KEPT NO RECORD OF CAR VICTIM

Policeman Sent Dying Man to Hospital, but No Report Was Put on Station Blotter.

NO INQUEST WAS HELD.

Startling Story of Official Negligence Told in Sisters' Suit for Damages Against Railroad.

Frank A. Acer, of counsel for Margaret Rice, one of the nine sisters of Owen Rice, administratrix of his estate and plaintiff in a suit for $5000 damages against the Interborough Street Railway Company for causing his death, told a startling story of official neglect at the trial of the case before Justice Gildersleeve in the Supreme Court to-day.

Owen Rice was crossing Broadway at Grand street on Oct. 5, 1905, when a car at the crossing suddenly started ahead with a jerk, knocking him down, rolling him over between the tracks and running over his hand.

"In November James J. Hand, walking delegate for the Eccentric and Standard Engineers' Union No. 20, of which Rice was a member, called on me," said Mr. Acer, "and asked advice as to how to go about it to find a missing man.

"Rice's employer and his sister, Margaret, who is the laundress at the Metropolitan Club, had been unable to find any trace of him. He was a sober, steady man and his strange absence alarmed his sister.

"I first made inquiry at all police stations, but found no record of him. I then visited the hospitals and found the poor fellow at Bellevue.

The record showed he had been brought there from St. Vincent's unconscious, with a fractured skull, several broken ribs and cuts and bruises all over his body. He died on Nov. 9. At St. Vincent's the record showed that Rice had been brought there unconscious on Oct. 5 in an ambulance on a call by a policeman.

"There was never any Coroner's inquest in Rice's case. He was entered as 'an unknown man,' and would have gone to Potter's field if I hadn't discovered him just in time. Hand says Rice always carried a union card, and it is a mystery how he was picked up and toted from hospital to hospital with no police record of the accident nor any show of common human interest in the little man who had had the life battered out of him by the electric car.

Margaret Rice is the only member of the family in America.

Frank J. Cafferty, newsman at Broadway and Grand street, and Herman Ries, dealer in trunks and bags at No. 402 Broadway, a passenger on the car, testified as to the knocking down of Rice by the car, and a fellow-workman and Delegate Hand testified that he was a sober, steady man of good character.

ARM OF A WOMAN FOUND IN ASH HEAP.

No Trace of the Body Has Been Found by the Police of Red Bank.

RED BANK, N. J., Dec. 7.—The finding of the arm of a woman in an ash heap in the eastern part of this town last night has caused Prosecutor Henry M. Nevins to order an investigation. No trace of the rest of the body had been found, although a careful search was made of the ash heap where the arm was discovered.

The arm did not appear to have been cut off the body, but seems to have been pulled from the socket. It seemed to have only been separated from the body a short while.

The police have also been working on the case, but cannot find that anyone is missing. They believe that if it was a murder the victim was not a resident of this place.

CUTS OUT MERRY CHORUS.

Walter N. Lawrence, the theatrical manager, will make his debut soon as a promoter of musical comedies. On Dec. 31 he will produce "Matilda," a musical concoction by I. M. Morris, in which no chorus will be employed. The chorusless musical play is a new idea in New York, although it has been tried with success abroad.

The members of the company already engaged include Amy Ricard, Alfred Hickman, Lionel Walsh and John P. Tuohey. The first performance in New York will take place at one of the Shubert theatres.

CHICKS HATCHED OUT IN COOK STOVE

KEESEVILLE, N. Y., Dec. 7.—About three weeks ago Mrs. Henry Sackmore, who lives on a farm between here and Ausable Forks, bought a new kitchen stove.

In most farm houses where coal is used for fuel it is the custom to bank the kitchen fire at night and shut up the room so that it will be reasonably warm in the morning when the fire is required for the day. Mrs. Sackmore, being an economical woman, intended to follow this plan, but the very day the stove was set up her son Sam fell ill with a severe cold, and when it developed into pneumonia she moved his bed to a spare chamber just off the kitchen, as the stove in his room was of the wood-burning variety and an even temperature could not be maintained by it. On the same day Mr. Sackmore was called to Malone on important business which kept him away yesterday.

He had hardly left before Mrs. Sackmore began a search for a dozen hen's eggs her husband had brought from the barn shortly before he took the train.

As she was preparing broth over the kitchen stove, about an hour before her husband was due back, the housewife thought she heard a peeping near her right ear. She listened intently and the sound was repeated. It seemed to come from the stove—but from just which point she failed to determine immediately. First she opened the oven. That was bare. Then she tried the right hand compartment of the warming closet. This contained two plates and a saucer. Finally she opened the left hand section. There, with their necks upstretched and their tiny yellow bills open, nestled nine small Rhode Island red chicks. They were on a tin plate and about them were strewn broken egg shells. As the down on the chicks was still wet, Mrs. Sackmore saw that they had just hatched.

It developed taht Mr. Sackmore had put the eggs in the warming closet, intending to take them out again shortly, but in the excitement of going to Malone had forgotten to do so. The fire in the stove had not been allowed to go out because of young Sackmore's illness and the steady heat hatched out the eggs.

WANTED TO RENOUNCE HIS U. S. CITIZENSHIP.

Naturalized German Asked for a Court Order, but Did Not Get It.

He was every inch a soldier of the Kaiser's Imperial Guard variety, with a big yellow beard and long, military mustache. John Loos, Chief of the Supreme Court Naturalization Bureau, took a good look at him before he read the indorsement on the naturalization paper which the Colonel—he certainly must have been at least a colonel—handed over the rail to him.

"Wh—what's this?" Loos asked. "You 'herewith resign from my citizenship?'"

"Yes," replied the soldier—"and I want a court decision entered showing that I am no longer a citizen of this country."

The paper certified that Ferdinand V. A. G. Huppe was admitted to citizenship on Feb. 25, 1896, in the old Court of Common Pleas.

Clerk Loos had never had a case of this kind before in his forty-seven years' service, and he asked his visitor to wait while Justice O'Gorman was consulted.

The Justice said no such court order as that asked for by Huppe was known to practice. Huppe, he said, would have to take the usual course, surrender his papers and renounce his citizenship at the German Consulate—a thing often done by foreign-born citizens when they have made their fortunes and are about to return to their native land.

Huppe was very much put out, but when asked why he sought to renounce his citizenship he said:

"I don't want to be a citizen of this country, because I am not allowed to make one living here."

He said he was a veterinary surgeon, but that he preferred farming, and then it developed that, in his view, there were too many Europeans here who hailed from other lands than Germany, the Fatherland. He strode away, sad and silent.

WANTS OPEN-SHOP FUNERAL

Rumsey Provides for Paid Pall-Bearers and There's $25 in It.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 7.—A funeral conducted on an open-shop policy is planned by "Al" Rumsey, a man-about-town who has just made a novel will. He says friends don't like to act as pall-bearers, but rate to refuse.

"In my will I settle this whole question," said Rumsey. "There won't be any arrangements left for my friends to make when I pass away.

"Six tall, broad-shouldered men under thirty, and of equal height, are to be selected by the undertaker to act as pall-bearers. They must wear black business suits and derby hats. They are not to be union men, but well paid. Each man will receive $25 for his work."

Aged War Clerk Drops Dead.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—James P. Townsend, a clerk in the office of the Military Secretary, dropped dead in the War Department this afternoon. He was sixty-seven years old and had been in the Government service forty years. He served during the civil war as a member of the Thirty-ninth Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry.

The season is here when Diamonds, Rubies and Sapphires will be bought to an enormous extent. The majority of the public, even the very wealthy, are always willing to find a place where these precious gems can be bought at moderate prices. It is widely known that we carry the largest stock of mounted Diamonds, Rubies and Sapphires, also Watches, in this country, and we are proud to say that we have justly gained the reputation of selling them at prices that are less than the cost of importation.

We cordially invite everybody to call and inspect our enormous stock, which is more complete than ever before in our history.

We suggest that you make selections now, and have them reserved for future delivery, thus avoiding the inevitable rush.

WARNING—We always state weights of diamonds in our advertisements; others do not, and that's where the "catch" is.
