LESSON FOR DEACON JENKINS

Brother Pulsifer Has Divorce Attorney in Her Behalf From Their Starting Point.

Deacon Zenkins happened in the accident of cosmic cussedness that's to blame for most trouble, and here's how. He'd done sense a mighty sort, 'bout a pack song, that the orthoepistic Ma'am shouldn't hold a tenetty in his house, an' he jestful ol' he'd in his right mind when he was sarcastic', an' he fastened the winders, and fastened the door, an' set down to wait the entertainment.

He didn't have to wait long. Here came the orthoepistic brigade, led by the good lady, two doors strong, and finin' the house locked safe 'en they smashed the winders and proceeded to beat the door in, in which they was quite successful, but there was no sign o' the dancers when they entered, though one o' them said she seen the remains of two legs goin' up the chimney.

The meetin' was called to order, an' didn't adjourn till 12 o'clock that night, when the deacon hollered down the chimney to his good lady to git a ladder, so that he could come down from the roof an' thaw himself.

He didn't have on no coat when he drawed up, but when he come down he had on a purty thick overcoat of icicles; but at this writin' he's thawin' most satisfactory.—Adams (Ok.) Enterprise.

CALLERS HAD PRIOR CLAIM

Comedian's Message Had Merit of Truth as Well as Also Being Highly Opportune.

H. C. Barnabee of the Old Bostonians was engaged in a poker game at a Chicago hotel. There was a big pot on the table, Barnabee and the other player being the only two not sained out. The two eyed each other wickedly. Barnabee's vis-a-vis took two cards on the draw, and comedian but one. The opposite man found he had not bettered the three jacks he was holding, but he felt sure they would beat the two pair he felt Barnabee had. To bring matters to a crisis he pushed forward all the chips he had, and waited impatiently.

"Is that all you have?" asked the sad faced comedian before he looked at his hand.

"Every cent in sight."

Just then the upper of the Bostonians put his head in the door, and said: "Mr. Barnabee, there is a gentleman in the parlor who wants to see you."

"Wait just a minute," said Barnabee. He carefully fayed his cards and found that he had filled his hand. Then he turned to the man in the doorway and said calmly: "Kindly tell the gentleman that I have callers."

The Common Sense of It.

The really old-fashioned educational system upon which ours is founded had a vigorous common sense about it. School ended for the boy at 14 or 15, the freedom of college began at once, and the boy must stand on his own feet. An intellectual standard of a comparatively uniform type was demanded of college graduates. Roughly speaking there was, outside of mathematics and the limited number of sciences then studied, only one system of thought of any importance to be learned, and this involved a real knowledge of Latin and English literature. To be without this was to be in a sense, unfit. The college provided the simple and direct means of mastering this system; and young men put themselves to the task of acquiring it. The pressure of real life, therefore, was felt throughout the system, and the spirit of earnestness permeated education. In other words, the use of one's studies was not lost sight of as now.—Atlantic Monthly.

Lived Wisely and Well.

Felix Schweighofer, the German comedian who died recently, left an estate valued at 1,000,000 marks, and commenting on the extraordinary fact one of his biographers says: "He was a model citizen as well as a great actor. As a citizen he was content to be one of the great majority and had no ambition to be one of the 'grand' class. He was thrifty, but his purse was never closed against the needy and what he did for them was done in secrecy. He was not like many gifted and consequently popular actors who have their regular court, their flatterers, press agents and even scientific helpers. They live in splendor and in the glory which they purchase. They enjoy their lives not so thoroughly as did Schweighofer; but what remains when their curtain has descended is not often a million."

Noisy Rest.

Mrs. Isaac L. Rice, who has done so much to diminish New York's noises, said in a recent anti-noise address:

"I congratulate those New York hotels that have substituted lights for bells. A light, you know, flashes up beneath a room number. In summoning servants that is quite as efficacious while it is ever so much less noisy than the ting-a-ling-a-ling of an electric bell.

"Hotels need such devices. You have heard, perhaps, of that typically noisy hotel whereof a man once asked:

"'Is it an up-to-date place?'

"'Up-to-date? Rather!' was a friend's reply. 'They bring you every night a sleeping powder with your ice water.'"

THE TALK OF THE STATE

And you will not wonder why the store is besieged by exultant crowds morning, noon and night. Indisputable evidence that this prodigous opportunity to save money on Furniture and Carpets is the most marvelous ever placed within the reach of the people is the fact that every record of big selling the state has ever known has been gloriously smashed to Kingdom Come. No news ever spread with such wild fire velocity as the glad tidings of this colossal event.
