WOMAN CAUGHT AT MORGAN BANK FREED BY COURT

Mrs. Williams or Winans to Go Back to England with Her Son.

OUT OF THE SANITARIUM

Had Been Held a Prisoner on What Judge Dugro Calls Illegal Commitment.

Justice Dugro in the Supreme Court to-day discharged Mrs. Ellen Barbare Williams, the Englishwoman who created a row in the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. on learning that although a referee appointed to take testimony as to her sanity and report to Justice Greenbaum had concluded the hearings on May 25, he had not yet reported.

Mrs. Williams was brought to court from Breezehurst Terrace Sanitarium at Whitestone, L. I., by an attendant on a writ of habeas corpus granted by Justice Dugro on Mrs. Williams's own petition, in which she asserted that no warrant was ever issued for her arrest and that she was detained without a commitment.

Justice Greenbaum had indorsed on the certificate of the Bellevue alienists, Drs. Gregory and Waterman, "sent by consent" to this sanitarium.

Justice Dugro declares this was no commitment, and that he couldn't see why anybody should detain her upon it. So he discharged her from custody.

Surprise for Lawyers.

This result was a big surprise for her lawyers, who had asked Justice Dugro to appoint a referee to take testimony all over again and report to him as to the woman's sanity, and had consented to an adjournment until Saturday to give Assistant Corporation Counsel Cowie an opportunity to prepare a return to the writ of habeas corpus.

Mrs. Williams was much excited over it. She was taken away by her son, C. E. Williams, who came from England to take her home, but would not accept her release to him under an adjudication that she was insane.

Neither the Williamses nor the lawyer would talk about the future plans of Mrs. Williams, who has been three months a prisoner on the charge of insanity.

Arrest at the Bank.

Mrs. Williams was handled into a cab near the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co. on March 14, and hustled before Magistrate Wahle, who committed her to the Bellevue psycopathic ward for examination as to her sanity.

Justice Greenbaum appointed James J. Neails as referee. He took the testimony of a score of witnesses—among them Drs. Gregory and Waterman, of the Bellevue psycopathic ward—that Mrs. Williams was suffering from delusive and insane ideas.

She told these physicians that when King Edward's father, Prince Albert, was alive, Queen Victoria was jealous of her.

Drs. John H. Girdner and Joseph Collins, appointed by Justice Greenbaum at the request of ex-Judge S. J. Taylor, at that time counsel for Mrs. Williams, to examine her, also testified that she was a paranoiac.

It was said at the time of her arrest that she had created a disturbance in J. P. Morgan & Co.'s bank and had threatened to shoot Mr. Steele, a member of the Morgan firm.

"I did not threaten to shoot Mr. Steele," said Mrs. Williams to an Evening World reporter to-day. "I did say, and I say it now, and will say it to my dying day, that any man who would conspire, as Mr. Steele and Mr. Morgan, jr., had conspired to rob a widow and an orphan of their just dues ought to be shot—and he ought to be shot!"

Mrs. Williams said she had charged that J. P. Morgan had acted as her banker and that she had agreed to force the trustees in Baltimore of the estate left by D. C. Winans to make a settlement. She married Winans in 1881, but learned afterward that he already had a wife. She asserts that Morgan, jr., and Mr. Steele had prevented J. P. Morgan from carrying out his agreement. Mr. Morgan was in Europe and she had called at the bank to go an explanation from his son and Steele.

How Mistake Occurred.

Chandler Oakes, of her counsel, said to-day that one of the Baltimore trustees was named Steele, and that he closely resembled Mr. Morgan's partner.

"Mr. Steele came in and crossed the lobby to his room," said Mr. Oakes. "Mrs. Williams asked who he was, and when told that it was Mr. Steele supposed it was the Baltimore trustee of that name, which led to the remark she made."

Mrs. Williams told an Evening World reporter that she had no charge to make against J. P. Morgan.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Cowie, over whose application to Justice Greenbaum to release Mrs. Williams-Winan committed to the State Hospital for the Insane all the row was raised, said that at that time it had not developed that Mrs. Williams—who says Winans took that name when he married her—had any means. It developed in the proceedings before Referee Neails that Winans left a trust fund of $250,000 for her by will, which, since the big Baltimore fire, yielded only $2,500 annual income. Then it developed that she had a son, C. E. Williams, in London, and the proceedings were delayed to give him a chance to come to this city.

He came here and said he would take his mother home to England. He demurred to having her adjudged a lunatic, and then the matter hung until Mr. Oakes got to-day's writ from Justice Dugro.

PRISON KEEPERS DINE.

Diamond Badge Presented Commissioner Lantry by Subordinates.

Business lagged in the police courts of the city to-day because the prison keepers were out late last night. The occasion was the annual banquet of the Prison Keepers' Benevolent Association, and 155 of them ate and made merry at Terrace Garden.

Commissioner of Corrections Frank Lantry was the guest of honor. He was presented with a diamond-studded badge. John Lynch, head keeper at Yorkville prison, was the toastmaster and chairman of the Committee on Arrangements.

MAYOR DEFENDS JEROME IN TALK TO COLLEGIANS

District-Attorney "Unjustly" Attacked, McClellan Declares.

(Special to The Evening World.)

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., June 13.—Mayor George B. McClellan, of New York, was the principal speaker at the commencement exercises of Union University to-day. He spoke on "The Profession of Politics," and his address was away out of the lines of the usual commencement day oration. A defense of District-Attorney Jerome aroused great enthusiasm.

Mayor McClellan advised his young hearers to go into politics as a profession—not as a trade—if they should be fitted for the task. He declared that it is the duty of every citizen of the United States to take a direct part in politics and devote to the interests of the people the same application he uses in other important affairs of life. Some of the striking paragraphs in Mayor McClellan's speech follow:

"Profession,' Not "Trade."

"Do not misunderstand me. By the profession of politics I do not mean the trade of politics. The two are vastly different. A professional politician may be a statesman; a political tradesman may be a criminal.

"There is no occupation more ignoble, more sordid, more despicable than the trade of politics. There is none more inspiring, more capable of good, than its profession.

"Except for the bare necessities of existence, money cannot honestly be made in politics.

"There is no such thing as honest graft. The so-called 'honest grafter' is far more to be feared than the bank burglar, and does far more harm than his less cowardly, if less successful brother in State's prison.

"The theory that graft can, under certain circumstances, be honest, has done more to discredit a great profession than all the mud-slingers, yellow journalists, and muck-rakers combined. Don't expect to succeed in politics, don't even try for such success unless you are determined to preserve your self-respect.

He Defends Jerome.

"If you abuse a public man long enough, and cleverly enough, you will end by making him either famous or infamous. Six months ago the District-Attorney of my home county was the idol of the press. To-day, some of those who were then warmest in his support are most unjustly clamoring for his downfall, because he has failed to do the impossible.

"We Americans are a curious combination of a softers and hero-worshippers. The fluctuations in the hero market are so great that it is only the half-forgotten worthy, dead and gone, who is sure of his place in the minutes of history.

"I cannot urge too strongly upon you the necessity of entering the field of politics in a healthy state of morals. Our professional politicians need reinforcement, and they look to the young men of the country for it. There is a sad oversupply of political tradesmen."
