THE CITIZEN

FROM CANADA TO CAROLINA.

Swarms of Hardy Hudson's Bay Birds Go Far South for the Winter.

There is a story of a consumptive Laplander who came to St. Petersburg to "enjoy the benefit of the mild climate," and some of our migratory birds are about as easily suited, according to the Commercial Gazette. In the highlands of western North Carolina, where snow occasionally falls to a depth of three feet, the winter-woods are haunted by a species of birds known as waxwings, or Canadian chatterers, that pass the summer in the pine forests of Hudson's bay territory, and probably do not feel cold till the mercury drops to the bottom of the scale. In a cage they twitter merrily, and clamber about in a temperature that would paralyze an English sparrow, and it can be kept all winter on an open porch. Half of our northern thrushes do not go outside of our national territory. Swarms of robins pass the winter in the Tennessee valley or in the cedar forests north of Huntsville, Ala., where pot-hunting darkys shoot them by hundreds of thousands. The birds of the Utah Sierras go west instead of south. In the direction of the Mexican border they would have to traverse a thousand miles of sand hills and alkali plains, but by crossing the Sierra Nevada they can reach a land where winter is almost unknown and where (as on the coast plain south of Monterey) insects and berries can be found in abundance at the end of December.

THE SNAKE CATCHER.

How Boa Constrictors Are Secured for Menageries.

"To catch a boa is a very difficult and dangerous task," says a man who makes it his business to capture wild animals and reptiles for menagerie purposes. "Briefly, it is accomplished by means of a labyrinthian tangle, embracing sixty square feet of ground.

"The labyrinth is made by joining together, end to end, pieces of matting. The web is eight feet high, usually, and placed so that the opposite walls will be two feet apart. All sorts of criss-cross and diverging combinations are made with the matting—it is supported here and there by stakes, making, when it is set, a geometrical puzzle that might well challenge the ingenuity of man.

"The trap is baited with a live pig, which is placed in a pen in the center of the labyrinth. By and by along comes the boa constrictor. It is easy enough to get in. He scents the prey; he is very hungry; the pig is devoured, and here the boa comes to grief. For hours he tries to release himself from the tortuous passages which rise about him, but finally he grows tired and stretches himself out for a nap. Then is our time. We open the labyrinth and catch him."

FILLING MONSTER TEETH.

A Dentist's Novel Experience in an Elephant's Cavernous Mouth.

Electricity has become an important adjunct to the outfit of the modern dentist, but it is not likely that many will be called upon in the discharge of their professional duties to illuminate the cavernous mouth of an elephant, as recently happened in the practice of a leading New York specialist.

A large show was on exhibition in a town in Michigan, but the showman's elephant, which was a tower of strength to the performance, was suddenly seized with the toothache, and the whole caravan was demoralized. It was found that the trouble arose from a decayed tooth. None of the local practitioners fancied the job of filling the cavity, and the proprietor of the show telegraphed to a New York dentist.

The New Yorker went on by first train and, after first chloroforming the animal, he braced open the brute's jaws by two crossed hickory sticks, and from these suspended an electric lamp. This gave a light that enabled the filling of the tooth to be satisfactorily accomplished, and in an hour's time the show was in full blast, and the dentist, with his fee in his pocket, was journeying homeward.

A Big Shark in the Ohio River.

A Jeffersonville (Ind.) dispatch says: A fresh water shark was one of the curiosities seen by fishermen in this harbor to-day. For several days the fish, which is estimated to be fifteen feet in length and to weigh eight hundred pounds, has destroyed great numbers of perch, buffalo and channel cat caught on trot-line hooks. This morning the shark nipped a twenty-pound perch which had been caught on one of the hooks of a trot-line opposite the city and destroyed one-half of the fish at the first bite. Returning for the remainder, it swallowed the hook, and when an attempt was made by a fisherman to run the line the shark splashed the water similar to the way a young whale would. The shark is described as having a mouth like an alligator, teeth two inches long, and a nose resembling a pug dog. Fishermen have procured strong tackle and are baiting with ten-pound fish in the hopes of catching the shark.

A Race of Warlike Dwarfs.

The inhabitants of the Andaman islands are the smallest race of known human beings; that is, taken as an average. The height of a full grown Andamandi seldom exceeds 3½ feet, and few weigh over sixty-five pounds. They are said to be marvelously swift on foot, as well as being possessed of extraordinary powers of endurance. The few travelers who occasionally visit the islands avoid contact with the dwarfs as far as possible, partially on account of their extreme filthiness, but principally on account of their warlike dispositions and their handiness with poisoned arrows.

Oldest in the World.

The oldest herbarium in the world is in the Egyptologist museum at Cairo, and consists of an inconspicuous collection of dried portions of plants. These portions of plants and flowers were taken from the wreaths and garlands in the coffins with mummies, where they were placed by the ancient Egyptians as death offerings.

It is impossible to prevent cough and cold in the winter season. A draught of air, the going out of a fire or any sudden change of the temperature of a room is sufficient to produce such a result. While we cannot prevent, we can easily cure these troublesome affections with a few doses of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

'That baby makes me tired'."

—A National Exhibition is now in progress at Quito, Ecuador, and a commissioner of the Chicago Exhibition writes that almost the entire exhibit is to be sent to Chicago to constitute Ecuador's exhibit at the World's Fair. The display includes lace in great variety, leather good's wood-carving, gold and silver filigree work, paintings, and many varieties of fibre, several of which are said to be very abundant and of such exceptionally fine quality as to be destined in time to become the basis of very great industrial and commercial interests.

Consumption Surely Cured.

FOREST PRESERVATION.

How to Prevent a Timber Famine Within a Generation.

Further destruction of forests without effort to make good the waste will produce a timber famine within a generation. Many kinds of valuable woods have already practically disappeared, and other kinds are disappearing rapidly from our forests. For one hundred years the destruction of timber has been constant, without renewal. Reforesting is not difficult nor costly, and returns will be ample.

One of the first duties is to cut from timberland only those trees that have reached their prime, while preserving the undergrowth from browsing animals by fencing forest tracts. Second growth should be guarded and not thinned so much as to prevent a proper development of trunks for economical use as timber. Natural planting should be encouraged in the vicinity of forests containing desirable species. Such planting may be encouraged by fencing in cleared areas about forests and keeping cattle out.

Waste lands on hillsides or rocky places, or on the borders of swamps, should be planted with valuable forest trees suitable to the location. Planting in groups will insure good timber, especially from the trees most shaded. Experimental planting of groups on waste land will bring valuable experience in tree culture.

Success in reforesting depends greatly upon a careful observation of nature and nature's methods. No one of experience would plant black walnut in marshy ground or black ash on a hillside. Pine and cedar flourish in swamps and on hillsides alike, and the same is true of hemlock. White ash and black cherry flourish best on dry ground. Swamp white oak, a valuable timber tree, loves moist ground. Hard maple is sometimes found in swamps, but it does not flourish there as well as on uplands. Elms love moisture.

Trees usually found growing together in forests should be planted together. Trees of one species are rarely found alone, and there is a belief, probably well founded, that a variety of species in a forest is most conclusive to strong and healthy growth. The soil of exhausted hillsides is best renewed by a growth of trees and a deposit of leaf mold. A young forest thickly planted must be a constant source of profit, after the first eight or ten years, through cutting to thin out and give room for proper development of tops.—A. S. Hamilton, President Genesee Valley (N. Y.) Forestry Association.

THE BUTLER ROLLER MILLS

Hereafter will be doing business under the name of

Geo. Walter & Sons.

We can say to our patrons that the grinding done by us will be in the best manner that good machinery and practical milling can do it, as we have in our employ one of the best practical millers in the State of Pennsylvania. We can say without fear of contradiction that we are turning out the best straight grade of wheat flour in the county. We think it an advantage to the farmer to get his grinding done at our mill for these reasons:

FIRST—We make as good wheat flour as can be manufactured and the farmers get the same flour in exchange as the millionaire would, were we blessed with them in this neighborhood.

SECOND—We can do your chopping for you, so that you are not compelled to sell your grain at low prices and buy your chop.

THIRD—We can make the best buckwheat flour ever manufactured in the county, as we have just completed arranging the new machinery for same, and it works like a charm.

FOURTH—We can make you rye flour if you desire it. Our rye flour always brings the highest price in Pittsburg, &c.

FIFTH—We make as good a corn meal as there is in the market.

SIXTH—Our Graham flour cannot be excelled. We manufacture every article that is in our line of business, and with the latest improved machinery, and best practical skill.

The farmer will readily see that it is more profitable to him to patronize a mill where he can get all his different kinds of grain ground than to sell his grain and buy his flour and feed. We don't believe in misrepresenting goods to the public, therefore do not put the same kind of flour in four or five different brands of sacks. We make a straight grade of flour. The brand is WHITE ROSE, the same as given to the farmer in exchange. We also make the IONA PATENT, which is a high grade of flour and stands with the best patents in the market. It is manufactured out of red winter wheat, blended with the best brand of Minnesota patent which gives it a superior quality. These brands of flour and all kinds of mill feed sold by us at the lowest prices. We are also in the market for wheat, rye and buckwheat and will pay the highest prices for the same.
