COREY-SCHWAB PARTNERSHIP IS LATEST REPORT

Believed That Head of Steel Trust Will Join Bethlehem Company.

SELLS STEEL COMMON.

Is Now Enjoying Honeymoon With Bride in France.

Corey and Schwab!

This is the latest combination in steel figured out by the Wall street sharpers.

That William Ellis Corey's resignation is in the hands of officials of the United States Steel Corporation is as certain as anything, but the absolute statement of the officials can make it. It is the general opinion that his resignation was placed in the hands of the Steel Corporation directors before his marriage to Miss Mabelle Gilman. A combination of interesting circumstances point toward a partnership between Mr. Charles M. Schwab, who was forced out of the chief office of the Steel Trust by the notoriety he got at Monte Carlo, and his successor, whose marriage to Mabelle Gilman has jarred him loose from the high salaried job. While it has been awkwardly denied that President Corey has resigned, financial and steel men say he agreed to quit before his wedding to the actress.

Officials of the Steel Trust are declared to be unwilling to have Mr. Corey at the head of their vast enterprises because of the frown the public has cast upon him for his treatment of his first wife. Mr. Schwab is said to feel that he is just as useful to-day as when he was living with Laura Cook Corey and had the respect and confidence of the world.

Mr. Schwab, having himself felt the rebuke of his associates in the steel corporation, and having, as he says, made more money since he quit them than ever before, is not inclined to judge harshly his fellow sufferer. He has a high estimation of Corey's ability, and it is ability he values above all else. It is suggested in financial circles that when these two admittedly shrewd and experienced steel magnates combine their ingenuity and their fortunes they will cut a great swath in the steel market.

Corey Sold Holdings.

President Corey's action in selling his holdings in the United States Steel Corporation is looked upon as a sure sign that he has resigned the Presidency. His brokers in Pittsburg and this city have been for some little time disposing of stock which no one seems to doubt was his. He had a long consultation with his agents just before Pastor Clark made him the husband of Miss Gilman at the Hotel Gotham—much to the preacher's grief a little later—and at that interview he is said to have told his brokers to go ahead quietly and turn his steel holdings into cash.

Mr. Schwab was in Pittsburg about the time Mr. Corey was there, and it is believed they met and discussed their plans. Schwab told a friend that he had been most successful for himself, and also remarked significantly that his friend Corey would find great opportunities open to him when he returned from France, where, with his new wife, he is spending the honeymoon.

Schwab's Significant Remarks.

Mr. Schwab mentioned the need of a good man for the Bethlenem Steel Company almost in the same breath in which he referred to Corey's chances.

"We need brains," he said. "Brains in business never fail to succeed. I look upon Mr. Corey as an able man."

E. J. Buffington, President of the Illinois Steel Company, is believed by many to be the man who will succeed Corey, and it is said he has been approached more than once with an offer of the place.

Whether he will accept is known now only to himself, it is declared, and while it is denied by some trust men that he has had such a proposition, the rumor will not down.

Alva C. Dinkey, head of the Carnegie Steel Company, is looked upon by many as Corey's logical successor. Dinkey is a close friend of Andrew Carnegie and a very strong man. When asked if Corey has resigned Mr. Dinkey would only say:

"If he decides to leave his present place he will have no difficulty finding a position to his liking."

Corey Indifferent to Censure.

Despatches to-day from France, where, near Paris, Corey and his bride are living in the magnificent Chateau Villegenlise, indicate that he is caring little for the opinions of those who censure him. The chateau is an historic old pile. Napoleon III. and the Empress Eugenie often spent quiet days there. It was owned by Prince Jerome Bonaparte. A high wall surrounds the park in which it is located, and sentinels guard its mammoth gates against intruders.

Groves grace the splendid meadows, while hard, smooth avenues furnish ample routes for little dashes in one of the many autos the fascinated suitor bought for the former star of the "Mocking Bird" before he made her his wife. Old statues plucked from Grecian temples, costly rugs from the Orient, tapestry and inlaid furniture are strewn about the chateau with a carelessness denoting unlimited money and an actress's touch.

Mr. Corey has let it be known that he is exceedingly happy in this secluded home, but no prying reporter is allowed to enter. Huge servants in the Corey livery are stationed everywhere. Any person approaching is scrutinized as if he were a burglar, and not even a card will be taken to either occupant of the castle unless the bearer can show a letter signed by one of them, asking him to come.

A personal friend of Mr. Corey's visited him recently. Reporters watching fearfully from afar saw the steel man come out of his stronghold, the smiling actress on his arm, and walk slowly toward the caller. The man had evidently been "sent for."

One room in the chateau is renowned as a mystery about Paris. It is a Persian den, stuffed with rare old works picked up with Corey cash in many quarters. Miss Gilman personally arranged the room, and it is said to be a record marker for extravagance. The common report is that Mr. Corey's castle cost him a million dollars.

BRIDE INJURED IN DODGING GUESTS

Running to Escape Rice Shower, Mrs. Fife Falls Under Cab.

(Special to The Evening World.)

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 23.—The wedding of Miss Ruby Mae Heathcote, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Heathcote, and Howard Dudley Fife, last night, was marred by a painful accident to the bride.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Fife stole out of a rear door, hoping to avoid a deluge of rice and confetti.

They were discovered before they reached the cab which was in waiting to take them to the station. Mr. Fife motioned the driver to get onto the box and sprang forward to hold the door open for Mrs. Fife as she made a dash for the cab.

Before the distance had been covered a score of women guests pounced upon the bride, who lost her footing and fell under the cab. The horses pranced about uneasily and Mrs. Fife was dragged from beneath the cab by the frightened bridegroom, suffering from a sprained ankle and many painful bruises. Her wedding gown was ruined, but as Mr. and Mrs. Fife drove away she smiled pluckily, while the guests who had caused the mishap returned to the house in tears.
