this summer at noon, when it had climbed to 89. The mercury scored the same notch yesterday and on July 8.

But it was the humidity that brought the greatest discomfort and suffering. There was 53 per cent. of moisture compounded with the heat at 8 o'clock. Then it gradually worked down to 48 at noon, and then shot up again in almost 10 per cent. leaps. No rain is promised, nor does the forecaster detect the distant rumble of thunder. Relief will come, he says, in a gradual infusion of cooler currents of air.

Breeze Hardly Perceptible.

There was a breeze to-day, he pointed out—a southeast breeze, with about as much animation in it as is displayed by a hard-boiled jelly-fish. The official prognosticator hoped that it would work around to the north and frisk down on us laden with cooling crystals.

There were few New Yorkers who climbed out of their cots to-day with any degree of animation. More than one thought how pleasant it would be if the customs of the Sandwich Islands prevailed here and the fashion was to wear a coy look and a palmleaf fan.

Sleep on Fire-Escapes.

Of course hundreds slept on fire-escapes last night and the usual quota rolled off. A public course on the attraction of gravitation should save many lives, for few who stretch out on fire-escapes seem to consider that if they roll over they will roll through the aperture. It is the same with men who endeavor to sleep off the heat on roofs and tumble into the street. The suggestion has been made that the fire-escapes in some regions be provided with nets. So far it has not been taken up.

There were more noises than the chiro of the cricket heard in the public parks last night. Phonograph fiends might have collected many phases of the human snore, snort, gurgle and the buzz-saw habit of chiselling the teeth together.

As all the zephyr there was was offshore it was not much cooler on the beaches than inland. The city sweltering seemed to think so, however, and piled down to the ocean's rim for a dip and a bask on the sands.

Then there were thousands who slept out on the beaches last night and who will sleep on the sands to-night, so that the purveyors of fun and frolic at Luna Park, Dreamland and Steeplechase chortled with glee at the harvest prospect. The frigid spring has almost been forgotten in the pleasant heat waves of to-day.

The Little Mothers' tent on the Seaside Park beach will be kept open all night.

AMERICAN LEAGUE BALL GROUNDS, CHICAGO, July 18.—The final clash between the Chicago and Highlander clubs was a double header again to-day, as it was yesterday, and the games were played before even a larger crowd of fans.

The terrific heat of the first days of the week was tempered by cooling breezes from Lake Michigan and players and spectators alike enjoyed the afternoon. The players all showed up to-day feeling none the worse for their five hours of continuous play.

Manager Griffith and his team will leave to-night for St. Louis, where they expect to have easier sailing than they have had here.

First Inning.

Hoffman singled. Elberfeld singled. Chase out, Rohe to Donohue. Williams walked. Laporte singled, Hoffman scoring. Moriarity singled, scoring Elberfeld and Williams. Conroy singled, scoring Laporte and Moriarity. Fiene replaced White. Thomas lined to Rohe and Conroy was doubled at second, Rohe unassisted. FIVE RUNS.

COL. AYRES GAGGED.

Army Retiring Board Refuses to Hear Warrior's Statement.

After holding a short executive session th eRetiring Board named by the War Department to inquire into the mental and physical fitness of Col. Charles G. Ayres, the fighting commander of the Fourteenth Cavalry, adjourned to-day until Saturday, when it will sit again at the Army Building to hear the final reports of the two surgeons assigned to examine him.

Col. Ayres, still unattended by counsel and still as warlike as on yesterday, was promptly halted when he asked leave at the beginning of to-day's open meeting to make a short statement. Gen. Davis, presiding, declined to hear his remarks. It was plain that Col. Ayres meant to go into the quarrel which his wife and daughter, now living at Highland Mills, have with the Commandant at West Point, where Col. Ayres's son, Fairfax, is a c[illegible]

"SCHOOL" CAR'S SUDDEN STOP CAUSES CRASH

Many Women and Children Hurt, but None Seriously—Candidates Escape.

Five persons—women and children—were injured and a dozen others were severely shaken up this afternoon when two cars of the B. R. T. met in collision at Fifth avenue and Eighty-sixth street, Brooklyn. All of the injured were residents of Brooklyn. They were:

Laura Dixon, of No. 1923 Forty-sixth street, received contusion of right hip and bruises about body.

Agnes Ensner, twenty-eight years of age, of No. 128 Maujer street, suffered from shock and bruises.

Lena Smith, forty-five years old, of No. 5422 Fifth avenue, shock and contusions.

Grace M. Griffin, ten years old, of No. 5718 Fifth avenue, abrasion of left side of neck.

Marie Munz, eight years of age, of No. 540 Fifty-third street, injuries to breast and side.

They were attended by Dr. Norton, of the Norwegian Hospital and removed to their homes.

All of the passengers hurt and shaken up were on car No. 499, of the Thirty-ninth street line, which was in charge of Motorman Christopher Fagan. In front of Fagan's car was a "school" car in which a dozen men were gathered, receiving instruction as to their duties. James O'Brien had the lever of the "school" car, and in demonstrating to the men how to bring the car to a sudden stop in case of danger he jammed on the brakes and came to halt in the path of the car behind.

The stop was so sudden that Motorman Fagan was unable to avoid a rear-end collision and the two cars met with a terrific crash. All of the passengers on the Thirty-ninth street car were tossed about like ten pins and showered with broken glass and debris from the front platform of the car, which had been reduced to kindling wood.

Fagan, after putting on his brakes, saved his life by jumping to the street. All of the candidates on the "school" car escaped injury.

CORCORAN GETS SUDDEN RELEASE FROM THE GIANTS

Second Baseman's Dismissal Is Unconditionally Given by McGraw.

(Special to The Evening World.)

POLO GROUNDS, July 18.—It was announced officially this afternoon that Tommy Corcoran, recently purchased from Cincinnati, and who had played star ball during the early part of the season, had been given his unconditional release by Manager McGraw. This means that Corcoran is at liberty to sign a contract with any club that desires his services.

The news came as a big surprise to the baseball world, as Corcoran had made a wonderful showing during the first two months of the season. Of late he has fallen off in his batting, and his fielding has been none too fast.

Corcoran is one of the most popular players, personally in the team. He began his major league on the New York Club, about sixteen years ago, and afterward drifted to Brooklyn and then to Cincinnati, where for years he was the star player of that club. The release of Corcoran, it is believed, will tend to stir the other players up to renewed activity.

Corcoran is the first regular member of the New York Club to be released this season. When notified of his release, this afternoon, he said as yet he had no definite plans, but would probably go to his home in New Rochelle and take a two weeks' rest.

JEROME GOT $5,000 FROM UNTERMYER.

did, as we were very particular social friends of long standing."

"You were aware he was counsel for George W. Perkins, who had testified as to the $48,000 contribution to the national campaign fund from the New York Life?"

"That all depends on what theory you consider he was counsel."

Mr. Jerome said certain hypothetical questions were asked the witnesses covering the whole ground of financial contributions by corporations.

"I saw from the newspapers that considerable excitement had been aroused as to syndicate transactions, joint account transactions and political contributions. I went very carefully into these matters, and came to the conclusion that crime had not been committed with regard to these three classes of cases. I desired in some way to get a ruling from the courts upon these three propositions.

As to Newspaper Lawyers.

"Public opinion had been inflamed by newspaper lawyers," said Mr. Jerome. "By that I do not mean lawyers for the newspapers, but lawyers in the editorial rooms. I saw that there was a most eager desire on the part of the newspapers that somebody should be put in jail, especially in connection with the insurance disclosures."

"I certainly should not have permitted an indictment to be found if I did not believe a crime had been committed. If the Appellate Division had ruled that indictments should be returned I would have done all in my power to have them found."

Mr. Shearn, referring to a letter written by Jerome to Perkins said:

"Mr. Perkins in that letter put matters in a light most favorable to himself."

"I don't know about that," said Mr. Jerome.

Mr. Jerome said that he had put the matter before Judge O'Sullivan, who charged the Grand Jury. "I told the Grand Jury that I could not understand Judge O'Sullivan's remarks," he said.

"The Grand Jury informed me that they could not understand the learned Judge's remarks, and I told them that I could not blame them, as I could not understand them myself."

Mr. Jerome told Mr. Shearn, in answer to questions, that D. L. Delafield, counsel for George W. Perkins, came to him and said that if he (the District-Attorney) wanted any books or papers of the New York Life Insurance Company or any books or papers of the J. P. Morgan Company to come to him (Delafield) and he would give him every assistance in his power.

Mr. Jerome then went into the court proceedings that he took in the Perkins case to get a ruling of law as to whether Mr. Perkins had committed a crime in giving the money to the Republican National Committee, or that the insurance companies had.

"Mr. Perkins was only an incident," said the District-Attorney.

Always Thought a Crime Had Been Committed.

"It was a fact that the Perkins transaction was not entered into the minutes of the Finance Committee of the New York Life Insurance Company?" asked Mr. Shearn.

"It sure was," said Mr. Jerome.

"But you did not enter this fact in your papers?"

"I did not," was the answer.

The District-Attorney admitted that he told Mr. Delafield the court procedure he was going to take.

"The warrant for Mr. Perkins was handed to Reardon" (county detective), continued the District-Attorney. "I told Reardon to go to Mr. Delafield's office, where Mr. Perkins would be pointed out to him. He did so and brought Perkins to Supreme Court chambers, where I met them. A writ was ready, an argument was heard and Mr. Perkins was paroled in the custody of his counsel.

"The case was taken to the Appellate Division, where it was decided against me."

"Greatly to your satisfaction," said Mr. Shearn.

"No, not greatly to my satisfaction," was the reply of the District-Attorney, "for I had always considered that a crime had been committed."

Mr. Jerome said that he found a contract with the Governor of a certain State but it was particularly stated that the money was not to be used for lobbying purposes.

"Did you try to follow that up?"

"Yes, but the man was dead," replied the District-Attorney.

Why Not Prove the Charge?

MacDonald DeWitt, of counsel for Mr. Hearst, appeared before Justice Dayton this morning and asked for a postponement until Monday.

"What!" exclaimed Mr. Rand. "If one-tenth of what they have said about Jerome be true he should be removed by the Governor. It is not necessary for Mr. Shearn to be present. The gentleman who makes the motion has made an affidavit in which they say that Jerome is a crook, and they say that they can prove it. Well, if they can prove we want them to go ahead and do it now."

The hearing was then set down for the afternoon.

FREDA STOOD FOR WOMAN'S RIGHTS

Freda Fingher's disposition to disregard the ordinances protecting certain lawns in Mount Morris Park this afternoon turned that usually peaceful playground of the people into a scene of great disorder. The wind-up was that Frda went to Harlem Police Court in a patrol wagon and was reprimanded by the Magistrate.

Freda lives at No. 2343 Second avenue, and is a woman of considerable strength and independence. The parts of the lawn open to the public were too crowded for her. She picked out her own lawn. Isaac Costa, a watchman, told her she would have to move. She refused to move. Costa called Policeman Helwege. Freda wouldn't budge. When Helwege attempted to lead her she showed fight and threatened to cut his buttons off. Helwege sent Costa to call the patrol wagon.

In the mean time hundreds of women and children flocked about the policeman and his prisoner. Freda delivered a strenuous lecture on the rights of the people, and was cheered by a few sympathetic auditors who could see no reason why any part of the park should be reserved.

Previous to his trouble with Mrs. Fingher, Costa had ordered a Swedish woman and her baby from a forbidden strip of grass. The woman could not understand him, and Costa aroused some comment by his action in removing her.

FINAL FIGHT TO HOLD EVIDENCE FOR HAYWOOD

Lawyers Spend Day Arguing, But Case Will Not Reach Jury for Week.

BOISE, Idaho, July 18.—The defense rested in the Haywood trial immediately after court opened to-day. The jury was not brought into court.

It is now expected the case will go to the jury by next Wednesday evening or Thursday at the latest.

Argument on the admissibility of certain evidence occupied to-day's session. Judge Wood has asked counsel to present views as to the materiality of evidence bearing on the action of the citizens of various towns in the Cripple Creek district of Colorado in deporting striking miners who refused to work and those who took part in preventing the non-union miners from accepting employment in the mines.

The defense fought hard to keep this evidence in the record, as it makes a considerable part of their claim that a conspiracy existed between the mine-owners and the Pinkertons to annihilate the Western Federation of Miners. Judge Wood has intimated, however, that he will not allow the jury to consider these matters, and unless argument should change his opinion, it is probable the evidence will be eliminated.

Another point on which the Court has asked counsel to present argument is that portion of the evidence connecting Haywood with the alleged murder of two men in the St. Joe country. Steve Adams is now in jail charged with one of these crimes, which Orchard, in his testimony, swore was a part of the general conspiracy.

An exodus of witnesses in attendance on the trial began in earnest to-day, and by to-night most of them will have left town. Since the case commenced it is estimated that at least 500 have been in town at different times. The force of detectives will also be reduced.
