St. Nicholas for September

is an especially attractive number, containing a happy combination of those features which go to make up a successful child's magazine.

Among the stories are one of Frank R. Stockton's inimitable fanciful tales, entitled "The Queen's Museum," with four of Bensell's characteristic illustrations; the first half of "The Dalzells of Daisydown," a fresh and breezy study of boy and girl life, by E. Vinton Blake; and "Benny's Horse," an exceedingly amusing and naturally told story, by Mary Catherine Lee.

Then there are the month's installments of the three serials: "Daisy's Jewel-Box, and How She Filled It," is the title of Louisa M. Alcott's "Spinning-wheel Story;" "Brian Born the Boy Chieftain," is the hero of E. S. Brooks's "Historic Boys" for September; and Maurice Thompson takes "Marvin and his Boy Hunters" through some highly interesting adventures along the Gulf coast of Southern Florida, and leaves them for a month in an extremely dangerous predicament.

But "truth is stranger than fiction," and the three natural history papers in this issue—"The Bird Matinee," "Swordsmen of the Deep," and "A Story of a Tree-Frog" will be found to bear out the truth of the maxim.

The verse is a bundant and well chosen, —the most notable contributions being "The Little Quaker Sinner," a delightful quaint poem by Lucy Lincoln Montgomery, which opens the number; "The Playmate Hours," by Mary Thacher Higginson, and the very original "Floral Letters," which will puzzle, amuse and instruct the readers, both young and old, of the magazine.

Charles Barnard contributes a comprehensive account of a New York Kitchen Garden, in the form of a story, and George B. Bartlett tells of a new amusement for summer nights or winter evenings.

The September Century.

In its contents the September Century aims to rival the August "Midsummer Holiday number" in entertaining summer reading, as well as in articles of unusual importance. Pictorially it is also of a popular character. In the frontispiece Mrs. Mary Hallock Foote has given a refined interpretation of "Pancha," the heroine of a romantic story of Monterey, which Thomas A. Janvier contributes to the number, and the same artist further illustrates the story with two other characteristic drawings. The other short story of the number is a humorous dialect story of southern life, called "The Brief Embarrassment of Mr. Iverson Blount," by Richard Malcolm Johnston, the author of the "Dukesborough Tales." Charles G. Leland's "Legends of the Passamaquoddy" Indians (with illustrations drawn on birch bark by a Quadi Indian) has the interest of fiction as well as a value to students of folk-lore. Henry James' two-part story, "A New England Winter," is concluded, and Hjalmar H. Boyesen's longer novelette "A Problematic Character" is continued. Mr Cable's novel "Dr. Sevier" approaches the conclusion, which will be printed in the October number.

PRICKLY ASH

BITTERS

The majority of the ills of the human body arise from a disarrangement of the Liver, affecting both the stomach and bowels. In order to effect a cure, it is necessary to remove the cause. Irregularity and sluggish action of the Bowels, Dyspepsia, Sickness at the Stomach, Pain in the back and Loins, etc., indicate that the liver is at fault, and that nature requires assistance to enable this organ to throw off impurities.

Prickly Ash Bitters are especially compounded for this purpose. They are mild in their action and effective as a cure; are pleasant to the taste and taken easily by both children and adults. Taken according to directions, they are a speedy and permanent cure for Dyspepsia, General Debility, Habitual Constipation, Diseased Kidneys, Chronic Diarrhœa. Further they are superior to any other medicines in ridding the system thoroughly, and imparting new life and energy to the invalid. It is a medicine and not an intoxicating beverage.

20,000,000 Acres of Land

For Sale in New Mexico and Arizona

The Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company.

The Land Grant of this Company, in alternate sections, extends entirely across the Territories of New Mexico and Arizona, between the 34th and 36th degrees of north latitude. It is 650 miles long and 80 miles wide and includes some of the best grazing lands of both Territories. In the valleys are many desirable tracts of agricultural land, susceptible of irrigation. A sufficiency of water has been found wherever cattle and sheep have been grazed, and large herds have been grazed in the country near since the coming of the Mexicans. Wells have been sunk and good water has been obtained. On the summit of the Sierra Madre, in the vicinity of Fort Wingate, the numerous herds of the Navajo Indians (a tribe numbering some 12,000 or 15,000 souls) have been grazed for the last hundred years, and good crops of corn, oats, barley, and graden vegetables are grown by irrigation.

A stream of running water (the San Jose) rises near the summit of the Sierra Madre, and runs seventy-five miles eastward to the Rio Puerco, and the company's road follows the whole length of its valley. There are numerous fine valleys opening into the valley of the San Jose, flanked by grassy and wooded hills, upon which there is an open growth of small cedar and pinon. There is an extensive belt of good pine timber on the mountains, near the railroad, and good springs are found on both slopes of the Sierra Madre. There is a large coal field west of Fort Wingate which has not yet been fully explored, and which will afford labor for a large population; there are also coal deposits on the eastern slope of the Sierra Madre. Many varieties of building stone are found in great abundance along the line of the road.

In Arizona the grazing areas are supplied with good water, and the United States surveyors, who made the official surveys of the country, say they are as good, if not better, than those of Wyoming and Montana. The Navajo Indians grow corn without irrigation, in the valley of the Puerco of the West, on the Company's lands, and in the valley of the Little Colorado, also on the line of the road, good crops of corn, sorghum, oats, barley, and garden vegetables are grown by irrigation. The finest of potatoes, oats, wheat, barley and garden vegetables of large size and fine quality, have been successfully grown without irrigation on the slopes of the San Francisco mountains.

On these mountains there is an extensive timber belt, diversified by beautiful valleys and parks, with good water and wonderful canons, through which the road passes. In fact, the whole of the country traversed by the road is very picturesque and beautiful, and many towns are being built along its route.

The valley of the Rio Grande, at Albuquerque, is 5000 feet above the sea, and the passes of the Sierra Madre and the San Francisco mountains, in Arizona, have elevations of 7300 feet, with a depression at Winslow, on the Little Colorado, where the altitude is 5000 feet. The climate is mild and salubrious. Cattle and sheep graze throughout the year, and do not need to be sheltered or grain fed during the winter. The nights are cool during the summer.

The Company is now prepared to make sales of its grazing lands in quantities of 50,000 acres, or more, at prices ranging from one dollar (or even less for larger quantities), to one dollar and a half an acre, upon payment of one-fourth the purchase value at date of contract of sale, the remainder in payments as may be agreed upon, bearing six per cent. interest; and irrigable agricultural lands in tracts of 40 acres or more.

The belt of the Atlantic & Pacific railroad land grant includes the only available grazing land in the country south of the Missouri river that can be purchased in large areas; and the section of country through which this road passes will become the best beef producing region of the United States.

Maps of the Land Grant will be forwarded on application, and properly accredited persons desiring to inspect grazing lands, with a view to purchase and establish stock ranches, will be given facilities for that purpose.
