THAW'S TRIAL AGREED UPON FOR JAN. 21

District-Attorney and Accused Murderer's Lawyer Agree Before Judge.

The date for the trial of Harry Kendall Thaw for the murder of Stanford White was finally and conclusively fixed for Jan. 21 to-day by Justice Newburger in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court.—The Court fixed the date after District-Attorney Jerome notified him that he had consented to an early prosecution in a compromise with the prisoner's counsel, Clifford W Hartridge.

On Saturday Mr. Hartridge obtained from Justice O'Gorman in the Supreme Court an order giving notice to the District-Attorney that he would appear before Justice Newburger to-day and ask that the indictment against his client be dismissed on the ground of lack of prosecution.

As a result of this order an arrangement was entered into between Mr. Jerome and Thaw's counsel whereby the District-Attorney consented to begin the murder trial on Jan. 21.

COMSTOCK GETS A POINTER IN COURT.

Then Goes Across the Street and Seizes Ten "Art" Products.

Six Harlem hotel proprietors whose places have been complained of by the Harlem Taxpayers' Association were held for trial by Magistrate Whitman in the Harlem Court to-day. The arrests were made by Acting Inspector O'Connor's detectives and in one case they had a great deal of trouble with their prisoner, Mary Smith, who later said her name was Ohl, and whose hotel is at No. 2123 Third avenue. She seized Detective McKeon by the throat when he entered her place and struck him in the face several times.

This led to a further charge of assaulting an officer being made against her. Anthony Comstock was an interested listener to the testimony, and when he heard that in Joe Voggoretto's place, at No. 1 Sylvan place, there were several questionable pictures crossed the street from the court-room and seized ten of the "art" products.

DALTON & DOOLING.

That's the Name of the Political Firm in Control in the Ninth.

William Dalton and Peter J. Dooling were elected joint leaders of the Ninth District at the meeting of the Tammany Hall General Committee for that district last night.

This action carried out the agreement made before the last primaries, when Charles F. Murphy settled the bitterest fight the ninth has ever known by making the joint leadership appointment after the reapportionment which precipitated the fight.

The organization completed last night makes William Dalton chairman, Patrick F. Glennon was named by Dooling and Reginald S. Doull by Dalton as vice-chairmen.

JUDGE MADE 'EM PEACH ON PALS

Rosalsky Forces Loft Thieves to Make a Confession in Court.

Two members of a gang of loft thieves who, by their own confession, have stolen many thousands of dollars' worth of piece goods all over Manhattan, broke down in Part III. of General Sessions to-day and named their confederates and the alleged head of their organization. As a result two of their friends were seized as they tried to slip out of the court chamber.

Nathan Schwartz, of No. 157 Allen street, Nathan Steinburg, of No. 320 East Eleventh street, and Joe Greenbaum, of No. 66 St. Mark's place, had just been convicted of burglary and grand larceny. They broke into the wholesale establishment of Sam Pearlman, at No. 80 West Houston street, on Nov. 23, carted away woollens worth $2,800 and sold the lot for a comparatively trifling sum to Jacon Siegel, a jobber, of No. 324 East One Hundred and Second street.

Judge Rosalsky started to sentence the men. To each of them he put this question:

"Are you not a member of the gang of crooks that hangs around the saloon of Ike Ganther, at No. 152 Allen street?"

Two of the men stoutly denied it. They were promptly sentenced to five years apiece in Sing Sing.

But when Greenbaum came forward to be sentenced his nerve gave way and he began a confession that threw his two companions in a frenzy of terror. He admitted that he did belong to the gang at Ike Ganther's. He said he and his two partners had robbed scores of houses. He said Siegel always bought their spoils from them.

As Greenbaum went on, Ike Ganther and Max Saltzer, of No. 180 Eldridge street, who had tried to establish an alibi for the trio, arose from their seats in the rear and tried to sneak out. Policemen grabbed them at the door and brought them back to the bar. Judge Rosalsky promptly committed both of them to the Tombs on the charge of perjury. To Ganther he said:

"I know you and your dive. Half the robberies in Manhattan are planned in front of your bar—or behind it. The decent people of the east side have wanted you put out of business for a long time. Now I am going to perform the job for them."

After Greenbaum had owned up Steinburg broke down and made a confession, confirming all that the other had said. Thereupon Judge Rosalsky remanded the three prisoners for sentence later. He expects all three to turn State's evidence.

The Judge ordered policemen to start at once for East One Hundred and Fourth street to arrest Siegel. They returned a little later saying he had been locked up yesterday on the charge of receiving stolen goods. New warrants will be issued against him.

GOT BACK A PART OF HER LAMB COAT

Mrs. Corwin Finally Corners Breitschneider and Gets Possession of Altered Wrap.

Mrs. Anna V. Corvin, of No. 73 St. Mark's place, a comely young woman with a plump figure, who has been pursuing Max Breitschneider, a furrier, of No. 111, East Fourth street, through various police courts in an effort to recover a Persian lamb coat, rounded him up before Magistrate Breen in the Centre street tribunal to-day and made him produce a coat—what he claimed was left of an altered original.

The dashing complainant donned the coat and whirled about for judicial inspection.

"It looks to me like a fine fit," remarked the Court, standing up and peering through his glasses.

"More like a size fit," snapped Miss Corvin. "Also he has taken out my good skins and put in some of dreadfully inferior quality."

"The whole trouble is," spoke up the defendant, "that she has grown fat."

The young woman bridled with mighty wrath and swung upon the furrier. "If I wasn't afraid of splitting this coat," she cried, "I'd make you take that back, you little runt!"

It developed in the testimony that Breitschneider has displayed a strange reluctance to return the made-over coat to its owner. He argued that the case belonged in the civil and not the criminal courts. Magistrate Breen took a different view and held him in $1,000 bail for trial. He furnished the bail and was going out of court with the coat when a city marshal seized it on a writ of replevin. Leaving court, the complainant said with emotion:

"I will prosecute this case to the b-b-b-b-bitter end."

HORSE BOLTS IN PARK.

Policeman Catches Animal Before Serious Damage Is Done.

Emmanuel Stannell, of No. 11 West Ninety-fifth street, was driving a spirited horse in the Eastern Driveway of Central Park to-day, when an automobile caused the horse to bolt at Seventy-second street. In his dash south Stannell's road cart and horse just grazed several other rigs, which had pulled aside and alarmed the roadway. Mounted Policeman McGinchy caught the horse's bridle at Sixty-sixth street and pulled him up so short that Stannell was almost thrown from the rig. He was taken home suffering from shock.

HIGHWAYMAN IN PARK AVENUE.

Lewis Brower, a young man who the police say has a long criminal record and whose likeness adorns the Rogues Gallery, was held for trial in the Harlem Court to-day, by Magistrate Whitman, after he had heard Miss Clara Wisbach, of No. 16 East Ninety-sixth street, tell how Brower approached her in Park avenue, near her home last night and demanded money.

Miss Wisbach was freightened and refused whereupon she said, Brower struck her and seized her handbag. The young woman called for help and Policeman Kurnan caught Brower after a chase of four blocks.

Jolts, jars, shocks, shakes have no terrors for the HARRIS SUCTION CLIP. It holds without hurting.

The Great Christmas Sale Of USED PIANOS At Wanamaker's---Tomorrow

A Vast Collection of Excellent Instruments At Little Prices---Sold on the Easiest Terms

THIS is the greatest Piano Event of the year—in two ways.

First, the assemblage of Used Instruments include the tremendous aggregation accumulated from our entire Fall business—the busiest time of the year—all of which have been thoroughly gone over by our expert repairmen and finishers, and most of the pianos look like new instruments.

Second, because the collection IS so vast, we have marked the pianos often at ridiculously low prices, and THEN—

Made Terms of Sale So Easy that You Will Scarcely Feel the Cost of the Piano at All

Then the pianos are a specially fine lot. People are giving up many fine and artistic instruments in EXCHANGE for the Wonderful Player-Pianos—the KNABE-ANGELUS and the EMERSON-ANGELUS.

Read the tempting list—note the very easy terms of payment asked. And you enjoy the use of the piano in your own home while you are saving up to pay for it—saving money, too, that might be carelessly frittered away if you did not have the incentive of the piano to impel you to save it. Read on:
