MRS. DIXON IS GONE WITH PAT'S "LIVING IMAGE"

Woman Who Sued McCarren Disappears from Home in Flatbush.

WITH MAID AND BABY.

Trunks Follow Exodus and Nobody Knows Direction of Flight.

With the now famous "living image of Pat," Mrs. Mary A. Dixon, who recently brought suit again Senator P. H. McCarren for $200,000, has mysteriously disappeared from the home she was occupying in Flatbush.

About two weeks ago Mrs. Dixon repudiated the statements she had made about McCarren, alleging that he was the father of the two-year-old infant that she had flaunted about Brooklyn as Patrick H. McCarren, jr. After making a statement that the allegations on which she had brought her suit for recognition as the wife of McCarren were false, she was quiet for a few days, and then was said to have made another statement. This was that she was not going to withdraw her suit, and that her other statement need not worry any one.

The general impression was that Mrs. Dixon had discontinued her suit for some reason.

All that the long political boss of Brooklyn would say when Mrs. Dixon was most clamorous for recognition was that he knew her, and that he also knew she had a husband who was living, and, consequently, he did not see where she could claim a common law marriage with him while her husband lived.

Husband Made Affidavit.

McCarren's lawyer in time produced an affidavit from the husband, and then followed the announcement by Mrs. Dixon that she had no claim against McCarren. But while the excitement lasted Patrick H. McCarren, jr., came in for quite an amount of notoriety. He was photographed in his mother's arms while she uttered the now famous expression that he was "the image of Pat."

She told of the child's fondness for horses, whether they ran or were just hobby horses, and of other sporting inclinations. All these traits, Mrs. Dixon insisted, were evidences of paternity which showed that Patrick H. McCarren, jr., had inherited from his alleged father tendencies that in after life would make him a chip of the old block.

The disappearance of Mrs. Dixon has probably closed the case, and the person most interested is Clarence E. Spayd, the owner of the house, No. 82 Lenox road, which was occupied by her. According to the neighbors, who have paid a great amount of attention to the handsome woman since her story became public, she left the house last Sunday morning with a woman companion, a maid and the "image of Pat."

Landlord Seeks Her.

On Sunday evening an expressman called and her trunks were taken away. On Tuesday Mr. Spayd called and noticed the house was closed. Neighbors told him that the occupants had gone. Mr. Spayd was interested because of financial transactions with his tenant. To a reporter he said.

"I rented my house to Mrs. Dixon in March last for one year at a rental of $125 a month. I let her have all the furniture in the house, besides linen, china, cooking utensils, some silverware and other articles, for which she agreed to pay about $500. She paid me six weeks' rent in advance, and also $50 on account for the furniture and furnishings. She said she expected to get a large settlement from Senator McCarren, and that she would pay me every cent of any obligation she might incur.

Mr. Spayd went on to say that the woman ran up telephone bills to the amount of nearly $100, and as he failed to collect the money from her he had the telephone company disconnect the instrument, which was in his name.

"Besides this," continued Mr. Spayd, "Mrs. Dixon used on about forty dollars' worth of coal in the cellar that belonged to me, and departed owing me rent for the months of August and September."

INSANE FROM GRIP, HE CUT HIS THROAT

Whiting's Mind Unbalanced After Illness, He Ended Life With Carving Knife.

Alfred A. Whiting, driven insane by illness, which followed an attack of grip, called his wife early to-day and said:

"I'm tired of this and this is the end."

Whiting, a man of fifty-seven, had been employed for twenty years by the T. H. Wheeler Beef Company at Fourteenth street and Tenth avenue. More than two months ago he had an attack of grip, which was so severe that afterwards he was unbalanced mentally. With his wife he lived in an apartment on the first floor at No. 530 West Fifteenth street.

Hoping that his mind would be restored the wife took Whiting to the mountains. There she kept him until a week ago, when he came back to town and resumed work. For the last few days he seemed to realize that his mind was going.

When Mrs. Whiting was awakened this morning she saw that her husband was violent and that he intended harm to himself and possibly to her. She ran from the apartment, screaming. Her screams were heard by John Swanson, janitor. Swanson called Policeman Lanahan, of the West Twentieth street station, and the two went to the Whiting home.

On the floor lay Whiting, his throat cut. In his hand was clutched a carving knife. A physician from New York Hospital said that Whiting had died almost immediately.
