GOOD SAMARITAN DELUGED WITH MILK

Then a Policeman Took Him to a Cell for a Night's Lodging.

HE LIVED IN PALISADE.

"Never Again!" Says Mr. Richards, Actor—Milkmen in Distress May Go Hang.

Richard Richards is an actor in "The Hypocrites," but he is by way of being a good Samaritan. He will never "Samaritanize" again, he said to-day, for his disposition to help people out of difficulties led to his spending the night in a cell of the West Twenty-seventh Street station, after he had passed through a strenuous battle in which milk bottles flew as thick as bullets at a schutzenfest.

Mr. Richards lives in Palisade, just across the Hudson. After he had washed the make-up off his face last night, he started, by a Forty-second street crosstown car, for his rural home. Palisade at night is lonely place. Not a soul except highwaymen walks its streets. For this reason Mr. Richards carries a revolver, for which he has a permit.

As the car jogged ferrywards and Mr. Richards dozed there came a sudden bump. A milk wagon had planted itself on the track just where the car could thump it square across the hind wheels. Bottles of milk tumbled off in all directions. Most of them were broken, but some remained intact, so Mr. Richards, who viewed the ruin with sympathetic eyes instead of cussin' at the delay, got off to help the driver of this lacteal vehicle save the pieces.

Mr. Richards Sang Cheerily.

The motorman and conductor just looked on while Mr. Richards sang cheerily at his labor of love. He had lifted about half a gallon of milk back on the wagon when—bump! out fell his trusty weapon. The milkman, who is described by Mr. Richards as a "rustic youth," got scared and shouted "help! Thieves!" as loud as he could.

"Calm yourself, me good youth," said Mr. Richards. "I will not harm thee."

"Help! help!" screamed the milkman, not a bit impressed by Mr. Richards's frock-coat and kid-glove manners. Richards leaned over to pick up his shooting iron when the milkman passed from words to actions.

"Oh, splash!" said Mr. Richards as a wet bottle of milk spread a damp island of white on his "conventional black" garb.

"Biff! bang! From the way the milk boy kept the bottles flying through the air he seemed to be as many-armed as a spider and every bottle had its billet, Mr. Richards providing it.

"Along comes Policeman Delaney, wading through the milky seas and other traces of battle.

"Help! help!" beseeched Mr. Richards, who by this time looked as if he had been swimming in a dairy with his clothes on. "Officer of the law, arrest that man!"

"He has a gun!" screamed the merry villager of the milk-wagon.

"Ah, ha!" exclaimed the representative of the law. "I'll have to lock you up."

And locked up Mr. Richards was, despite his protests. Trusty James Churchill was sent for, but not found, and Mr. Richards languished in the donjon keep of the West Thirty-seventh Street Station till dawn.

In the West Side Court to-day the actor, with all the majesty he could summon, besought Magistrate Steinert to grant him speedy hearing. The milkman not having turned up, "The Hypocrites" will go on as usual to-night.

"I don't know what to blame for my quandary," said Mr. Richards, as, honorably discharged, he left the courtroom. "Maybe it's living in Palisade; maybe it's being a helpful disposition; but never again. From this time on I am the declared enemy of all milkmen and all minions of the lacteal trade."

MRS. DAVIS RALLIES IN HER ILLNESS.

Mrs. J. Addison Hayes, Her Daughter, Arrives from Colorado Springs to Be at Her Side.

The condition of Mrs. Jefferson Davis, who at the age of eighty-two is critically ill of pneumonia in her apartments in the Hotel Majestic, was said, to-day by her daughter, Mrs. J. Addison Hayes, to be improved. Mrs. Hayes arrived to-day from Colorado Springs to be at her mother's bedside.

"Mrs. Davis's condition is distinctly better than I expected to find it," said Mrs. Hayes to an Evening World reporter. "In fact I feel much encouraged. While of course she is not out of danger by any means, yet I can safely say that I am much relieved to find her as well as she is."

PRISONER SCORED AS HE IS SENT TO JAIL.

Judge Severe on Thief Who Stole $10,000 in Bonds from Woman.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 11.—George W. Cornwell, charged with the theft of $10,000 worth of bonds from Mrs. Johanna Lumpkin, was sentenced to from two to ten years in State prison to-day after one of the most severe arraignments ever given a prisoner in the Superior Court of this county.

Sentence was passed by Judge Roraback.

LAMBERT

Atterbury System Clothes

Ready-to-Wear $18 to $45

The standard of excellence once vested in the exclusive tailor's products is now shared—and shared creditably—by these best of all ready-to-wear garments. The undisputed value of being able to try on a complete garment, to observe its effect, its style and fit, without being called upon to pay for it unless acceptable, at once secures an advantage over made-to-order garments that appeals to every thinking man.

But—add to that advantage the quality, style and fit of the best tailor's products at about half the tailor's charges, and the argument becomes unanswerable.

It has always been the unswerving aim of the Lambert Stores to give the best obtainable in Men's Apparel—best in quality, style and tone, and at the lowest consistent prices.

JAMES BUTLER CHOICE GROCERIES

before the days of "trusts"—sugar was retailing for 10 cents a pound, flour was $5.60 a barrel at wholesale, and almost everything in the grocery line cost more than it does now, although there is a widespread popular notion to the contrary—because of the high prices charged by the ordinary retailer.

If your household expenses have increased and are increasing, then you are buying from a retailer who is forced to pay a multitude of profits to middlemen for everything he buys, and must charge you an exorbitant price above actual cost. He can't help himself.

If you are a patron of JAMES BUTLER it makes a big difference in your favor in your weekly and yearly expense account. We cut out the middlemen with their profits. All you pay is actual cost, plus one slender profit.

To-day, for instance, you can buy flour for $4 a barrel. This is not only the lowest price we have offered in several years, but less than the average price for the past thirty years. Similar values run through our entire list. (See October number of GOOD LIVING, copy free for the asking at any of the 169 JAMES BUTLER Stores.)

If you are not now a JAMES BUTLER patron, suppose you begin to-day and become acquainted with the many benefits and advantages of the Butler plan of retailing, which gives YOU the extra profits and enables you to live well within your income on the best the world supplies.

Boys' Stylish and Dependable Reefers for Only $1.85

A Bargain Extraordinary for This Season

THE first thing you will think when you see them is that we have made a mistake in the price. You will think them $5 garments at the least. As a matter of fact you couldn't get better styles at $5. But on our own standard of values the coats are really worth about $2.50, although made in better models and in a better way than the average $2.50 coat.

They are all made from a good, firm, warm cheviot, in your choice of navy blue and several shades of gray. Lined throughout with with red all-wool flannel; embroidered emblem on sleeve.

Sizes 3 to 12 years.

These coats will sell just as fast as mothers see them. We have seldom been able to offer a garment so cheap and yet so handsome and so serviceable.

More Room for Pyrography

WE have been obliged to nearly double the space in our Artists' Materials Section which is devoted to showing pyrographic goods. And even before we doubled it we had, we believe, the largest showing in town of this class of goods.

Pyrography has come to stay. It has long since passed out of the list of fads and become an art-work as sensible and practical as it is fascinating. It is being taught in the public schools nowadays.

Most people who practise the art at all will be busy for the next few months on their Holiday gifts. This is to notify them that they will find here a truly superb array of pretty beginnings for a superb variety of pretty things. Boxes, baskets, frames, panels, tables, chairs, tabourettes, etc., literally to burn. Also, the apparatus with which to burn them.

Our Special Pyrographic Outfit, consisting of a selected and tested platinum point, finest gum bulb, alcohol bottle with aluminum stopper, benzine bottle with carbureter-cork, the whole in a basswood box that can itself be decorated as a workbox. Price complete 95c

We Guarantee Our Prices on Pyrographic Articles the Lowest in Greater New York
