ON EVE OF RACE BRITISH EXPERTS CHOOSE HARVARD

Americans' Body and Leg Work Will Score a Victory, They Say.

(Special to The Evening World.)

PUTNEY, England, Sept. 7.—On the eve of the Harvard-Cambridge eight-oared race many of the leading rowing experts pick the Yankees to win. The race will be rowed to-morrow, and a record crowd is expected.

An important change has been made in the Cambridge-Harvard University boat race rules, to the effect that if at any point in the race there should be a serious accident to either boat not due to the fault of any individual and materially affecting the result the umpire is empowered to restart the race.

A record crowd turned out to witness the practice of the crews to-day, the increase in the number of Americans being commented upon.

Both crews are supremely confident of success, their trials justifying this belief. There is so little to choose that the betting has again become even. Harvard has improved in the matter of starting and the Cambridge crew has not shown as much speed in their mile trials. It is evident that they intend to wear down the Yankees in the first mile.

Vivian Nickalls, the rowing expert, has picked Harvard to win. "I think that the long work of Harvard will bring them victory," he says. "Then again in all other trials they have shown more speed and endurance than their rivals."

He says the Cantabs will probably lead at the start and as far as Hammersmith Bridge, but there, if Harvard plugs hard at about 32, they ought to begin to draw level and be abreast at Chiswick, where the fight will be stormed. The Americans' body and leg work will give them the victory. Mr. Nickalls complains that the Cambridge crew have not been given enough work. He never saw a training crew do less. They are not thoroughly wound up. The Harvard men have worked harder, and are consequently much fitter.

Other experts express the same opinion. Nickolls is one of the most thorough oarsmen in England, and his verdict has served to buoy up the hopes of the Harvard men.

The principal feature of the practice yesterday was the disclosure of the tactics the Cambridge crew evidently intend to employ in the race on Saturday. Rowing from here to Hammersmith Bridge they devoted their attention entirely to making bursts of speed interspersed with comparatively slow rowing. At the word from their coach aboard the Hibernia they increased their speed from twenty-nine to thirty-six strokes a minute. It became apparent that it is upon these tactics that the Cantabs are depending to win the race, they figuring that the Harvard men will be beat at thirty-two strokes and that these sudden bursts to thirty-six will surely tire them out if they try to keep this stroke up.

SPEEDY WORKOUTS IN MORNING TRIALS

he was off badly, and the leaders opened a big gap on him. He gradually wore down his field and, cutting the corner at the head of the stretch, won cleverly by a length and a half from Zienap, the second choice.

Peter Sterling opened favorite in the fourth race, but Koerner, the favorite killer, had the mount, and Peter Sterling went soaring to the sky in the betting ring. Ostrich went to the front and made all the running. Koerner awoke upon Peter Sterling when it was too late and was beaten a length. Orly II. was half a length away.

Quadrille Danced In.

Quadrille, a hot favorite in the fifth race, went to the front at the start, made all the running and won easily, by three lengths from Teacress, who beat Cloten a head for the place.

Outcome Just Failed.

Miss Crawford made the running to the first turn, where Graziallo took command and showed the way to the backstretch. Here Nealon went to the front andstayed there to the finish. Outcome, who was last on the far turn, came with a rush at the end and just failed to get up. Logistilla was third, five lengths away.
