SCOOP THE CUB REPORTER — The Time For Making Up Has Not Yet Arrived By "Hop"

"AMERICA AS THE WORLD'S LAW GIVER" THEME OF ADDRESS BY J. HAM LEWIS

(By Associated Press.)

ASHVILLE, N. C., August 5.—The prediction that Russia, Germany, Japan and China would some time be arrayed in arms against the United States and that this country could not look for aid from England or, under conditions like those at present, from South America, was made last night in an address by Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois before the State Bar association of North Carolina. His subject was "America as the International Lawgiver of the World Tomorrow."

In preparation for such an eventuality, Senator Lewis proposed calling a council of all the governments of South America and then by "alliance make common cause for the protection of republican form of government in the western hemisphere."

Declaring that Russia had a grievance against this country in connection with the disruption of the commercial treaty with Russia growing out of treatment of the Jews, and that Russia and Germany, who "have no quarrel upon governmental principles between themselves," would adjust their differences, Senator Lewis said:

"Then Germany and Russia will be bound together in a treaty with the object of dominating Asia from Siberia eastward, and then, as joint enemies of the United States they will be found in conjunction with Japan, which, now an ally of Russia, will present to us the attitude of one who has earned the friendships of England and Russia in turn for the aid Japan is giving these countries by driving Germany out of China. Germany, with little love for Japan but with grievances against us, will be as co-operative with Japan as Russia is today. Then with this situation the concentrated allies will seize the Philippines in retaliation for our refusing equality of citizenship to the Japanese. Russia, as the ally of Japan, would seize her former possessions, Alaska. To these will be found China adding her weight, resenting the grievance of exclusion of its people, co-operating with Japan. South America, with her now aroused suspicions of our objects in that zone, for reasons of her attitude of mind caused by misconception of our purposes and drawn from the events of taking the Panama canal and other incidents. England, because of her alliance with Japan, could under no circumstances render us aid, and has no feeling toward us from which we could expect any. But if England could render us aid, you will not overlook that England, if she dared participate, would arouse Russia to retaliation upon her Canadian possessions and Japan upon Hongkong in China, and China upon the possessions at Shanghai and central China. Thus we see too many reasons for ever dreaming of aid from any European source."

To show that these prophecies were not improbable, Senator Lewis cited historical instances where nations formerly belligerents subsequently became allies. Declaring that both England and Germany had abandoned heretofore acknowledged principles of international law and that "for America it is now plain that in any emergency involving her interests there is no law of nations that can be relied on for any benefit or advantage," Senator Lewis led up to his predictions by endeavoring to show that by retaining the Philippine islands, the United States had violated "that prime rule of international law—the departure from her own zone and entering that of another."

"It is the violation of this principle and its consequences which is today the great danger of America's republican institutions," he said.

Previous to entering the Philippines, he asserted, our right to deny the right of Chinese and Japanese "to enter into our civilization," was not disputed, but thereafter it was natural that "these Asiatics should turn to us and say that by all the laws of nations we must give what we take and that as we had come into Asia with our people they had the right to come into America with theirs." This situation, he said, was the real reason for President Roosevelt's action in "taking over the Panama canal territory at a time when Japan had just emerged successfully from her war with Russia."

"A moment's view restores us to a sense of our real situation," he concluded. "With South America suspicious of our methods, lest it mean conquest under the guise of the Monroe dictrine; Mexico regarding us as disturbers and usurpers; we are at once surrounded with enemies, not because of their enmity, but because of their misunderstandings. Should conflict arise in the orient from which it were necessary to defend ourselves in Asiatic spheres we can see that before the Atlantic fleet could pass through the canal, the canal would be blown into atoms through the operation of those nations now bordering it, who would co-operate with our enemies for the gratification of real or imagined grievances. And all of this a legitimate inheritance from the violation by ourselves of the fundamental international law that ordained all republics and theory of republics to their own zone."

"If we persist in the violation of this fundamental law of nations," he continued, "and continue to press our disadvantage against the sure fate of its consequences, then let us promptly embark upon the era of army and navy in quantity and quality, sufficient to defend us against invasion and to protect our possessions. This latter undertaking is too stupendous in expense and sacrifice to be entered upon, if there is a nobler and more consistent course for the republic of the United States to take. I propose an alternative. I propose we return the government of the United States within her own borders, and in conjunction with this let us call to council all the governments of South America and their sisters of the southern seas. Then by alliance with the South American republics make common cause for the protection of republican form of government in the western hemisphere. Have joint alliance of friendships by declaring that our Monroe doctrine meant in no wise to interfere with the purely internal affairs of the South American lands, but that it shall be limited to the protection of the western hemisphere by the United States against any effort on the part of monarchial nations to overcome by force any republic or free people in the western hemisphere. They, in turn for this guarantee, have a brotherhood compact with all the western hemisphere republics that we mutually will oppose any invasion by Europe or Asia of this continent, or any entrance by them as governments upon the sphere of republics, except as shall be in pursuance of the spirit of treaties previously made. Then, add to this compact a demand calling for open seas to all people and an exchange of products of nations upon equal terms to all people. Then we, restored to the principles of American republics, can announce the doctrines of international law to the world, suggesting the terms of amity and the codes of law.

"We will then stand as America—one continent, united for republican government by republican form and democratic spirit."
