NORWAY'S BISHOP HERE; WILL TOUR UNITED STATES

Comes by Special Invitation to Unveil Monument at Minneapolis May 17.

MINISTERS GREET HIM.

Lutheran Churchman to Call Upon President Roosevelt on Saturday.

Bearing a message of good will from King Haakon to President Roosevelt and the people of the United States, Bishop Anton Christian Bang, the head of the Lutheran Church in Norway, arrived in New York to-day on the Scandinavian-American liner, the Heligolav.

The Bishop and his travelling companion, Thorale Claveness, Secretary of the Norwegian Society of Norway, were met by a party which went out in a tug and which was headed by Christopher Ravn, Norwegian Consul-General in New York. It was composed principally of ministers, and during his stay in New York the ecclesiastic will be the guest of one of them, the Rev. J. L. P. Dietrichson, pastor of Trinity Church, Jersey City.

Bishop Bang comes to America at the special invitation of the Norwegian Society of the United States, which has its headquarters in Minneapolis, Minn., having the largest Scandinavian population of any State in the Union.

The society has arranged to pay a tribute to the memory and the art of Enrik Wergeland, the Norwegian sculptor, and a bronze likeness of him, presented by the Norwegian Society of Norway to their American brethren, will be unveiled by Bishop Bang in Minneapolis on May 17, an anniversary of the day on which Norway secured its independence. The bishop will be the principal orator, although he speaks no English, and there will be other prominent speakers, among them Gov. Johnson.

The message from King Haakon to President Roosevelt expresses the appreciation of his Majesty and the Norwegian Government for the sympathy and the kindness shown the Norsemen who come to make America their home, and assures the President of the deep friendship of the ruler and the people of Norway. The Bishop and Mr. Claveness will leav Saturday for Washington, and after an audience by the President will go to Minneapolis. They will be entertained at a banquet given at the Waldorf-Astoria by Consul-General Ravn before they leave for the Capitol. On June 11 they will sail for Norway.

Bishop Bang is a tall, muscular, kindly appearing man, sixty-seven years old, but clean-shaven excepting for a fringe of gray whiskers of the type sometimes facetiously referred to as "Galways." His light blue eyes twinkle through thick glasses, and he wears a clerical garb similar to that of the Episcopal ministers of this country. He is a constant smoker, and a thick, black breva is almost always between his lips.

The Bishop was very much interested on the voyage over in Miss Ingeborg Rixlid, a pretty girl nineteen years old, who is making the long voyage from Stockholm to San Francisco to marry her sweetheart, Niels Dryland, a prosperous young farmer who left his own country a few years ago to make enough money in the new world to support a wife.

Miss Rixlid is the daughter of a captain of marines, and her father objected to the match, until the young sailor showed his ability to make a business success.
