FOUR FORCED TO LEAP FROM BURNING HOME

Stranger Catches Mrs. Rose in Arms—Others Not Badly Hurt.

Four persons were compelled to jump from the second story of a frame building at No. 1053 Fulton street, Brooklyn, to-day to-day when fire devoured the buildings as it was oil-soaked paper, and blocked every avenue of escape. Luckily none of those who leaped were injured.

The lower part of the house was occupied by a 3 and 9 cent store conducted by Charles Rose. He lived with his nineteen-year-old wife and his little brothers, Dennis and Isador, on the floor above. The blaze started in a bea pof rubbish in the rear of the store, and Rose endeavored to put it out.

It gained on him, however, and he abandoned the fight, calling to a passer-by to send in an alarm. Then he hurried upstairs to assist his wife, who was ill in bed. While he was wrapping her in a blanket the flames leaped up the narrow stairway that offered the only avenue of escape.

Rose carried his wife to a window and left her to hunt for a rope with which to lower her. As the young woman stood in the window, Leonard Reynolds, of No. 1043 Bedford avenue, who stood on the savecent below, called to her to jump, telling her that he would catch her. She followed his instructions and he caught her in his arms.

Meanwhile the two boys had leaped from a rear window into the back yard, landing on their feet and spraining their ankles. Rose was also compelled to jump from the window to a low step ladder that was held up for him. He tripped on the ladder and sprawled to the ground, but he was not seriously hurt.

Before the fire apparatus arrived the flames had consumed the building and spread to the adjoining structures at Nos. 1051 and 1055, and they were gutted before the blaze was under control. The damage done is estimated at about $2,000.

FIVE-CENT BARBERS GO OUT ON STRIKE

Don't Know Their Grievances, but Walking Delegate Said "Quit!"

A dozen members of the East Side Barbers' Union who are employed in five-cent shops went on strike to-day. Individually, the men do not know just what their grievances are further than that the walking delegate has informed them that the places where they are employed are not sufficiently sanitary.

It is pointed out that the towels used in the drying of the hirsute crop are employed over and over again, in many instances, and that the combs necesary in plying through the facades of long, flowing chin network are seldom, if ever, washed.

It is also said children who sleep in some of the shops endanger the health of patrons, but just why a child in a siesta should have an ill effect on a man having his face mowed for five cents is not made plain.

The union threatens to ask the Board of Health to aid it in its campaign.

TO DIRECT STRIKE ON SOUTHERN PACIFIC.

PEORIA, Ill., Dec. 26.—At the offices of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen it was stated to-day that there was nothing to be given out relative to the strike on the Southern Pacific, other than that Grand Master John J. Hannahan would before the latter part of next week probably take personal charge of the strike.

STOLEN BANK FUNDS FOUND.

Cover Surety Bond of Kansas City Cashier Under Arrest.

AUSTIN, Tex., Dec. 26.—Between $8,000 and $9,000 stolen by William C. Anderson, former assistant paying teller of the First National Bank of Kansas City, who was arrested here last week, has been found in Austin. The amount recovered, according to the agent here of the surety company that bonded Anderson, is sufficiently large, with that turned over by Anderson when arrested, to reimburse the company for the $10,000 bond it had given.

The surety agent declined to tell where the money was found, except to say that it was locked in a box, but not in a bank.

Fine Performance of "Aida" at the Manhattan.

VERDI'S "Aida" was Hammerstein's Christmas offering at the Manhattan Opera House last night. In many ways this repetition of the most "barbaric" opera of the Italian school was a notable performance. The audience was not large, but at the close of the brass-predominating second act there was an ovation worthy a Bonci night.

Bassi, as Radames (despite the small stature which seems a salient feature of New York's 1906 crop of tenors), was convincing, and in his "Celeste Aida" he carried with a delightfully easy wealth of tone the famous B flat which has proved so unsatisfactory and tenuous a note for many a tenor. Occasionally, however, in the later acts he seemed inclined to sacrifice tone to volume.

Mme. Russ, in the title role, sang with conviction and vigor; less explosively than is her wont, and with her persistent tremolo as chief drawback to the hearers' enjoyment. It seems rather a pity that opera traditions or feminine vanity should decree for the character arms, shoulders and neck several shades darker than her only mildly swarthy face. Perhaps this lighter facial make-up may be one of the results of the Chicago critic's comment on Patti's appearance in the part: "I couldn't see but what the coon sang as well as any of 'em."

The Amneris of Mme. Cisneros was a delight to the eye. She is one of the few songsters who can look beautiful while she is singing. She made a splendidly dramatic figure and on the whole sang well, although some times straying from the pitch and displaying faults in the lower register. She was not always able to make herself heard above the orchestra.

Arimondi's Ramfis was majestic in voice and acting, and the Amonasro of Ancona was well up to the general average of excellence. Mugnoz, as the King, however, was somewhat deficient in royal voice, aspect and demeanor.

Chorus and orchestra were once or twice inclined to loudness, but on the whole upheld the high standard they themselves have set. Scenery and stage management were fine. Fastenings of some sort should be arranged to prevent the frequent swaying and flapping of supposedly massive obelisks and columns. They gave at times an unpleasingly realistic "earthquake" effect.

Manhattan Opera-House Programme Next Week.

Following is the programme for next week at the Manhattan Opera-House:

Monday night, Dec. 31, "Il Trovatore," with Dalmores, Russ and De Cisneros.

Tuesday night (special New Year's performance), "Aida," with Russ, De Cisneros, Bassi and Arimondi.

Wednesday, Jan. 2 (debut of Melba as a Hammerstein prima donna), "La Traviata," with Melba, Bassi and Renaud.

Friday, Jan. 4, "Carmen," with Bressiar-Gianoli, Arta, Dalmores and Ancona.

Saturday matinee, Jan. 5, "Elisir d'Amore," with Pinkert and Bonci. Saturday night, Jan. 5, "Traviata," with Donaldo, Bassi and Renaud.

Farewell Concert in Honor of Saint-Saens.

A small audience assembled at the Metropolitan Opera-House last night to bid adieu to Monsieur Camille Saint-Saens, the famous composer-pianist, who has been visiting America for the last month or so. It was evident that they loved this courtly old gentleman, for he was permitted to depart only after being duly laden with laurels, roses and applause.

The Christmas flavor was given the concert by the performance of the trio from the French master's oratorio "Noel," sung by Mme. Rappold, Monsieur Simard and the ever-ready Mr. Dippel, who stepped into the breach caused by Monsieur Rousseliere's absence at the last moment.

The trio is a (vocally) difficult morsel, which gained in the repetition demanded by the audience. Mme. Kirkby-Lunn sang the familiar aria from "Samson and Delilah" in an absent-minded way which would have made a less beautiful voice than hers sound colorless.

The second part of the program was made up entirely of Saint-Saens's compositions, and was conducted by him. He also played a very interesting fantasy for piano by Perilhou, to which an organ and orchestral accompaniment furnished a rich background. In the polished style and with the crisp technic with which his previous performances have made New York audiences familiar.

Mr. Nahan Franko played the violin solo in the master's prelude to "La Deluge" with suave but not over-impassioned tone.

DOG "STOOD UP" FOR BRIDAL PAIR

"Jeffries" Tried to Break Up Knot-Tying Ceremony He Witnessed.

This couple was accompanied by a bulldog of aggressive mien when they called at the residence of the Rev. Dr. Henry M. Warren, the hotel chaplain, last night, and said they wanted to be married. This latter request was nothing new to the clergyman, but the bulldog attendant was.

"Can't you tie the doggie in the hall?" asked the good man, as Jeffries—that was the name of the dog, the bride said—showed a fine set of "upper and lower" on the approach of the man of cloth.

"No, we want him as a witness to our wedding. He is harmless, and he is our pet," assured the bride, as she gave the restraining leashes a yank.

"He may be harmless, but he doesn't look the part," mentally said Dr. Warren, as he proceeded with the ceremony of tying the knot.

Jeffries became fractious during the progress of the tying, and both bride and bridegroom—an interesting couple of thirty—enjoined him to "Behave, Jeff!" or "Charge, you brute!"

The knot tied, fee paid and a promise exacted from the clergyman that he would not reveal their names, the couple departed, dragging the reluctant "Jeff" from the priestly sanctum.
