacred precincts of the carpeted pathway. Two women with babies in their arms rolled headlong under the awning. They were quickly dragged to their feet by policemen and led away.

Miss Roche looked very beautiful. She was attired all in white and carried a great bunch of white orchids. Her blue eyes sparkled and her plump cheeks were flushed under the veil of lace that was caught about her head and swept back almost to the end of her long train. Her dress was of white satin and cut with a high girdle. It was not the princess effect that has recently been so common among brides.

Before the arrival of the bride, her mother, Mrs. Burke Roche, drove up and went in without attracting much attention. Mrs. Burke Roche, or Mrs. Roche, as she has taken to signing her name, was dressed entirely in rich lavender, with a large picture hat. She took no part in the wedding procession and left after the ceremony with her son.

Decorations White and Green.

The church was strikingly decorated in green and white. The altar was banked with white hydrangeas, with green leaves interspersed. The pews were ornamented with great masses of white peonies and syringas.

Against this background the bridesmaids appeared to great advantage. Each wore a dress of white taffeta, over which was white chiffon, and the high girdle was in blue satin, giving what is called the "baby effect." The skirts were full, with three great plaits, and just escaped the floor.

Their waists were full, with elbow length sleeves and they wore long white gloves. Each of the bridesmaids carried an Empire bouquet of pink roses that matched the roses and pink feathers of their great Tuscan straw hats.

The bridesmaids were the Misses Evelyn Parsons, Nora and Theresa Iselin, Maria Morao, Natica Rives and Sadie Jones.

The bride was not given away by her grandfather, Frank Work, as was expected. He was unable to be present on account of illness. Instead she was led to the altar by her brother, William P. Burden, was his brother's best man. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Huntington, rector of the church.

Townsend Burden Absent.

Although all society was represented, it was noticeable that the Townsend Burdens were absent. The reason for this was not explained, but it kept society reporters all worked up throughout the affair.

While the ceremony was going on the mob of women sweltered in the streets and made things unpleasant for the police. Half a dozen mounted cops came up to help the others. They were hissed by the women when they cavorted their horses along the curbs to "trim off" the crowds.

Finally, the police took the law into their own hands in a way that brought applause from the few men who were trying to dodge the crowd and go on their way to business.

The police began to pick out of the crowd the women who carried babies and tell them that if they didn't take their little ones away they would be locked up. Several of the children seemed almost squeezed to unconsciousness when the police dragged their mothers out and hurried them off.

At last the echoes of the church began to ring in token of the conclusion of the ceremony. Then there was more trouble with the crowd, but by this time there were enough police to handle the disturbance.

Lehr Hid His Face.

The only person who seemed to be really offended by the multitude of photographers about was Harry Lehr. He and Mrs. Lehr and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish lingered behind and were among the last to appear. When Mr. Lehr saw the rapid fire battery of cameras turned full upon him he hid his face in a lace handkerchief and turned his back upon the rude snapshooters. He stood in this fashion for several minutes while his wife and Mrs. Fish tried to persuade him to face the situation. At last he came with them, and, still holding his handkerchief in place, ducked into the carriage.

Word was passed among the women loiterers up and down the pavement that this was Harry Lehr, and he, too, was cheered.

The bridal party went to Sherry's for a breakfast, and many women in the crowd trailed along. Although most of them were outdistanced they took up their stand outside the restaurant to get another glimpse of the society folk when they left.

TWO INSURANCE MEN INDICTED BY GRAND JURY

Presentments Against Gillette and Granniss of the Mutual Life.

Walter R. Gillette and R. A. Granniss, formerly Vice-Presidents of the Mutual Life Insurance Company and members of the Auditing Committee, were indicted by the Special Grand Jury this afternoon. The Grand Jury has been hearing evidence in the life insurance scandals ever since it was empanelled on May 2 and the indictments are the result.

Six indictments were found against Mr. Gillette, four for forgery, one for perjury and one for a misdemeanor in submitting a false statement. There are two indictments against Granniss, one for forgery and one for a misdemeanor in submitting a false report. Richard A. McCurdy, former President of the Mutual Life, was not indicted nor does his name appear in the presentment accompanying the indictments.

Financial Methods Scored.

This presentment is a scorching arraignment of bookkeeping and financial methods as they obtained in the Mutual Life under the old regime. It appears from the Grand Jury's investigations that an attempt has been made to fasten crimes and faults upon men who were in the service of the company, but have died since the investigation was begun.

Evidently a quiet tip had gone out to the indicted men of the intentions of the Grand Jury, because Gillette was at the Criminal Courts Building with his counsel, Forbes J. Hennessy, before the Grand Jury reported, and Grannis arrived a few moments later. The District-Attorney treated them with the greatest consideration.

Bail in the case of Gillette was fixed at $10,000 on the six indictments and was furnished. In the case of Granniss bail was fixed at $5,000. They will be arraigned for pleading on the first Monday in September.

Granniss and Gillette were members of the McCurdy clique in the Mutual Life. They were members of the committee that passed upon the fraudulent payments made to Andy Fields for "Yellow Dog" purposes through the so-called supply department.

Indictments Ridiculed.

Were it not for the respect due to the processes of the law there would have been howls of mirth around the Criminal Courts Building over the indictments. A well-known lawyer, who has taken a great deal of interest in the life insurance investigations, calls them "almost as a joke on the wrist."

The forgery indictments against Gillette are based upon mild false entries in the books. The perjury charge grows out of his statement to the Grand Jury that he was the personal owner of a bank account in the Dobbs Ferry Bank, when, in fact, it appears he was simply trustee.

The forgery charge against Granniss is that he failed to enter in the annual report to the State Superintendent of Insurance for 1904 the net profits of the company, amounting to $1,044,058.23. The misdemeanor charge is based upon his forwarding to the Insurance Department this misleading report.

Harrison K. Bird, formerly a member of Gov. Odell's staff, signed Gillette's bond. George H. Granniss, a brother of R. A. Granniss, went his bail.

Witnesses Against Themselves.

From indorsements on the backs of the affidavits the names of the witnesses have been secured. It was immediately remarked that each of the indicted men was a witness against himself.

Previously when a man has been called upon to testify against himself before the Grand Jury the circumstance has furnished basis for an appeal for the setting aside of the indictment.

The witnesses against Gillette were Isaac F. Lloyd, Charles E. Parsons, Edward W. Rogers, C. C. Gretsinger, Andrew Fields, Charles F. Gleason and Walter R. Gillette. Against Granniss there appeared Robert A. Granniss, Isaac F. Lloyd, Charles A. Preller, C. C. Gretsinger, Alfred McKay, Samuel Hall and E. L. Vredenburgh.

The indictments against Gillette were numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6. The indictments against Granniss were numbered 9 and 10. What became of indictments Nos. 7 and 8 has not been explained.

One of counsel appearing in court for Mr. Gillette was Mr. Hanford, of the firm of Choate, Hanford & Laroque, of which the former Ambassador to Great Britain is the senior member. When the time came for the arraignment District-Attorney Jerome said to Mr. Hanford:

"Bring him up quick and have the strain over."

The Presentment.

Justice Scott discharged the Grand Jury with the thanks of the court when the indictments had been handed in. The presentment accompanying the indictments was as follows:

"That beginning its inquiries pursuant to the charge of the court it has confined its investigation largely to the determination of the manner in which one branch of the business of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, of New York, was conducted.

"The evidence before it has clearly shown that each year for many years past large sums of the company's money have been expended by means most irregular and fraudulent, and though probably applied to uses thought to be for the benefit of the company, such expenditures have been also improper or questionable in character; that no entries of them have been made on the books of the company, nor have any vouchers showing the character of the disbursements been taken.

"The system employed was confessedly designed to deceive or conceal, and has rendered it very difficult to fix responsibility.

"Moreover, the death of several persons whose evidence might have been of great value has apparently encouraged a tendency to shift burdens upon the dead which others, perhaps, would have had to bear had death not intervened.

Hard to Find Proof.

"The court charged that the law required we should not find an indictment unless satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused. This injunction we have strictly obeyed, but its observance has made it easier for us to become convinced where guilt existed than to find indictments based upon legal evidence which could satisfy our minds beyond any reasonable doubt.

"In more than one case where crimes have apparently been committed some link in the chain of legal truth has been missing and there has not seemed to be any means by which it could be supplied.

"Investigations of this character necessarily require much time if they are thorough, and the labor expended cannot always be measured by the results. We have gone as far as we could in the time available. We are informed subsequent grand juries will continue the investigation. We do not believe that a continuance of our work during the short time remaining in this term would be of any public service."

CUBS DRUBBED BROOKLYNITES IN HOLLOW STYLE

BY JOHN POLLOCK.

WASHINGTON PARK, Brooklyn, N. Y., June 11.—The Chicago Cubs had an easy time beating the Brooklyns this afternoon, trouncing them by a score of 8 runs to 3.

Pastorius, the young southpaw, was hit hard by Chance's men in the first two innings the Cubs making five runs off his delivery, which clinched the game. Big Overall was too much for the Trolley Dodgers.

First Inning.

Little Slagle sprinted to first after Pastorius had failed to get four over the plate. Sheckard out to Jordan, unassisted, Slagle moving up. Schulte lifted his ball over the score board for a home run, sending Slagle ahead of him. Chance drove to right for a base. A passed ball allowed him to reach second, and on Steinfeldt's drive to centre for a base he crossed the plate, Tinker filed to Maloney. Steinfeldt caught stealing second, Ritter's throw to Alperman. THREE RUNS.

Casey banged a fast grounder to Chance, who retired "Jimmy." Batch lifted a high fly to Slagle, who got it after a sprint. Lumley laced a safe bunt to the infield. He stole second, Tinker dropping Kling's throw. Jordan was deadheaded to first by Overall. Maloney banged a bounder to Evers, who threw him out. NO RUNS.

Second Inning.

Evers hit a slow one to Pastorius, who nipped him at first. Kling pounded a three-bagger over Batch's head. Overall sat to Pastorius, who threw to Casey, and Kling was captured between third and the plate and touched out by Ritter on a rundown play to second. Slagle singled, scoring Overall, and stole second. Sheckard walked. Schulte singled, Slagle scoring. As Sheckard tried to score he was nailed at the plate on Lumley's throw to Ritter. TWO RUNS.

Ritter swung at three and went to the bench. Alperman's high soarer was collared by Sheckard. Hummel also sent one up to the clouds and Schulte smothered it. NO RUNS.

Third Inning.

Kling's fly to deep centre was caught by Maloney, who after a hard run, also gathered in Steinfeldt's raiser. Tinker soaked a hot one to Casey, who retired him. NO RUNS.

Pastorius let three cut the air without a swing. Casey bunted in front of the plate, but was nailed by a quick hurl to Chance. Batch drove a high one to Sheckard. NO RUNS.

Fourth Inning.

Evers pushed a liner to centre, which was good for a base, and stole second, no one covering the bag. Kling singled, scoring Evers. Overall sacrificed. Slagle made a scratch hit to the infield, Kling going to third. Sheckard filed out to Jordan. Schulte out, Jordan, unassisted. ONE RUN.

Lumley's low liner was collared by Sheckard. Jordan's foul fly was easy for Kling. Maloney pasted to centre for a sack and stole second. Ritter hit safely in centre, scoring Maloney. Alperman also singled, Ritter reaching second. Hummel walked, filling the bases. McIntyre batted for Pastorius and struck out, like a boy in knee pants. ONE RUN.

Fifth Inning.

McIntyre began pitching for Brooklyn. Chance shot a grass cutter to Alperman and perished. Steinfeldt lifted a fly, which gave Lumley an easy catch. Tinker was called out on strikes. NO RUNS.

Casey filed to Schulte. Batch slammed a liner to centre which netted him two bases. Lumley drew a free pass. Jordan raised a soarer which Slagle nailed. Maloney walked, filling the bases. Ritter bunted to Overall, who threw him out. NO RUNS.

Sixth Inning.

Maloney sprinted to deep centre to pull down Evers's fly. Kling fanned out. Overall also swung calmly at McIntyre's benders. NO RUNS.

Alperman singled. Hummel filed to Chance. McIntyre was thrown out at first by Steinfeldt. Alperman reaching second. Casey hit to centre for two bases, scoring Alperman. Batch bunted straight to Overall, who threw him out. ONE RUN.

Seventh Inning.

Slagle fanned. Sheckard singled. Schulte's liner was too hot for Casey and went for a hit, Sheckard reaching second. Chance forced Schulte on his grounder to Alperman, Sheckard reaching third, and then stole second unmolested. Steinfeldt singled, scoring Sheckard and Chance. Tinker bunted and was retired by McIntyre. TWO RUNS.

Lumley out, Evers to Chance. Jordan hit against right field fence, but only got one base. Maloney was called out on strikes. Ritter out, Evers to Chance. NO RUNS.

Eighth Inning.

Evers filed to Batch. Kling's high one was taken by Alperman. Overall was retired by Jordan, unassisted. NO RUNS.

Alperman's bunt was handled by Steinfeldt and Chance. Hummel's bounder let him out. McIntyre out, Overall to Chance. NO RUNS.

Ninth Inning.

Slagle struck out. Sheckard filed to Batch. Schulte fanned out. NO RUNS.

Casey wiled Batch's grounder went through Tinker's legs. Casey reaching third. Lumley filed to Sheckard, Casey scoring. Jordan walked. Maloney fanned. Ritter out, Steinfeldt to Chance. ONE RUN.

MOTHER ILL, HANGS HERSELF IN HOME.

NEWARK, N. J., June 11.—Mrs. Caroline C. Nelson, thirty-two years of age, hanged herself to-day at her home on Jay street. She was missed by neighbors and a search made for her. She was found dead, hanging from a door frame.

Her husband was summoned from work and said the only reason he could give for his wife's act was despondency because of ill health. The woman leaves two children.

REDS SHUT OUT BY GIANTS, WHO SCORE ONLY ONE.

McGann drew a base on balls. Daniel died stealing second. NO RUNS.

Second Inning.

Seymour was thrown out on a short crack to Dahlen. Lobert was too slow for Gibert's quick throw. Corcoran singled to centre, but it was of no avail, as Odwell was killed off by a grass cutter to Gilbert. NO RUNS.

Mertes got a start on a base on balls. Dahlen was an easy out on a high fly to Odwell. Devlin shot a short one to Huggins and Mertes was forced at second. Devlin was caught napping at first. NO RUNS.

Third Inning.

Schlei and Fraser both walked the plank on grass cutters to Dahlen. Devlin then made short work of Huggins. NO RUNS.

Kelly got Gilbert's high fly. Bowerman went out on a long fly to Kelley. McGinnity then broke the ice with a pretty single into right. Bresnahan followed with a single to left and McGinnity went to third. Roger went to second on the throw to catch McGinnity. Browne wound it up with a bounder to Schlei. NO RUNS.

Fourth Inning.

Livingston's line smash got away from Browne and rolled to the ropes for three bases. Kelley hoisted a fly to Mertes and there was no advance. Seymour struck out, to the great delight of those present. Lobert got the same dose and McGinnity got the glad hand. NO RUNS.

McGann cracked a liner against Huggins's shins and it rolled safe into right field. Mertes popped a high fly to Huggins. Dahlen was thrown out by Huggins, while McGann went to second. Seymour was waiting for Devlin's fly and there was nothing doing. NO RUNS.

Fifth Inning.

Corcoran dropped a slow one, but Devlin's one-hand stop got him. Odwell dropped a bunt in front of the plate. Schlei struck out. NO RUNS.

Lobert made a nice play and threw Gilbert out at first. Bowerman hit to left. McGinnity's pretty sacrifice sent Bowerman to second. Bresnahan was there with the needed hit and sent a single in to centre, scoring Bowerman, and went to second on the throw-in. Browne rolled out to Schlei. ONE RUN.

Sixth Inning.

Fraser was thrown out by Dahlen. Huggins took the count in the same way. Livingston rolled a slow one to McGann and beat it out. Gilbert threw Kelley out with ease. NO RUNS.

Lobert sat McGann down with a nice throw. Mertes drove a fly to Odwell. Huggins fumbled Dahlen's grounder long enough to make a bad throw and Bill was safe. Dahlen was then out stealing second. NO RUNS.

Seventh Inning.

The mighty Seymour struck out again. Lobert died on a bunt to McGinnity. Devlin threw out Corcoran. NO RUNS.

Huggins was camping under Devlin's fly. He also chopped Gilbert off by a quick throw. Bowerman was squelched on a roller to Corcoran. NO RUNS.

Eighth Inning.

Dahlen tossed Odwell out. Schlei singled to left. Fraser drove a long fly to Bresnahan. Higgins strolled to first. Livingston went out on a hot one to McGinnity. NO RUNS.

McGinnity went out, Huggins to Schlei. Bresnahan was out on a foul to Livingston. Browne filed to Odwell. NO RUNS.

Ninth Inning.

Devlin threw out Kelley at first. Seymour popped out to Ahlen. Lobert singled to centre. Corcoran filed to Bresnahan. NO RUNS.

LONG SHOTS SWEEP THE BOARD AT THE GRAVESEND TRACK.

and won by six lengths from Dromedary, who beat Oro a length.

Long Shot Home First.

Grenade, the long chance, jumped to the front at the start and was in front to the first turn, where there was a bad jumble on the part of the others. This enabled Grenade to open up a gap of half a dozen lengths on Samson and Oliver Cromwell, while the others were strung out all over the track. Grenace held his own and lasted long enough to beat Bullseye a nose. Oliver Cromwell was third, a length and a half away.

Acrobat at 30 to 1.

Berkeley, a 100-to-1 chance, rushed to the front right after the start, opened up a gap of four lengths in the turn and showed the way to the stretch, followed by Acrobat and Master Lester. In the stretch Berkeley blew up and there was a general closing up, Acrobat winning by a head from Master Lester, who beat Red River a head, the latter being a head in front of Clare Russell.

One More Long Shot.

Edith James was the favorite in the fifth race, but was beaten through a bad ride, which seemed almost criminal. The sprinter, Ocean Spray, and Tipping made the running for the first six furlongs and then quit. Janeta then ran into the lead and staying there to the end won by two and a half lengths from Palette, who was a head in front of Edith James.

Fontainbleau Was Fast.

Curriculum made the early pace, but was passed by Bat Masterson, who showed the way to the stretch, where Fontainbleau closed and came in a head in front of Bat Masterson, who beat George S. Davis a head.

SLAYER'S SON MAY SEND HIM TO DEATH CHAIR

Brute McPartland's Children Witnesses Against Him on Trial.

The two children of James McPartland, alias "Sharkey the Brute," were brought to-day by the prosecution to the court-room where a jury is trying to give evidence that would help Foster, of General Sessions, for murder in the first degree. They were expected to give evidence that would help send the prisoner to the chair. The son, a sickly boy, told his story in straightaway fashion, adding materially to the loops of evidence which Assistant District-Attorney Arthur Train is winding about the burly assailant, who, it is alleged, first assaulted and then killed aged Mrs. Lena Hoepful in her flat at No. 255 East Seventy-fifth street before the eyes of her bedridden and helpless husband.

The other child, a girl, calmly repudiated all the statements she had made.

"I said it—yes—but it isn't true," was the answer she made a dozen times, at least, as Mr. Train tried vainly to draw from her the story she had already told to Police Captain Handy, to the Coroner, to the Grand Jurors and to Mr. Train himself.

Children Are Weaklings

The appearance of the two young McPartlands, Mary, aged fourteen, and James, Jr., aged twelve, made a pathetic picture. Both were anaemic, scantily clad and apparently undefed. They were tall beyond their years, with thin, hollow cheeks and ashy skins. The gross father, with his heavy features, made a strong contrast to the two forlorn, lanky little figures. The mother, a dismal shape in rusty black, sat at the back of the courtroom.

The testimony of the son was short. He said that after the murder, when his father was arrested, he found, under the pillow of the elder McPartland's bed, a revolver which has been identified as the property of the Hoepfels. He claimed that McPartland took the weapon away from the unfortunate victim when he invaded the flat of the old couple. McPartland listened without any show of interest to the boy's statement.

Girl Retracts Story.

Then came the turn of the daughter. Mr. Train expected her to say that her father came home at 4 o'clock on the morning in question and asked her mother for clothing and money, saying he must get away, as he had just killed a woman.

The girl admitted having told this story on at least five different occasions, but, under oath, she said once in a signed and sworn affidavit, but she stoutly declared over and over again that what she had said was not true.

She admitted having told Mr. Train that her father's lawyer had advised her to refuse to give evidence against the accused man. Finally, in despair, Mr. Train sent the girl from the stand.

HARVARD CREWS OFF FOR RED TOP

(Special to The Evening World.)

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 11.—The Harvard Varsity crews, the eight and the four-oared, with the Freshmen eight and four-oared, left Harvard square at 2.30 o'clock this afternoon for their training quarters at Red Top, on the Thames. Twenty-eight oarsmen and four coxswains made up the party. As the car drew out of the square a crowd of students gave the crew men a big send-off. Every one of the oarsmen was in the pink of condition, and all seemed confident of a successful outcome of the big races at New London. The following were the men, with their positions they will row in:

Varsity Eight Oar—Capt. Filley, stroke; Newhall, 7; Bacon, 6; Richardson, 5; Glass, 4; Magan, 3; Fish, 2; Tappan, bow; Brandegee, coxswain.

Varsity Four Oar—Hall, stroke; Emmons, Richards, 2; Gill, bow, and Arnold, coxswain. Substitutes, Sowin and Tilton.

Freshman Eight—Cutler, stroke; Backeman, 7; Lunt, 6; Faulkner, 5; Mulligan, 4; Severance, 3; Crandall, 2; Reinhard, bow and Wise, coxswain. Substitute, Ree
