SHOT WIFE, WARDELL SAYS, TO KEEP FAITH WITH HER

They Had Made a Pact to Die Together, He Declares.

BUT HIS NERVE FAILED.

After Four Futile Attempts to Shoot Himself He Called the Police.

Under pressure of the third degree, James Wardell confessed this afternoon to Coroner Aoritelli and Assistant District-Attorney Manley that he shot his wife yesterday afternoon in her flat at No. 334 West Twenty-fifth street. They were carrying out a suicide pact, he declares. At the time he made the confession Wardell did not know that the autopsy had disclosed that his wife was dead from illuminating gas when he shot her.

Wardell telephoned to Police Headquarters late yesterday afternoon that his wife had committed suicide. When the detectives arrived from the West Twentieth street station he handed them a revolver and said the woman had shot herself after an attempt to commit suicide by gas had failed. The rooms were full of gas, and it was thought that Wardell had killed her and then fixed up the suicide story.

The bullet wound was on the left side of her head and in a position that precluded the possibility that she fired the shot. This fact was hammered into Wardell until he said he would tell the truth.

"I killed her," he confessed. "I intended to die with her when I shot her, and I pulled the trigger four times with the muzzle against my head, but the gun didn't go off. Then I lost my nerve.

Story of Their Life Together.

"I might as well begin at the beginning. I met her on the street nearly four years ago, when she was a young girl working in a store. It was the old story, but I married her on May 14, 1904. I didn't have much, and I guess I didn't treat her right. Anyhow, she went wrong.

"She left me about fifteen times and took up with other men. I loved her all the time and was almost crazy about her. When I found I couldn't hold her I went away from New York, but I couldn't stay away. I came back from Connecticut, where I was working, a few days ago and looked her up.

"She was living at No. 234 West Twenty-fifth street, under the name of Robinson with a man named Beahlert, an electrician who had a wife at No. 248 East Tenth street. I caught her with Beahlert. He said he didn't know she was married, and offered to give her up and give her the flat he had furnished for her.

"She didn't seem to know what to do, and I went to see her yesterday afternoon to settle it with her. We had a long talk. I wanted her to come back to me and begin all over. She said she was tired of the life she was leading, but she couldn't come back to me. She said she had been living with a man named McCoy, and that if she quit him he would kill her.

She Suggested Death Together.

"I told her I couldn't live without her. I said if she was killed I would kill myself and the other man. Then she suggested that we should both die together.

"We planned it all out to kill ourselves with gas, but she wanted to make sure that he would both die. She said that maybe if one of us died first the other one would get scared and call for help. She asked me to go out and buy a gun, and I went and bought one at a pawnshop in Ninth avenue.

"We fixed it up so that we would turn on the gas. Then, if she got unconscious first and it looked like I couldn't stand to die by the gas, I was to shoot her and then shoot myself. If I got unconscious first and she got scared of the gas she was to shoot me and then kill herself.

"We closed everything up and turned on all the gas. I fixed a tube from a jet to the bed and she put the tube in

LITTLE WOODS WINS AT 100 TO 1

(Special to The Evening World.)

GRAVESEND RACE TRACK, June 18.—Little Woods, a 100-to-1 shot, captured the fifth race. Dr. Lee, 6 to 1 for place, was second, and Sailor Girl third.

James R. Keene is destined again to be the heaviest winner for the year 1907, if his stable of wonderful racers maintain their present average of winnings. With the fleet Commando colt Zambesi he won to-day the Brookdale Handicap at a mile and an eighth, beating a field of clever runners with comparative ease and displaying gameness as well as a great flight of speed.

When the animal was collared by Fountain Blue at the far turn Miller called on Zambesi and the colt responded gallantly, rushing away from the challenger and winning hands down, while the Millerites at the trackside sent up an enthusiastic and exultant yell. Blandy, with Mountain up, ran a fine race, finishing out a game second and beating out Fountain Blue in a drive. The latter ran a high-class race as far as he went and was just a trifle short.

Gallant Dan was cut down in the second race and may have to be destroyed. When "Lucky Jack" McGinnis won a race with Gallant Dan recently John E. Madden claimed the horse, and then sold him to P. S. P. Randolph. Madden had made the claim to get even because McGinnis claimed Dead Gone from Madden. This was Gallant Dan's first start in the Randolph colors.

After the win of Faust to-day Owner Durnell at once engaged the services of Jockey E. Dugan to ride the gelding in the Suburban. Durnell believes his horse has a chance.

Gene Russell First.

Gene Russell, at a false price in the betting, and with "Jack" Martin up besides, won the first race in a drive from Smoker, Harcourt finishing a good third. The result was no upset for the followers of The Evening World's racing predictions, they getting as good as 10, 4 and 2 for their money. Spooner and four others were scratched. When the Webbing was sprung the horses were beautifully aligned, getting away on even terms. Queen Marguerite went to the front and led well into the stretch, where she became leg weary and went to the rear. Martin brought Gene Russell up with a well-timed rush and Smoker, getting his best finishing foot forward, sailed in company, but could not head the winner, who dashed under the wire with a safe margin to spare. Smoker beat the consistent Harcourt for the place. Alex Grant, with Miller up, was at a short price. It was whispered around the ring before the race that Alex Grant was being played for a stalling in Western pool-rooms.

Faust Won Cleverly.

"Boots" Durnell has made a clever racer of Faust. The brown gelding had a world of speed in the second race, rushing to the front at the start and staying every inch of the way, winning handily. Little Dugan, although placed on the extreme outside with his mount, was the most alert rider at the post and got his mount away cleverly. At the far turn Faust increased his lead and nothing in the race could get near him after that. Col. White got off poorly, made up a lot of lost ground and finished second, with Masterson brushing in a good third. Miller, on King Cole, could do nothing with his mount, although the pubic bet a lot of money at the long odds obtainable against the King. The winner was bid up to $2,800, and reserved by his owner for the additional $5.

Easy for Wild Star.

W. S. Jennings's clever filly Wild Star won the third race cleverly from

(Special to The Evening World.)

BORDENTOWN, N. J., June 18.—Thomas J. Barret, of this place, is at St. Francis Hospital, Trenton, and is not expected to live, having been shot by a man named Thomas Clark, working as a lather at the Roeblings plant at Kinkora.

Bresnahan and McGann Both Knocked Out by Pitched Balls at Cincinnati---Wiltse Does Very Fine Work as Pitcher.

(Special to The Evening World.)

BALL GROUNDS, CINCINNATI, June 18.—Four thousand enthusiasts sweltered in the severest heat of the season to witness the second game between the Giants and Reds, and when play was called many of the players looked exhausted.

The Giants, who have heretofore seen little but cold weather, were wringing with perspiration, but they said it helped cool them off. Despite the Turkish-bath effect on the players, the game opened up with lots of spirit.

McGraw sent Wiltse in against the Reds and Manager Hanlon came right back with Coakley, the former star of the Philadelphia Athletics, who pitched one of the games against New York when the Giants won the world's championship.

First Inning.

Shannon went out on a hot grounder to Huggins. Browne bunted in front of the plate, but Schiel's throw to Ganzel got him. Coakley tossed out Devlin, after stopping an easy bouncer. NO RUNS.

Huggins struck out. Lobert laced a single into centre. Mitchell hit to Dahlen, who touched second, forcing out Lobert. Davis flied to Shannon. NO RUNS.

Second Inning.

Seymour struck out. Bresnahan singled. McGann followed with another safe crack. Coakley threw out Dahlen, while both runners advanced. Odwell muffed Corcoran's liner, allowing Bresnahan and McGann to score, and Corcoran took second. Wiltse walked. Shannon slammed a hot single into cent
