The Love Letters of Kings, Poets and Heroes May Interest You.

HENRY VIII. "Mine own sweetheart," he wrote to Anne Boleyn, "wherever I am I am yours."

KEATS. "My dear girl, I love you ever and ever without reserve," &c.

BYRON. "I love you and you love me—nay, I more than love you," &c.

CONGREVE. "Recall what happened last night. That at least was a lover's kiss," &c.

NELSON. "To say that I thought of you would be nonsense, for you are never out of my thoughts."

HAZLITT. "When I think of the thousand endearing caresses that have passed between us," &c.

STEELE. "Your air, your shape, your every glance, motion and gesture have such peculiar graces," &c.

GEORGE IV. "Deprive me not of your friendship," he wrote to the beautiful Mrs. Fitzherbert.

ALETHEUO WINS THE NEWTOWN STAKES IN THE BLINDING RAIN

Jamaica Racing Card Ruined by Scratches Owing to Heavy Storm, the Winners Being King Cobalt, Havre, Zethus and Halket.

BY VINCENT TREANOR.
(Special to The Evening World.)

JAMAICA RACE TRACK, May 7.—Seven horses were scratched from the Newtown Stakes, the promised feature of the card here this afternoon. Aletheuo was made the favorite at odds on and he won easily, Dugan riding his second winner of the day on him.

Aletheuo led all the way and was never in trouble. Triumph ran second to the stretch and ought to have finished there, but McCarthy, the hero of Bennings, had all he could do to sit on the horse at the end. Sir Toddington, however, closed strong as did Keator on the rail and all finished in a bunch. Any one might have been placed second and third. This race, like the others, was run in a blinding rain storm.

Shoo-In for King Cobalt.

Only three horses started in the first event, King Cobalt, Masquerade and Hartford Boy and that's how they finished. Cobalt was 1 to 4 shot and he won like one. Masquerade, a Disguise filly who doesn't like mud, was second. This race looked like a lay down for King Cobalt, and few of the bookies laid prices.

Havre Wins Second Race.

When the second race started the crowd was all huddled up in the back of the grand stand, in the barroom, under the stand or any place where they could duck the wind and rain. Personal was made the favorite in this race. She ran second to the stretch behind Force, and then stopped. Force led right up to the sixteenth pole, where Garner came on with Havre, to win easily by three lengths. Miss Highland ran fourth to the stretch and then came on to get third position, three parts of a length behind Force.

In the rain and mud it was hard to distinguish the colors even with powerful glasses. Many had to wait until the numbers went up to know the result. It was a great game to-day.

"Improving the breed of horses," said one regular, as he tried to hold on his hat and manipulate an umbrella at the same time. "What!"

Zethus Wins at Good Price.

The books laid 3 to 1 against Zethus in the third race when he looked a 7 to 5 shot. Zethus won in a gallop after leading all the way after the first half-mile. Druid made the early pace, but stopped only to come again to beat out Chantilly for the place. Chief Hayes beat the barrier and then blew up.

Berkeley Comes to Life.

The fifth race was scratched down to four horses. Tileing was made a hot favorite, but was steadily outrun by Berkeley, the second choice, which by the way was well backed by the wise crowd. Pins and Needles, with Dugan in the saddle, attracted the poor innocents. He finished last behind the outsider Troublesome. Max Blumenthal was one of the many who went to Berkeley and profited. To-day's race compared to Berkeley's last outing was as different as day and night.

LAWYER LOCKED UP ON EX-COPPER KING'S CHARGE

F. Augustus Heinze Says Brennan Tried to Extort $40,000 From Him.

Edward E. Brennan is locked up in the Tombs, charged with coming all the way from Butte, Montana, to extort $40,000 from F. Augustus Heinze. Mr. Brennan, who is a lawyer out in Butte, met the natural finish of one rash enough to try to take anything away from Mr. Heinze.

From the information Mr. Heinze has seen fit to distribute, it appears, that Mr. Brennan reached town yesterday and went at once to the Heinze office at No. 74 Broadway. He told Mr. Heinze that he was here on a delicate mission.

"He said," declares Mr. Heinze, "that he had the goods on me concerning certain violations of the statutes of the State of Montana, of which he claimed I was guilty. He said he held the commanding cards and was in position to have me indicted and put in jail, but would refrain in consideration of $40,000.

"I talked to him for some little time and pretended to agree to pay the money. Then I telephoned up to the District-Attorney's office and laid a trap for Mr. Brennan."

The Butte lawyer called at Mr. Heinze's office per appointment this afternoon. Some time previously Lieut. Beery, a detective on District-Attorney Jerome's staff, had secreted himself in the office where he could see and hear what was going on.

Beery heard some conversation and saw Mr. Heinze hand Brennan three demand notes, payable to Brennan. Two were for $12,500 each, the other for $15,000. Brennan put the notes in his pocket and Beery jumped out and placed him under arrest.

Brennan was arraigned later in Centre Street Police Court on a charge of extortion. Magistrate Moss fixed bail at $5,000, and set the examination for Wednesday. Being unable to command $5,000 bail on short notice, Brennan went to a cell in the Tombs.

He said he would prove in good time that he was guiltless of any criminal intent. The accused man is thirty-one years old and a son of Dr. John Brennan of Indianapolis.

UNCLE JOE CANNON 72; FORGOT UNTIL GREETED.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Speaker Joseph G. Cannon to-day received the congratulations of his friends upon having reached the age of seventy-two years. He attended to his duties in the House with his usual activity, and the fact that the weight of years has not worried him much was attested by a remark he made when a Member reminded him of his natal day. "By Jove," he said, "I hadn't thought anything about it."

M'KEE AND WIFE BOTH BLAMED IN DIVORCE REPORT

Paris Court Expert Presents His Findings in Case for Final Judgment.

PARIS, May 7.—The legal expert of the court presented his conclusion in the McKee divorce case to-day. His finding was in favor of granting a divorce, holding both Mr. and Mrs. McKee responsible. Formal judgment will be rendered May 14.

The suit was brought in this city by Mrs. A. Hart McKee, formerly Mrs. Hugh Tevis. The first hearing took place in March.

In presenting his conclusions the legal expert retraced the history of the McKee marriage and described both Mr. McKee and his wife as "spoiled children of fortune" who had fallen desperately in love with each other. He said Mr. McKee was a man of uncontrollable temper who always had been interested in occultism and magic, and found that he had been guilty of great brutality toward his wife, and that the repeated scenes of violence had seriously affected her health.

He strongly condemned the husband's action, after the application for divorce had been filed, in instituting an "infamous inquisition" among Mrs. McKee's servants, and he characterized the public revelation of the contents of the wife's love letters as Mr. McKee's crowning outrage against a woman whose principal fault was that she loved him too much.

Nevertheless, the law expert concluded, the charges that Mr. McKee had tried to starve his wife, had maltreated her child, stolen her jewels, &c., had not been substantiated.

As for Mrs. McKee, although she perhaps had been guilty of lack of tact, the charges that she had had unlawful relations with her chauffeur and an Italian nobleman had not been proved.

She did nothing serious before July, 1907, when her love seemed to turn to hate and she began making scandalous and unwarranted charges against Mr. McKee.

In his final conclusion that the divorce should be granted in favor of neither the husband nor the wife, the legal expert says such a decision would avoid dishonoring two families who enjoy a good reputation in America, and that it would also spare the children.

The expert found that the French courts are competent to try the defamation suit against Col. Baxter, Mrs. McKee's father, which has grown out of the divorce case, but he declared that neither Col. Baxter nor his wife was involved in the divorce issue.

MILITARY CODE BILL SIGNED.

ALBANY, May 7.—Gov. Hughes this afternoon signed the bill revising the military code of the State, under which the National Guard will be organized hereafter.

BASEBALL GAMES ALL OVER COUNTRY ARE POSTPONED

General Rain Storm the Cause of Cessation of Hostilities.

All baseball games in the big leagues were postponed to-day because of the rain storm, which was general all over the country.

Members of the Giants team anticipated a postponement because of the sad outlook in the morning, and with several of the Boston bunch left on the specials for the Jamaica track. There are two more games scheduled at the Polo Grounds for the closing days of the week.

Rain in Boston caused a postponement of the game with the Highlanders, and the Brooklyns had an opportunity to pass a quiet home-like day in Philadelphia, where Jupiter Pluvius also held sway. Other National League games postponed were Cincinnati at St. Louis, and Chicago at Pittsburg. American League games of Philadelphia at Washington, and St. Louis at Chicago, were postponed.

The Eastern and Union League, Connecticut State, New England and College Leagues were also postponed.

FELL ON THIRD RAIL AND KILLED INSTANTLY.

Slipped on Track While Trying to Avoid an Approaching Train.

Henry Burnett, of No. 10 Van Sicklen avenue, was electrocuted this afternoon while working on the elevated structure at Broadway and Gillen Place, Brooklyn.

Burnett started across the tracks to get out of the way of an approaching train, lost his footing on the slippery ties and fell across the third rail. Flames flashed around his limp figure while other workmen turned off the current at the emergency station near by.

Burnett was instantly killed according to Dr. Savin, who examined him.

POPE'S SIGHT GOOD.

ROME, May 7.—Patrick K. Cahill, of Dublin, optician to the Pope, was received in private audience by His Holiness to-day. Mr. Cahill presented the Pope with a jubilee gift consisting of a pair of lenses especially adapted to the Pope's eyes. He found the Pontiff's sight to be almost as strong as when he was elected to his high office.

100 MEN BEYOND HELP ON WRECK HEAVY GALE IS POUNDING TO BITS

Captain, Crew and Big Force of Wreckers on the Rickmers in Terrible Plight as Seas Sweep Dismasted Hulk.

LIFE-SAVERS POWERLESS TO RENDER ASSISTANCE.

Great Four-master the Sport of Waves, Which Hurl Her 500 Feet Along Shoal—Impossible to Shoot Breeches Buoy Lines to Her.

One hundred men, comprising wreckers and the captain and crew of the big German four-masted ship Peter Rickmers, stranded and breaking up at Zach's Inlet, near Fire Island, are in serious peril, according to latest advices from the scene of the wreck. Lines for breeches buoys, shot from the shore to the ship early to-day, to be ready in case the crew should decide to abandon the vessel, parted this afternoon when a tremendous wave lifted the Rickmers clear of the sand bar on which she was resting and hurled her 500 feet to the westward.

She is now lying 1,000 yards off shore, and the wind is blowing sixty miles an hour. Three life saving crews have made dozens of fruitless attempts to get lines to the vessel, but their guns have not been able to carry in the teeth of the tempest.

All four masts of the vessel broke off close to the deck early to-day, and there is no projection showing on the pounding hulk to which lines shot from shore might be made fast. The seams of the ship are parting and she is rapidly filling with water.

Life Savers Can't Reach Her.

The Evening World called up Capt. E. A. Herman, of the Cove Life Saving Station late this afternoon on the telephone and asked him for news of the wreck. He said:

"The vessel is in a bad way. The wind is growing stronger and she lies almost half a mile off the beach. It is impossible to reach her with lifeboats. She is rolling with every series of waves, and unless we can get lines to her and take off the men with breeches buoys I cannot see how they can escape. It is only a question of time when the ship will break up and the time will not be long in this gale."

Wreckers on board are members of the crews of wrecking tugs and barges sent down from this city when the Rickmers went ashore last week and beachcombers from villages along the Long Island shore in the vicinity of the wreck. They were engaged in jettisoning the cargo of oil in cans early today when the gale came up and drove the ship 500 yards inshore from the reef upon which she originally struck.

The tugs and barges put out to sea in the face of the wind and it was impossible to reach the Rickmers from shore with lifeboats. The unfortunate men on board are lashed to the deck fittings amidships. So far as can be ascertained from the shore, none has as yet been washed overboard.

Wrecking tugs had been working day and night taking off the cargo of the Rickmers, which consisted of 172,000 ten-gallon cans of oil. She was pretty well lighted last evening, and it was confidently believed that she would be floated at high tide this morning. Soon after dusk yesterday the experienced wreckers in charge of operations saw signs of an approaching gale. They ordered that the cargo be thrown overboard without regard to salvage.

Beachcombers Get Oil.

Thousands of cans of oil were accordingly tossed into the sea. At first the wreckers were ordered to punch a hole in every can before committing it to the water, with the double purpose of oiling the surface of the ocean in that vicinity and keep the beachcombers on shore from gathering too much of the Standard Oil product. But there are extensive oyster beds along there, and the natives soon had Government officers on hand, with authority to stop the pouring of oil into the water.

Accordingly the cans were thrown overboard with their contents intact, and when the tide began to run in the beachcombers were kept busy gathering them up and carting them off to the villages along shore. Oil is cheaper than water in that part of Long Island just now.

The full force of the gale struck the ship just before daylight, when two of her masts went by the board. Another broke off at 8 o'clock and the mizzenmast, the last to succumb, snapped and fell over the side two hours later.

In the meantime the ship had been blown half a mile from the point where she first struck, and was broadside to the beach and only a few hundred yards from shore. The tugs and wrecking vessels put out to sea to ride out the storm.

The wind was blowing sixty miles an hour when the last of the four masts of the big ship was destroyed. She rolled and plunged frightfully on the sandy reef, every big wave turning her half over.

There remains no hope that the ship can be saved. The storm is the worst of the spring and the disabled vessel lies in a particularly bad spot.

WOMAN SLAYER HID HER MANY VICTIMS IN CHAMBER OF HORRORS

Mrs. Guinness After Murdering Dupes, Kept Bodies in a Morgue, Then Butchered Them at Leisure—Girl Witness Held.

LA PORTE, Ind., May 7.—As the Guinness murder farm gives up one by one its mangled, dismembered dead the devices and the conveniences of Mrs. Belle Guinness's human abattoir are revealed. This woman, the arch-criminal of the generation, kept a perfect murder trap. Compared with her systematic plan of running a combination matrimonial and homicide bureau, the methods of the Bender family of assassins seem crude and amateurish.

Already the tally of known dead foots up to thirteen. It is believed that the bodies of at least seven more victims of the woman murderer will be found on the pretty, smiling farm, whose green lawns and well kept flower beds hid her dead. If it be true, as is now claimed, that some of the corpses were cut up and shipped away by express, the complete list of those who died by Mrs. Belle Guinness's hands will never be known.

To-day's most astounding development centres about a secret room in the burned farmhouse. This room, with its cement, sound-proof walls and its double-locked door, was a chamber of horrors alongside which Bluebeard's locked close, becomes a commonplace sort of thing. Here, it is believed, the work of dismembering the victims went on. Just below this room, in the cellar, was a sort of icebox, which the authorities think was used by Mrs. Guinness as her own private morgue.

She Held the Keys.

Ray Lamphere, her farm hand, now in jail here, says no one but Mrs Guinness ever entered that secret room or raised the lid of that ice-box. She carried the keys to both.

The belief that Mrs. Guinness is alive grows hourly. The local police are now a unit in declaring that the LURE THAT CAUGHT MANY VICTIMS FOR MRS GUINNESS.

Following is Mrs. Guinness's "matrimonial" advertisement, by which victims were lured to death:

"PERSONAL—Comely widow, who owns large farm in one of the finest districts in Laporte County, Ind., desires to make the acquaintance of gentleman unusually well provided, with view of joining fortunes. No replies by letter considered unless sender is willing to follow answer with personal visit."

Gorgeous Fireworks Display by The World Saturday Night.

The pyrotechnical display, one of the features of the celebration next Saturday night at 9 o'clock of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the ownership and direction of The World by Joseph Pulitzer and of the formal opening of the enlarged Pulitzer Building, promises to be the most gorgeous spectacle of its kind ever witnessed in the city. It will be furnished by Pain, the king of pyrotechnics. The chief features are as follows:

Opening salute of twenty-five aerial guns. Magical illumination of the roof and dome with twenty-five mammoth ruby lights. Nests of fiery Cobras will be released from colossal batteries. Brilliant white lights will illuminate the roof and dome with startling effects.

A salvo of twenty of Pain's Manhattan Beach bombs will be followed by an illumination of the roof and dome with blue lights. Then will come Pain's 1908 novelty—batteries of silver clusters. A display of triple bombshells, each with a different effect, will be succeeded by an illumination of the building with red, green and amber fires.

Thousands of tinted stars, produced from hundreds of giant Roman candles will envelop the dome; then will come a discharge of Painite bombs; a musical golden rain effect, and the great, golden cloud studded with jewels from twenty large shells.

Emerald fires will illuminate the roof and dome, followed by batteries of Pain's acrobatic candles; display of Pain's rocket bombs and a salvo of Pain's fiery spider bombs, the 1907 success of Pain at Manhattan Beach.

Opal clouds, formed by a flight of large shells, an illumination of the roof and dome with amber fires, giving a sunset effect, and swarms of fireflies filling the air, with hundreds of flashlights, will immediately precede the "New York World" batteries, a 1908 concelt.

Powerful magnesium fires will illuminate the building, giving a daylight effect. A flight of large bombs forming The World bouquet will lead up to the marvel of the spectacle, "Pain's electric falls." From the sides of the roof will flow waves of fire, emitting sparkling rays and flashes like molten silver.

GOLFERS PLAY IN THE DRIVING RAIN

(Special to The Evening World.)

GARDEN CITY, L. I., May 7.—The theory that Walter J. Travis is a golfing machine and not a human organism was again brought forward this morning when he made an 84 in the qualifying round of the Garden City tournament amid a frightful storm. The bogy is 75. Jerome D. Travers needed 105, and Fred Herreshoff 114. Findlay S. Douglas was absent, but the field was very classy. Eighty-one entered, but only about half started and hardy two-thirds of those who got off finished.

The wind became a gale as the morning progressed and the course was flooded in spots, while it was so cold fingers grew benumbed and unable to grip the slippery clubs. At times the players could not see through the pelting drops. Connecticut, Rhode Island, Upper New York State, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and the Metropolitan district were all represented. Sweeping changes have been made on the links, with the cups in very tight, so deep that stairs leading to them have been put in. The scores:

W. J. Travis, out, 4, 3, 5, 6, 5, 4, 6, 5, 4—42; in, 4, 5, 4, 5, 5, 5, 5, 5, 4—42—84.
