INGERSOLL'S HOPE.

Colonel R. G. Ingersoll on Monday evening, April 29, delivered an oration over the remains of his friend John J. Mills, a well known Washington journalist. Mr Ingersoll, in pronouncing this parting tribute of friendship and humanity, gave utterance to the following words: "Again we are face to face with the great mystery that surrounds the world: we question, but there is no reply. Out on the wide waste of seas there drifts no spar. Over the desert of death the sphinx gazes forever, but never speaks. In the very May of life another heart has ceased to beat. Night has fallen upon noon but he lived; he loved. Wife and children pressed their kisses on his lips. This is enough. The longest life contains no more. This fills the vase of joy. He who lies here clothed with perfect peace of death was a kind and loving husband, a good father, a generous neighbor, an honest man; and these words build a monument of glory above the humblest grave. * * * * * All wish for happiness beyond this life. All hope to meet again the loved ones lost. In every heart there grows this sacred flower of eternal hope. Immortality is a word that hope throughout all the ages has been whispering to love. The miracle of thought we cannot understand; the mystery of death and hope we cannot comprehend. This chaos called the world has never been explained. The golden bridge of life from gloom emerges and in shadow ends. Beyond this we do not know. Fate is speechless, destiny is dumb, and the secret of the future has never yet been told. We love, we wait, we hope. The more we love the more we fear. Upon the tenderest heart the deepest shadows fall. All paths, whether filled with thorns or flowers, end here. Success and failure are the same. The rag of selfishness and the purple robe of power lose difference and distinction in this democracy of death. Character alone is immortal. But to all those comes a time when the fevered lips long for the cool delicious kiss of death. Tired of the dust and glare of day, they hear with joy the rustling garments of the night. What can we say of death? What can we say of the dead? Where they have gone reason cannot go, and from thence revelation has not come. But let us believe that over the cradle nature bends and smiles and lovingly above the dead in benediction holds her outstretched hands."

CHINESE VS. AMERICANS.

We shake hands as a salutation; a Chinaman shakes hands with himself. He stands at a distance, and clasping his hands, shakes them up and down at you.

We uncover the head as a mark of respect; they keep their heads covered, but take off their shoes for politeness.

We shave the face; they shave the head and eyebrows.

We cut our finger nails close; they consider it aristocratic to have nails from three to five inches long, and which they are obliged to protect in silver cages.

The Chinaman's waistcoat is outside his coat, and wears his drawers outside his pants.

We blacken our shoes; he whitens them.

We have soup as a first course at dinner and dessert at last; they have dessert at first, and soup to wind up on.

We want our wine ice cold; the Chinese drink their scalding hot.

We bury in the earth; their dead are kept on the surface.

With us black clothing is a badge of mourning; with them white garments indicate the loss of friends.

In that land of opposites it is the man who flies kites, walks on stilts and plays shuttlecock; and to keep up their cussedness they play the latter with their feet instead of their hands.

In China women do men's work and men are the milliners, dressmakers and washerwoman.

With us the right hand is the place of honor; with them is the left.

In dating letters we place the year last; they write the year first.

They always speak of the mariner's compass (their own invention) as pointing to the south.

We pay our physician when we are sick; they pay while they are well, and as soon as they get sick the pay stops.

Here men kill their enemies, but the Chinaman gets even by—killing himself.

We use a soft pillow; they a block of wood.

They launch their ships sidewise, ring their bells from the outside, and actually turn their screws in the opposite direction from ours.
