husband's identity, if not his name, with the divorce suit of Mrs. Weis. She immediately got into communication with him on the long-distance telephone and induced him to promise to come to Poughkeepsie this afternoon for the purpose of having a conference with a view to reaching an agreement whereby her future may be provided for and she spared as much as possible from gossip and notoriety.

But Mr. Tower did not go to Poughkeepsie. Nor did he venture near the office of E. W. Harriman, where he customarily makes his headquarters. It was reported this afternoon, that he heard certain things which led him to suspect there might be a plot afoot to get him safely inside his Poughkeepsie home, hold him there a prisoner until he could be adjudged a lunatic and then railroaded to a sanitarium. Friends of Mrs. Tower scouted the idea of a scheme to have her husband adjudged insane. They said the frightened iron magnate had no ground for any such fear.

Mrs. Tower now acknowledges that her husband is on terms of friendship with Mrs. Weis, in whose company he has been seen frequently in New York for several months. Mrs. Weis was Tower's guest on the Earl King last summer during her cruise to Newport and along the coast, a cruise that promises to become famous.

Broke Up the Party.

Mrs. Tower, her sister, Miss Grace Bogardus, and her husband's aunt, Mrs. Butts, were also in the party. During the trip to Tower's attention to Mrs. Weis called for a protest from Mrs. Tower, who now says that Mrs. Weis usurped her privileges and dictated to her in a way which hurt her pride and self-respect. Refusing to tolerate the condition, Mrs. Tower and her sister left the yacht and returned to Poughkeepsie, where she has since lived in retirement in the Tower mansion.

On the advice of her counsel, Charles Morschauser, Mrs. Tower has never been alone since, always having with her one of her two sisters, Grace and Sophie Bogardus, or her husband's aunt, Mrs. Butts.

On reading to-day's New York papers Mrs. Tower sent for her lawyer. After a trip to her house Mr. Morschauser stated on behalf of his client that she was aware of Mr. Tower's conduct and would no longer shield him from notoriety. Until to-day Mrs. Tower has refused to sanction any proceedings looking to the beginning of a suit for divorce. She insists that she is deeply in love with her husband, and that she has been cherishing for months the hope that he would return to her and restore her to the proper place in his affections.

Relatives of Mr. Tower, including his brother, Joseph Tower, who is one of the exclusive millionaire set at Tuxedo, have been aware for some time of Mr. Tower's friendship for Mrs. Weis, but they have refused to interfere or to believe that it was anything serious.

Ordered from Yacht.

Mrs. Butts, the aunt of Mr. Tower, who was in the yachting party last summer, is on the side of the wife. It is alleged that Mr. Tower, when taken to task by his wife for his attentions to Mrs. Weis, told her if she didn't like it she could leave the yacht. She took him at his word.

Mr. Morschauser added that Mr. Tower could afford to be princely in his gifts to Mrs. Weis. He inherited about $4,000,000 from the estate of his father, the late Edward Tower, who began life as a laborer and built up two large iron smelting plants at Poughkeepsie. Successful investments and speculations have increased Mr. Tower's wealth to seven or eight millions.

Prior to her marriage the present Mrs. Tower was an operator in the telephone exchange in Poughkeepsie, where her sister, Miss Grace Bogardus, was also employed. The sisters had charge of the long distance wires over which the millionaire, from his iron furnace, transacted business with his New York brokers. The girls belonged to a good family, daughters of former City Chamberlain E. P. Bogardus, a lineal descendant of "Dominie" Bogardus, one of the Knickerbocker settlers of Manhattan Island.

First Wife a Suicide.

She was employed as a telephone operator at the time the first Mrs. Tower killed her son and herself in the Tower mansion in May, 1902. Nine months after the tragedy Mr. Tower and Miss Bogardus were married at the home of the bride's parents, since then they have lived at the Tower family home, making frequent trips on their yacht to Newport, Old Comfort, Florida and other points.

Up to a little less than a year ago their married life appeared to be ideal.

Got Evidence in Atlanta.

At the time Mrs. Weis determined to get her divorce she and her son were living at the Hotel Savoy. They are now at the Hotel Belmont. Mr. Weis is manager for a drewery, and makes a large income. A year ago this wife sought the divorce he was in Georgia, and Lawyer Hancock avers that he had to employ detectives to go to Georgia and get evidence. In doing this he acted on information given him by Mrs. Weis.

The summons and complaint were served on Weis with difficulty, and a meeting was arranged between husband and wife at the Hotel Imperial. Hancock was present at this meeting. Mr. Weis then denied every charge made against him, and declared in the words of the lawyer "that he would fight to the last ditch."

Mr. Weis also declared that he had enough influence in Georgia, including Atlanta and Macon, to stave off any proceedings against him, and that as he was then a resident of Georgia the evidence against him would have to be taken in that State.

Says She Confessed.

Hancock goes on to say that after much difficulty he had a commission appointed to get testimony at Macon. Then he asked for a reference. So as to avoid a public trial, and the Supreme Court appointed W. A. Keener as referee. This was last November, and the only testimony taken before the referee was given by Capt. J. T. Vickery and Henry L. Dunn, both of Atlanta.

It might be recalled here that Charles Dodge, the first husband of Mrs. Charles W. Morse, made his home in Atlanta for years, where he was interested in a hotel.

Mr. Hancock says that in his relations as lawyer to client Mrs. Weis confessed to him that she was seeking a divorce from her husband so that she could become the wife of the millionaire. Mr. Hancock avers further that in view of the plans of Mrs. Weis to become the millionaire's wife it was necessary for him to use unusual precaution in keeping the divorce proceedings secret. He did not want to put her prospective matrimonial prospects in jeopardy.

Former Senator Edward Tailaferro, counsel for the husband, Louis Weis, made this statement:

"All that I can say at this time is that I have filed a general denial to the charges made by Mr. Weis's wife.

STRANGE COMA OF CONTRACTOR ENDS IN DEATH

Mrs. Delgenovez Says All of Husband's Wealth Has Disappeared.

FOUND IN LODGINGS.

Wife Says Brother Had Him Sent to Kings County Insane Asylum.

Virgil Delgenovez, the wealthy South American railroad contractor, who has been in a strange coma, since he was found by his wife in a cheap Brooklyn lodging house three weeks ago, died at his Highbridge home this afternoon. He died in frightful agony, and as there are many mysterious features about the case Coroner Schwanneke and his physician, Dr. Thomas A. Curtin, have begun an investigation.

Dr. Charles H. Holman, of No. 351 West One Hundred and Forty-fifth street, has been in attendance upon the dying man since his wife brought him home. On several occasions, according to his wife, when coming out of his coma, Delgenovez cried out that he had been poisoned for his money. Dr. Holman was not with him when he died to-day, but his wife says he kept repeating that he had been poisoned right up to the time he expired.

Since his wife instituted habeas corpus proceedings and had her husband removed from the institution to his home in the old Delgenovez mansion at Montgomery and Popham avenues, the Bronx, the man slept in a coma.

Coroner Schwanneke, who was summoned to take the man's ante-mortem statement, for it was thought his death was only a matter of a few hours, was unable to get a word from him. Dr. Charles W. Holman, the family physician, said to-day that he thought that possibly the contractor's condition was produced by a hemorrhage of the brain induced possibly by a severe mental shock. He refused to commit himself to an absolute diagnosis.

The story told an Evening World reporter to-day by Mrs. Delgenovez of events leading up to her finding of her husband forms a most extraordinary narrative.

Was a Wealthy Man.

"My husband," said Mrs. Delgenovez to-day, "is a wealthy man—or, rather, he was before his brother gained control of his property, which consists of real estate in this city and Brooklyn. Ten years ago he undertook a contract in Venezuela for Castro's predecessor. On Castro's succession to the Presidency the work—the construction of a tunnel for the conveyance of water to the city of Caracas—was held up. My husband, seeing that the delay in the work would mean that he would be detained for a long period in South America, placed all his affairs in the hands of his brother, giving him power of attorney to act in his matters.

"On his return from Venezuela, at last, after ten years in Venezuela, he was met at the wharf by agents of his relatives, who induced him to go straight from the steamer to his brother's home and not to see me or his daughters at all. I visited him several times in Brooklyn, but he did not seem to care to see me. He appeared to be under some strange influence. The last time I saw him at his brother's home he demanded a settlement from Alfredo. It was promised the next day. My husband threatened to sue his brother if he did not speedily get an accounting of his affairs.

"The next day when I called at the brother's house I was told that my husband had disappeared. After a search of weeks I found him in a cheap lodging-house at No. 75 Fulton street, Brooklyn, secreted by his brother. A man who knew him had seen him there and informed my son. At the lodging-house when I called to see him he was raving. He did not know me and kept talking of his property.

Sent Away as Insane.

"I remonstrated with his brother, but he assured me he had no idea how Virgil came there. He assured me he should be removed at once to a private sanitarium. Instead of doing so my husband was taken to the Kings County Insane Asylum, from which legal proceedings were necessary to release him. Virgil Delgenovez's brother, Alfredo, was found in charge. He is 5 Mersing street, Brooklyn, to-day by an Evening World reporter. He is a stout man of middle-age and wears an immense diamond.

"I will not discuss my husband's affairs," he said. "As there will probably be civil proceedings instituted in regard to them."

1,500 LOST IN TIDAL WAVE THAT ENGULFED ISLAND

Daily Earth Shocks Follow Disaster in the East Indies.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 22.—The tidal wave which devastated some of the Dutch East Indian Islands south of Atchin, as announced Jan. 11, practically engulfed the Island of Simalu. According to the latest information received here, Simalu has almost disappeared.

It is said that probably 1,500 persons lost their lives. Violent earth-shocks continue to be felt daily. The Civil Governor of Atchin has gone to the scene of the catastrophe.

According to the brief official despatch which first announced the devastation wrought by the tidal wave in some of the Dutch East Indian Islands, 500 persons perished on the Island of Tanar, and, it was added, forty were known to have been drowned on the island of Simalu.

Pulda Batu, or Simalu, is situated off the northwest coast of the Island of Sumatra and south of the Province of Atchin, or Achin.

CARVED FOR HIMSELF NEW PAIR OF LEGS.

Henry Blare, of No. 51 Cottage street, Bayonne, N. J., lost both his legs under a Central of New Jersey train some months ago. He didn't have the money to spend for regular artificial legs, so he sharpened his pocket knife, got a couple of sticks of smooth-grained wood and went to work. During his convalescence he whittled himself out a pair of legs good enough for anybody. He fitted them with straps, and yesterday he went back to work wearing the home-made pins.

As he's a house painter he had to climb a ladder, but he went up the rounds just as briskly as any man on the job. He was coming down last night when his little daughter came running to tell him there was a new ten-pound baby at his house.

Mr. Blare is what the neighbors call a handy man.

HARRY THAW PREPARES TO CONDUCT HIS OWN CASE

trayer under such circumstances overthrew Hannigan's already burdened mind for the time being.

Thaw's lawyers think they see many points of resemblance between the mental state of Thaw prior to the killing of White and the mental state of Hannigan just before Hannigan killed Mann. The similarity of the actual circumstances of the two tragedies is also marked.

As a bolster for their plea of violent temporary insanity Thaw's counsel count heavily upon producing a series of striking comparisons by paralleling the two cases. They hope to demonstrate that the operations of Thaw's morbid mind when he came upon the man whom he hated with a deadly, jealous hate in a restaurant so unsettled his reason that he hunted down his enemy and killed him just as Hannigan's mind operated under practically identical circumstances.

Thaw was up early to-day bustling about his cell in Murderers' Row and making a careful toilet. His first caller was one of his lawyers, A. Russell Peabody.

"Thaw Is Cheerful.

"Harry is cheerful and bright," said Mr. Peabody when he came away. "He is in the best of health and spirits and is looking forward anxiously to the trial. He is calm and confident—in short, in exactly the frame of mind a man should be in when he is about to be tried for his life."

Soon after Mr. Peabody departed Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw arrived on her regular daily visit to her husband. She spent an hour in front of his cell. Edward Thaw, brother of the prisoner, also called to see him.

Inspector George W. McClusky came to the Criminal Courts Building to-day to get instructions from the District-Attorney and Justice Fitzgerald regarding the policing of the trial chamber. It was decided to station two detectives at the door with orders to admit only persons bearing proper credentials. Squads of reserves will keep the corridors clear. For once it looks as if the hordes of sensation-lovers will be effectively barred out from a great murder trial.

Police Capt. "Big Bill" Hodgins, who was in command of the Tenderloin station at the time of Thaw's arrest, and the other policemen who figured in the scenes immediately following the roof-garden murder also paid visits to the District-Attorney's office to-day. Assistant District-Attorney Garvan went over their testimony with them.

When Capt. Hodgins was asked a question regarding his connection with the trial he said:

Lost Hodgins Promotion.

"Please excuse me. I guess I'd better keep mum. This affair has already knocked me out of an inspectorship. The main reason which Commissioner Bingham gave when he refused to promote me was his claim that I botched the Thaw case."

Mr. Garvan admitted to-day that Howard Nesbit, brother of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, was in town. "The young man came last night from Pittsburg," said Mr. Garvan, "and I have had a long talk with him. I will have other talks from time to time."

Mr. Garvan declined to say whether the State expected to use Howard Nesbit as a witness to contradict the statement of his sister and of his brother-in-law, the defendant.

There was a rumor this afternoon that Miss Ida Vera Simonton, the missing witness, had been found in this city by detectives in the employ of the prosecution. As recently as four weeks ago it was said Miss Simonton had gone to Africa to secure material for a series of magazine articles. She is the woman whom Stanford White sent to France to bring Evelyn Nesbit home after the girl's mother appealed to him to get her daughter out of Thaw's hands.

Miss Simonton is alleged to have been a witness to Thaw's mistreatment of Evelyn Nesbit in Paris before the marriage of the couple.

BILL TO ABOLISH THE CITY COURT

Legislative Measure Proposes Increase of Judges Before It Is Merged.

(Special to The Evening World.)

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—Assemblyman Wagner introduced bills to-day increasing the number of City Court Judges from six to fourteen and reorganizing that court into a part of the Supreme Court, with an appellate division. The City Court is to be abolished after Jan. 1, 1910, and actions then pending are to be transferred to the Supreme Court.

Justices of the city court shall be justices of the Supreme Court for the remainder of their term, their successors to be elected as such. The bill also provides that there shall be an appellate term, consisting of four justices of the City Court, and appeals now taken to the Supreme Court from the city and municipal courts shall be taken to the appellate term.

The Governor shall designate the justices who shall constitute such appellate term and also the presiding judges. These justices shall be designated for the term of five years.

LAWYERS SUM UP IN MAGIC BOOTS CASE

Hilgert Gains a Point in the Withdrawal of Grand Larceny Charge.

In the trial of Matthew Hilgert to-day before Justice Fitzgerald in the Criminal branch of the Supreme Court, the prosecution attempted to rebut the testimony introduced by the defense which tended to show that locomotor-ataxia and spinal diseases had been cured by wearing "magic boots."

Dr. Graeme Hammond, expert in nervous diseases, testified in rebuttal for the prosecution that such diseases were incurable.

At the request of Lawyer Henry W. Unger, of counsel for the defense, Justice Fitzgerald took away from the consideration of the jury the charge of grand larceny as alleged in the indictment. The case will go to the jury on the petty larceny count in the indictment. This makes the charge one of misdemeanor only.

Lawyer Abe Levy summed up for the defense and District-Attorney Hart for the prosecution.

BILL TO BEAUTIFY UPPER BROADWAY.

(Special to The Evening World.)

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—Senator Saxe today offered a bill transferring to the Commissioner of Parks for Manhattan and Richmond, Boulevard from Fifty-ninth street to Manhattan street, including the small parks along that portion of Broadway, with authority to maintain the beauty and utility of such spaces and to plant trees, place seats and drinking fountains, statues and other works of art.

FIVE-CENT FARE ON STEAM ROADS IS DEMANDED

Assembly Bill in Interest of Commuters Presented at Albany.

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—A bill for the relief of the commuter, which compels steam roads running out of New York to charge not more than five cents to or from points within Greater New York, was introduced to-day by Assemblyman Cuvillier. Said Mr. Cuvillier:

"There is no reason why a person should have to pay two cents a mile on steam roads for riding to a point within the city on the New York Central. It costs 18 cents to come from Woodlawn, in the Bronx, to the Grand Central Station. From Bartow Station, on the New Haven and Hartford line, it costs 35 cents. From Tompkinsville, Staten Island, it costs 12 cents.

"If my bill goes through people living in the outlying boroughs will be able to make the trip to or from Manhattan for five cents."

Asemblyman Cuvillier also offered a bill allowing members of the National Guard 25 cents for each drill they attend.

SAFE HOME FROM STRICKEN KINGSTON

Many American Visitors to Earthquake Scene Arrive on the Prinz Eitel Friedrich.

The steamer Prinz Eitel Friederich, of the Hamburg-American line, arrived from Kingston this afternoon with 112 passengers from that city.

Two of the passengers of the Eitel Friederich, Mr. Simon and Mr. Fields, were injured by falling walls during the earthquake. Col. Joseph P. Eustace, of Elmira, said:

"I landed at Port Antonio about four days before the disaster and went across to Kingston. In the party were my wife, my brother and his wife, and we stopped at the Myrtle Bank Hotel, but that was so crowded that we moved to the Knutsford, about three miles away, directly across the city, and though shaken up, no one in our party was injured. Our hotel was not damaged beyond the falling of plaster from the ceilings. The Myrtle Bank Hotel, which we left, however, was completely wrecked. Such a scene of confusion prevailed that I cannot describe it, where houses, streets and other evidences of a thriving tropical city had been, there was nothing but desolation. The houses collapsed, all sorts of structures fell to pieces and the streets were blocked by rubbish. The people, terror-stricken, fled to the parks and other open spaces.

"Other passengers said that no order prevailed in the stricken city and that there appeared to be an entire lack of official supervision. Those who embarked on the Prinz Eitel Friederich at Kingston are: Harry F. Roberts, Westbrooke, Me.; Mr. and Mrs. Hattie Holdman, New York; Guy Perley Woodman, Westbrooke, Me.; Mr. and Mrs. August W. Caldwell, New York; Rev. Lee L. Zellman, Bryan, O.; Rev. Otto Lahser, Detroit, Mich.; Col. Joseph Eustace, Elmira, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Mark S. Eustace, New York City; Miss Jane Eustace, San Francisco; George T. Jessie, San Francisco; John E. Stuart, San Francisco.

SEVEN YEARS OLD HE STOLE 4,000 POUNDS.

But Magistrate Couldn't See It and He Promptly Discharged Wee Youngster.

When Emanuel Schlessman, seven years old, of No. 50 Ninth avenue, was arraigned in the Children's Court today Assistant Clerk Conlter gazed in surprise at the little youngster and then looked more intently at the complaint against the boy, which was made by John W. Cick, of Richmond, Staten Island, and charged the boy with stealing "a 4,000-pound weight."

"Who is this complainant?" asked the clerk.

"He's connected with the Board of Education," replied Policeman Reynolds.

It was explained that the "member of the Board of Education" was the janitor of Public School No. 121, West Thirtieth street. He was not in court. Morris Deinstag said the boy had taken a scale weight that represented 4,000 pounds, but not in gross weight. The little Hercules was then lifted up so that the Justice might see him. He was discharged.

distress, and that he is certain that his feeling of regret is shared by every one in Great Britain.

"I have the honor to be, with the highest consideration, sir,

"Your most obedient servant,

(Signed) "ESME HOWARD."

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The British Government and nation, having shown the strongest reprobation of the attitude of Gov. Swettenham, of Jamaica, in bringing about the withdrawal of the American warships under the command of Rear-Admiral Davis from Kingston, the chief interest now centres in the Governor's long-deferred reply to the British Government's urgent demand for an explanation of his conduct, as this will give the first adequate means of determining the Government's final course in repudiating or condemning the Governor's action.

This explanation had not been received during the early hours of the day, although a despatch reached here from Swettenham setting forth the progress of the relief work, without any mention of the incident which caused the Americans to withdraw from the island.

This despatch was not dated, indicating that it was sent before he received the Government's request for an explanation.

Swettenham throughout the crisis has been markedly lax in keeping the imperial authorities informed regarding the situation at Kingston, and the present delay causes much irritation on the part of the Government officials.

The prompt recognition in America that Swettenham's letter was the act of an individual is much appreciated here. Public opinion continues to strongly denounce the Governor of Jamaica, although a small element takes the ground that he should have a fair chance of defending himself. The Evening Standard concisely sums up the prevailing sentiment as follows:

"Sir Alexander Swettenham committed the gross and unpardonable blunder of writing a letter to Admiral Davis which was nothing more or less than an insult and bore all the appearance of a carefully studied insult. Even if he received vexatious provocation from the Americans, no shred of justification can be urged for the letter. The only course it leaves open to him and to his countrymen is to apologize to the nation to whose officer it was directed."

The text of Gov. Swettenham's despatch received undated this morning, but presumably filed Jan. 20, is as follows:

"Slight earthquake shocks continue. Confidence is restored. The population is returning and the weather is fine. H. M. S. Indefatigable, with stores from Trinidad, arrived here to-day. Both banks have reopened."

The Lord Mayor of London this afternoon cabled to Gov. Swettenham at Jamaica $25,000, the first instalment of the Mansion House Fund, which now totals $100,000.

Swettenham's Act to Go Before Parliament.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The Pall Mall Gazette this afternoon gives prominence to a statement which it characterizes as an "extremely important pronunciamento from a highly placed English official." The statement says that a definite official announcement relative to the Kingston incident will probably await the reassembling of Parliament, so as to afford Foreign Secretary Grey an opportunity of completely informing the House and country.

Continuing, the statement makes a detailed analysis of Gov. Swettenham's action, taking the ground that his course was the usual and necessary one when foreign troops landed without previously securing the authority of the Governor. The official is quoted as summing up as follows:

"You will therefore see that Swettenham, if he acted as reported, took the only possible course open to an official whose duty required him to consider not only the special relations of his province, but vital questions of international law."

It is noticeable that this alleged statement of an English official, while upholding Swettenham's course, does not contain the message which he employed in following this course. Moreover, the foregoing view of the case does not accord with the one generally prevailing among the Government officials here.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 22.—In response to an offer of aid sent by Mayor Weaver of this city, the morning after the Kingston earthquake, the following cablegram was received to-day:

"Kingston, Jamaica, Jan. 22.—Many thanks. Money and building material urgently required. Departure of warships deplored by people. TAIT.

(Signed) "Mayor."

NO CHOICE YET FOR SENATOR IN JERSEY.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 22.—The two Houses of the Legislature to-day took their first separate vote for United States Senator, and the balloting left the Senatorship in a deadlock. Senator Drydea, who is a candidate for re-election, received the votes of the 36 men who participated in last night's Republican caucus. Mr. Dryden received 15 votes in the Senate and 24 in the House. Forty-one votes are required to elect.

PRESCRIPTION FOR "CYCLONE" CATARRH CURE.

The name "Cyclone" is given to the following prescription, it is supposed, because of its promptness in driving from the blood and system every vestige of catarrhal poison. To prepare the mixture: Get from any good prescription pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon and three ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Shake well and use in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime.

This is a harmless, inexpensive mixture, which has a peculiar action upon the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys, assisting them to filter and strain from the blood and system the catarrhal poisons, which, if not eradicated, are absorbed by the mucous membrane, and an open sore or catarrh is the result.

Prepare some and try it, anyway, as it is the prescription of an eminent catarrh and throat specialist of national reputation.
