IN his annual report as Commander of the Department of Mindanao and Jolo Brig. Gen. Kobbe remarks that "slavery, as the term is usually understood, does not exist among the Moros," but Maj. Sweet, commanding a district under Gen. Kobbe, says that "slavery, although not recognized by the United States, is still a fact and constant source of trouble." He adds that "thousands of Moros are held as slaves who are by right free people." It wouldn't do any harm for those gallant soldiers to get together and agree on whether or not the flag is flying over those "twin relics of barbarism," slavery and polygamy. —Louisville Times.

IT is clear from Chamberlain's statement to the House of Commons that the end of the South Afoican war is not yet in sight. If the Boers were whipped there would be no occasion for the rubbish about their brutality and violation of the rules of war. Chamberlain doesn't slander the Boers from pure cussedness, but from necessity, for unless the burghers can be given a bad name there will be no excuse for destroying their independence and employing those methods of pacification for which Kitchener is famous. When Kitchener's work is complete there will be no harm in letting the British public discover that the Boer was a brave and noble foe.—Louisville Times.

King Edward as a Mason.

For 26 years Edward VII held office as Grand Master, and, unlike other heirs to the throne who have been Masons, did not resign until after his accession. He is, therefore, the only monarch who has been King of England and Grand Master of the Lodge of England at the same time. His Majesty has been a Mason for 30 years and was initiated at Stockholm by the King of Sweden, and the first brother he in his turn iniated was the Duke of Connaught, who now succeeds him as Grand Master. The Duke has always taken an active interest in all the duties and concerns of the craft, and after King Edward's resignation no happier choice could have been made. But English Free Masons will always be proud to think of the King as their Past Grand Master and of the marked increase of the craft, both in numbers and in influence, during his term of office.

Mr. Nation Sues For Divorce.

David Nation, through his attorney, has brought suit for a divorce from his wife, Mrs. Carrie Nation, the temperance crusader. Mr. Nation, who is now visiting in Iberia, Ohio, alleges that his wife held him up to public ridicule, neglected her family duties and abandoned his home.

Mrs. Carrie Nation was released from the Topeka (Kan.) jail Friday night, enough money having been raised by the temperance people there to pay her fine. Mrs. Nation will go to Atlantic City this week.

Mrs. Nation says she will not contest the divorce proceedings begun by her husband. She says she paid his board bills and was good to him. Now he can go to thunder.

ONE of the best equipped tonsorial establishments in the State is that of Carl Crawford on Main street, adjoining the Bourbon Bank. A first class bath room in connection with the shop is greatly appreciated by its patrons. Everything possible is done for the convenience and comfort of the patrons.

Question Answered.

Yes August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers and grandmothers never thought of using anything else for Indigestion or Biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied that there is nothing serious the matter with you. Get Green's Prize Almanac.—W. T. Brooks

Those famous little pills, DeWitt's Little Early Risers compel your liver and bowels to do their duty, thus giving you pure, rich blood to recuperate your body. Are easy to take. Never gripe. —W. T. Brooks.

A Lucky Imitation.

Marshal Gourko, the famous Russian general, was a terrible autocrat. On one occasion an impersonator of celebrated men was performing at a theater in Odessa. One evening he received a mysterious message, which read: "Study General Gourko." In Russia it is better not to inquire into matters that one does not understand, and so the artist spent an hour in privately impersonating the autocratic Russian.

Just as the evening performance was about to commence an order of arrest signed by Gourko was presented to the impersonator, and without explanation he was led through the streets to the marshal's palace and into an apartment where the terrible man was seated. "They tell me that you impersonate celebrated men," he roared. "Impersonate me!"

Giving a hasty look at Gourko, the performer turned to the mirror to "make up." It was an anxious time, for if the marshal should take exception to the representation he had unlimited power to inflict punishment. The impersonator dragged himself together and turned to the marshal a copy of his own face and overbearing manner. Gourko burst into a roar of laughter, and the dangerous moment was over.

When the World Will Be Full.

If we apply to the future growth of the world's population the rate of increase that obtained during the nineteenth century—one person per hundred per year—we obtain the following forecast:

	Millions of persons.		No. of persons to one square mile.
1900	1,600	or	31
2000	4,328	or	83
2100	11,706	or	225
2200	31,662	or	609
2250	52,073	or	1,001

As there are 52,000,000 square miles of land on the earth, and as we are to consider 1,000 persons to each square mile as the equivalent of the world's being full, it follows that we want a world population of 52,000,000,000 of persons to fulfill this condition.

A glance at the above statement of growth in the world's population shows that the necessary growth from 1,600,000,000 in the year 1900 to the 52,000,000,000 of persons wanted for our purpose will eventuate in the year 2250, almost 350 years ahead of the present time, when, as the illustration suggests, it may be necessary to hang out a notice to the effect that the world is full to the utmost limit.—Cosmopolitan.

Eating a Living Ox.

Only the very few among us run any risk, in the course of our peregrinations and vicissitudes, of being invited to such objectionable dinners as it was the lot of Bruce, the explorer, to eat. Such very nasty feeders as the Abyssinians of his day are becoming extinct. Fancy sitting down to table and seeing the meat walk alive into the room! That was their custom. And they ate it alive, too, the brutes!

The wretched ox was tied fast, head and legs, and then, by a delicate incision on both sides of the backbone, near the haunches, the attendants were able to strip its skin away, to enable them to cut slices from the poor animal again and again without touching an artery. The guests ate the meat raw and quivering to the music of the roars and bellowing of pain of the ox of which it was a part.

This is hideous, and even the least particular of men may be excused for shirking an experience of the kind.

A Bird With Four Feet.

This little creature, still to be found in South America, is a relic of bygone ages. It is known as the crested hoatzin, and the adult bird is about as big as a peacock.

The young birds, when hatched, have four legs, the front pair being reptilian in character, and have strong claws. As they grow older these claws fall off, the legs become fattened, feathers grow on them, and they develop into wings.

These nestlings are the nearest approach to a reptile that can be found among birds, and they can climb and dive and swim with great facility.

Crushing a Lawyer.

De Wolfe Hopper was once a witness in a suit for slander, and the opposing counsel in the courtroom said:

"You are an actor, I believe?"

"Yes," replied Hopper.

"Is not that a low calling?"

"I don't know, but it's so much better than my father's that I am rather proud of it."

"What was your father's calling, may I ask?"

"He was a lawyer," said Hopper.

A Song Inspiration.

Chambers' Journal says the inspiration for Milton Wellings' song "Some Day" came to him while he was waiting in an agony of suspense to hear from his wife, rumor having arisen of an accident to a yachting party of which she was a member. Nervously opening a book, his eyes fell on the line, "Or are you dead or that you live," which line he incorporated in his song.

Celluloid.

The base of celluloid is common paper. By action of sulphuric and nitric acids it is changed to gun cotton, then dried, ground and mixed with from 20 to 40 per cent of camphor, after which it is ground fine, colored with powder colors, cast in sheets, pressed very hard and at last baked between sets of superheated rollers.

South America.

Competent authorities assert that South America has greater undeveloped resources than any other portion of the world. Any crop grown elsewhere can be duplicated there, and the country abounds in mines of coal, silver and gold, most of which have been only slightly developed.

A Chinese Stratagem.

Rajah Suran, who was one of the earliest rulers of India, overran the entire east with the exception of China, killed innumerable sultans with his own hand and married all their daughters. It is said that when the Chinese heard of his triumphant progress and learned that he had reached their frontier they became much alarmed. The emperor called a council of his generals and mandarins, and upon the advice of a crafty old mandarin the following strategem was carried out:

A large ship was loaded with rusty nails, trees were planted on the deck, the vessel was manned by a numerous crew of old men and dispatched to the rajah's capital. When it arrived—the most wonderful part of the story is that it did arrive—the rajah sent an officer to ask how long it had taken the vessel to make the trip from China. The Chinamen answered that they had all been young men when they set sail and that on the voyage they had planted the seeds from which the great trees had grown. In corroboration of their story they pointed to the rusty nails which, they said, had been stout iron bars as thick as a man's arm when they started. "You can see," they concluded, "that China must be a very long distance away."

The rajah was so much impressed by these plausible arguments that he concluded he would not live long enough to reach China and abandoned his projected invasion.

Getting Personal.

The favorite Scottish method of dealing with sleepers in church was publicly to denounce the delinquents. The Christian Leader tells this story:

When the Rev. Walter Dunlap, minister of a United Presbyterian church in Dumfries, saw a member of his flock nodding while he was preaching, he stopped suddenly and said:

"I doot some o' ye hae taen ower mony whey porridge the day. Sit up, or I'll name ye oot!"

Another Caledonian preacher, on like provocation, cried out, "Hold up yer heads, my friends, and mind that neither saints nor sinners are sleeping in the next world."

Then, finding that this general exhortation was insufficient to deter a certain well known member of the church from getting his night's rest forward, the reverend gentleman turned toward the offender and said:

"James Stewart, this is the second time I have stopped to waken ye. If I need to stop a third time, I'll expose ye by name to the whole congregation."

Dickens and His Titles.

Charles Dickens had great difficulty in choosing titles for his various publications, says The Golden Penny. The following is a list of no fewer than 14 suggestions given by the author to his adviser, Foster, for the title of one book, out of which, need hardly be added, No. 6 was chosen:

1. According to Crocker.
2. Prove It.
3. Stubborn Things.
4. Mr. Grandgrind's Facts.
5. The Grindstone.
6. Hard Times.
7. Two and Two Are Four.
8. Something Tangible.
9. Our Hard Headed Friend.
10. Rust and Dust.
11. Simple Arithmetic.
12. A Matter of Calculation.
13. A Mere Matter of Figures.
14. The Grandgrind Philosophy.

Sure of a Visit.

As a rule, said a prison warden, a man is in a despondent mood during his first week's imprisonment. There are exceptions, however, as this incident will show.

One Saturday about dinner time I was suddenly accosted by one of the new arrivals who had served the first week of his sentence.

"I say," he remarked, "has a lady been asking for me at the gate?"

I told him that if he had been wanted the governor would have sent for him.

"Oh, very well. Keep cool," he said. "This is the first time for ten years I've put in a full week's work, and the old woman is sure to be at the gate for my wages."

And with a grin the cheerful one passed on.—London Answers.

A Little Too Faithful.

A thief in Paris, being chased by the police, threw away during his flight the purse he had stolen and was in a fair way, after being taken to the police station, of being allowed to go free for lack of sufficient evidence to hold him when his faithful dog, which he had trained to fetch and carry, trotted into the station, wagging its tail, with the missing purse in its mouth.—Paris Journal.

The Gentleman's Psalm.

A reader of the Scriptures emphasizes the Fifteenth Psalm as the gentleman's psalm because it describes as among the many who are entitled to be considered as gentlemen "one who leadeth an incorrupt life, speaketh truth from his heart, doeth no evil to his neighbor, is lowly in his own eyes, keepeth his word even if it be to his own hindrance."

Not Alike.

The Professor—Don't use that phrase, my dear. It is grossly unscientific.

His Wife—What phrase? "As much alike as two peas?"

The Professor—Yes. Examined under the microscope, two peas will present startling differences.—Puck.
