SADDLEROCK RESTAURANT

When You Don't See It.

Here is a story of the pupil who had never been able to discern the difference between "I seen" and "I saw." Her instructor, after laboring long and patiently to instill a ray of light into her mind on the subject, finally succeeded in getting some good examples from the child which would seem to prove that the difference was at last recognized and appreciated. The teacher paused for a moment and demanded of the child a correct explanation of the difference as she saw it. The girl answered beamingly. She was sure of herself, but it took some thinking to express just what she wanted to say. However, after much inward tumult and obvious effort, the following statement was heard:

"When you see a thing it's 'see,' and when you don't see it it's 'saw.'"—San Francisco Call.

Straight Railroad Track.

In spite of the apparently mathematical straight lines which many of the western railroads appear to follow on the map, it has been stated that the record in this respect will be beaten by the new national transcontinental railroad, otherwise known as the Grand Trunk Pacific, 70 miles of which will be constructed without a curve. Five years ago, however, a length of 71 miles of perfectly straight railroad track was constructed on the extension of the Rhodesia railroads from Bulawayo in the direction of the Victoria falls. So far, therefore, as the length of straight line is concerned, the record is held by the portion of the Rhodesia railroads above referred to.

French Scientist's Discovery.

The French scientist, Dr. Fortin, has discovered that the light from a mercury vapor lamp, passing through two sheets of blue glass and reflected into the eye by a large lens, reveals the internal conditions infinitely better than the ordinary white light. By placing a screen with a pin hole between the light and the eye a magnificent image of the vessels at the back of the retina, which have hitherto been almost invisible, has been obtained. The capillary value, the diameter of which is only two-thousandths of a millimeter, are seen to distend with each heartbeat, and it is even possible to count the blood globules.

The Might of Manners.

Good manners cannot be doned nor laid aside like a coat. Whether elegant or simple, they are the expressive and appropriate garment of personality, and it is one of the tests for them that they are habitual and can never be misjudged as being assumed or affected. The least touch of affectation or insincerity is fatal to their value. To have bad manners or no manners is to announce oneself a bore; but to be false behavers is to betray one's inequitable.—Miss Carrico in Smart Set.

Widow Too Impulsive.

She had buried three husbands and the fourth lay cold, while the undertaker measured him. And she was known in the village to have put aside something more than husbands. "It isn't prapz the right time to mention such a matter," said the undertaker to the widow, "but if you was thinking of taking a fifth—" "Now that comes of being precipitous," replied the widow. "I've just took the barber what come to shave the corpse."

All Mapped Out.

"I suppose you are going to make some speeches?" "Yes," answered Senator Sorghum. "I shall deliver a few timely and significant utterances." "Have you thought out what you will say?" "Yes, I shall follow my usual formula. To a few extemporaneous remarks about what I have done for the good of the country, I will add a humorous anecdote and conclude by assuring my constituents that I rely on the wisdom of the plain people."

A Clock of Straw.

A shoemaker named Wegner, living in Strasburg, has sent to the exhibition of inventions at Berlin a clock of the grandfather shape, nearly six feet high, made entirely of straw—wheels, pointers, case, and every detail. Wegner has taken 15 years to construct this strange piece of mechanism. It keeps perfect time, but under the most favorable circumstances cannot last longer than two years.

Arousing the Lion.

If we want to educate that sturdy, solid, unresponsive thing, the British public, a scheme has to be mildly diluted with pleasure, masked by brilliant pictures, like the bitter pill we hide in our children's jam, says the Bystander. We have compulsory schooling, of course, but as a nation we are not and do not want to be educated.

Good Work of Rev. Bunker.

Rev. F. Robert Bunker, who, with his wife and five children, has been in Zambesi, East Africa, for 17 years, has returned to America. His home is in Minnesota. He, with other missionaries, translated "Chindu," which is the native tongue of Zambesi, and made dictionaries and many transcripts of religious works.

Enough and to Spare.

"And the name is to be"—asked the suave minister as he approached the font with the precious armful of fat and flounces. "Augustus Philip Ferdinand Codrington Chesterfield Livingston Snooks." "Dear me!" Turning to the sexton: "A little more water, Mr. Parkins, if you please."—Tit-Bits.
