LOVE OF A WOLF SAVED HIS HAND, NOT HIS HEAD

Marcell, Who Says He is a Playwright, Tells Police A Queer Yarn

ZOO FIGHT OVER HIM.

Stood Well at the Cage, but Not on the Street, Where Cops Attack Him.

Henri Marcell, of No. 75 West Ninety-fifth street, a playwright, author and translator, by his own description, walked dejectedly into Police Headquarters at 1 A. M. to-day and approached Lieut. Mannion. Mr. Marcell had several prominent bumps on his head, his hat was crushed, his clothes were "mussed up," and one of his hands was in bandages. One of Mr. Marcell's eyes was also discolored.

"There is a wolf in the Bronx Park Zoological Gardens to which I have been greatly attached," he began. "I naturally have a great interest in all wild animal life. Between this wolf and myself there has existed a peculiarly close understanding. She seemed to have an unusual fondness for me, and it was my habit to visit her every Sunday. I hope I make myself understood?"

Petted the Wolf Regularly.

Lieut. Mannion nodded solemnly.

"All the keepers recognized this attachment, and I was given permission to pass within the railing and pet the wolf whenever I liked. I don't know when I ever say a more intelligent and a more, er—human-like wolf.

"Well, it so happened that this wolf was recently mated to a big, fierce timber wolf. This morning I went out to the park and passed within the railing as usual, not having been informed of the facts. What was my surprise, therefore, when the timber wolf leaped upon me while I was petting the other wolf and seized my hand.

"The keepers came running up and tried to beat it off with clubs. I belabored the jealous brute over the head with my cane, but it still held on. Then the other wolf, my wolf, came to the rescue. In its great affection for me the wolf forgot its love for its new mate. A desperate fight followed, the conclusion of which was that the timber wolf was driven off and I recovered my hand."

"But how did you get the bumps on the head and the blow in the eye?"

Says Cops Assaulted Him.

"Last night the pain in my hand became so acute that I decided to visit my physician in West Seventy-fourth street, and I was going along, minding my own business, when a special policeman, whose name I do not know, dragged me off the stoop leading to the physician's office and beat me on the head with a club. He took me to the corner and a regular policeman came along and he jostled me also. I maintain that this sort of treatment is not the sort a gentleman should receive, and I am here to make complaint."

Mr. Marcell was advised to come around later in the day and file his complaint with Police Commissioner Bingham. He said he would.

GOT PROSPECTOR IN "TERROR ZONE"

During a promenade through the "Terror Zone" last night Detective Kesselmark, of the Central Office, saw a husky stranger loafing about and taking what appeared to be a more than cursory interest in fanlights and side windows of shops and stores. At One Hundred and Sixteenth street and Lexington avenue Kesselmark laid detaining hands on the man and led him to Headquarters.

He said he was Joseph Woods, thirty-six years old, a stone cutter. He had in a coat pocket a huge iron nut, wrapped in a sock, and forming a weapon which might be used either as a slungshot on somebody's skull or to knock out windows with.

In the Detective Bureau the man was recognized as Jim Wilson, alias William Dalton, alias James Flannagan, alias John Madison, alias Woods, alias several other things. In the Gallery he is No. 399, with four terms at Sing Sing to his discredit. Wilson owned up to Inspector McCafferty that he was out looking for a housebreaking job. He said he was out of work and needed money. McCafferty thinks it true that Wilson needs money, because only two weeks ago he was nabbed on a charge of attempted highway robbery, but managed to get out of the dilemma.

Out for an Airing

It's meet and right to get papa
To help take care, at night,
Of little babe; but through the day
It's a different question, quite.

'Tis then you need a Nurse who will
Share both your care and worry,
Go through World "Situation" Ads.
Get a good Nurse in a hurry.

THAT'S THE RIGHT COURSE TO PURSUE.

STOVE UPSET, GAS FUMES KILLED MAN

Neighbor Annoyed by the Smell Breaks Into Studio, But Too Late.

Edward Hospelt, fifty-two years old, was found dead in a room adjoining a studio where he exhibited paintings, at 50 [illegible] Broadway, by Mrs. Annie Tarpany, who occupied an adjoining room. At o'clock Friday [illegible] stove which had been overturned and the gas had been turned on. A verdict of accidental death was given after an inquest yesterday, the jury being of the opinion that Hospelt's death was accidental.

Mrs. Tarpany, who was [illegible] in the adjoining apartment, told the coroner's jury that Hospelt sometimes came to her place and slept there. She said he had told her that he was the overgrown son of a [illegible] family of the New York Hospital, and that he was half insane. Dr. [illegible] of the New York Hospital said that the man had been discharged from the lunatic asylum in the Washington street station. So far as is known the dead man had no relatives in America.

STOESSEL'S LIFE SAVED BY CZAR

Death Sentence of Russian General Commuted to Ten Years in Prison.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 9.—Czar Nicholas has commuted the death sentence imposed on Gen. Stoessel for surrendering Port Arthur to ten years' imprisonment in a fortress.

Gen. Stoessel is in failing health. In [illegible] he has never been strong since he started with his soldiers, so many of whom died from absolute want of food and from cold during the siege. The impression prevails here that a full pardon will be granted the general shortly.

Graft Versus Graft.

(From the Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

"He's going to expose a party of graft[illegible]."

"Why does he take such an interest?"

"They wouldn't pay him for refraining from exposing them."
