ADDRESS OF THE REPUBLICAN CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

STATE CENTRAL COMMITTE,
Republican Party of Louisiana.
New Orleans, March 18, 1872.

To the Republicans of the State of Louisiana:

The Republican State Central Committee having, in the discharge of the duties imposed upon it by the last State Convention, arrived at the regular period which has been set apart by the usages of the party for its State Conventions, and having authorized its President to issue the usual call, therefore deem the occasion suitable to address these brief remarks upon the political situation to their fellow Republicans. The quadrennial election for a President of the United States occurs this year. The election of this high officer of the republic, whose character and political views are so important, especially to the Republicans of the South, and whose selection almost decides our political fate for the next four years, and perhaps the whole future, makes this election one of the deepest and most vital interests to all our people. We feel that we speak their unanimous sentiment when we invite them to respond to the call of the National Republican Committee, and advise them to send our best representative men to the Philadelphia Convention, to help in selecting a tried, true and unflinching Republican to be our next President. Our State election is also of the greatest importance. We have to elect a Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State, Auditor of Public Accounts, Superintendent of Public Education, Attorney General, a new General Assembly, Representatives in Congress. In [illegible] this election is to determine a [illegible] still more important fo[illegible] shall be the next Preside[illegible] determine for the next four years whether the State government shall be Republican or Democratic; in favor of equal rights, or against them; in favor of progress, education and improvement for all people, black as well as white, or in favor only of white progress, education and improvement, and opposed to equal advantages for the black people; whether we shall retain all that we have won and go forward, or whether we shall lose all and go back to where we were at the close of the war.

We wish plainly and distinctly to understand the fact that all parties opposed to the Republican party, whether under the name of Democrats, Reformers, People's party, or any other title whatever, are simply the old Democratic party under a new name, and have for their object but one thing, that is to throw the State government out of the control of the Republican party and into the hands of their enemies. Our people will also see that to defeat the strong and determined efforts of the enemy to again get control of the State, one thing is the great essential, that all Republicans shall be UNITED AND WORK TOGETHER. If we do this, victory is certain.

To this end, we cordially invite all true and earnest Republicans, without regard to past differences, to unite in this convention and to nominate such a ticket and adopt such a platform as will command the respect and support of the whole people.

All good Republicans also desire that our party shall, as we are assured it will, declare itself decidedly, distinctly and definitely in favor of retrenchment, reform, reduction of taxes and the removal of all unnecessary burdens on commerce and trade, and in favor of equal and just legislation for all interests and all classes of persons.

By order of the committee,

P. B. S. PINCHBACK,
President.

WILLIAM VIGERS, Recording Secretary State Central Committee.

FEEDING LAMBS.—Here is an anecdote told by one minister about another: A certain presiding elder, who was noted for being seldom up to time, seldom very animated, and seldom very brief, once kept a congregation waiting a long time for his appearance, and when at last he did come he preached them a very prosy sermon of unusual length, on the text, "Feed my lambs." He had not yet finished when that original old minister known as "Campmeeting John," rose from a seat in the congregation, and said: "Brother, I have had some experience in raising lambs myself, and I have found that the following rules are absolutely essential to successful lamb-raising: First give them their food in season; second, give them a little at a time; and third give it to them warm."

A new article for young ladies' wear is an Alexis polonaise, the waist of which has a steel trap concealed by a masked panier. When a young gentleman who is regarded as a good catch or otherwise places his arm around the woman's waist, he hears a "click" and finds his arm caught. A big brother and lamp enter, and it is neck or nothing with the victim.

Clergyman to man burying his fourth wife: "The Lord has indeed afflicted you." The mourner, sobbing replied, "Yes, yes, he has;" and pausing a moment, and wiping his nose, he continued, "But I don't think the Lord got much ahead of me, for as fast as he took one, I took another."

Pen Sketches.

THE LIONS AT WASHINGTON—HOW THEY LIVE AND MOVE.

[From the Herald of Health.]

THE PRESIDENT.

Everybody knows that he is a smoker, and a tremendous one, too. He told me that while he was in the field he smoked literally all the time, but that in civil life, confined to the house as he is many hours in the day, he has been obliged to reduce the number of cigars that he allows himself. Especially in walking does he smoke. He takes his solitary walks regularly every day, and graduates the length of the walk to the length of the cigar. When John Quincy Adams was Secretary of State and President, he set an example of care for health, with reference to bathing. Every morning, early, during the summer months, he took his plunge into the Potomac. In that form of hydropathic zeal, the present occupant of the White House certainly does not imitate Mr. Adams. The Executive Mansion enables him to take his ablutions in a more private and a more agreeable manner than by a swim in the great river.

MR. COLFAX.

Mr. Colfax has always been a very healthy man. He believes in health. He has tried to take care of his health. He is a jolly and an eloquent advocate of sanitary value of constant cheerfulness, of resistance to bother and worry, of the avoidance of personal quarrels, of moderation in ambition, of living at peace with God and man. Moreover, he takes all the exercise he can get in rapid walking about Washington; he is very temperate in eating; and all his life he has wholly abstained from intoxicating drinks.

At a great dinner party here a few years ago, where were illustrious Americans and foreign statesmen, he declined to take wine. A noted Senator, himself a little heated, exclaimed across the table, half jestingly, "Colfax dares not drink!"

"You are right," said Mr. Colfax, seriously, "I dare not!" That simple answer given with gentle and earnest solemnity, was itself an impressive temperance lecture.

CHARLES SUMNER.

is a prodigy of physical endurance. I have it from his own lips that for many years, indeed for nearly his whole life he has worked fourteen hours a day. He has never been a smoker. He lives "generously," and in a very temperate fashion, in wine drinker. In his younger days he was a famous pedestrian, striking off for his dozen miles without the least difficulty. He has given all that up. Living so heartily, working, so laboriously, shut up with his pen and his books for so many hours, it is astonishing that he keeps so well. But he is a man who will go suddenly when he does go.

SENATOR SCHURZ

is another interesting figure in the Senate. What are his health habits? A glance shows you a noble physical endowment. He has a muscular, active, vital frame; all his movements are quick and vigorous; and, with proper care, he ought to have length of days and great honor. As to drinking and smoking, he is a thorough German—if we may still say that Germany has any monopoly of those graces. I mean, especially, that he has a German's faith in beer, and a German's ability to mash intellectual light from the midst of dense clouds of tobacco smoke. His greatest peril lies in excess of work. Such a brain as his cannot lie idle; nay, it is a despotic member, dominating the whole man, and tramping on the gospel of rest and sleep. Senator Schurz works very late at night—even till one and two o'clock. For exercise, he has a fine place. He has taken a house about two miles from the Capitol, and resolutely walks the whole distance, both going and coming.

MR. BOUTWELL.

Is a man of medium size, of wiry frame, self-possessed, and temperate in all things. He takes good care of himself—especially depending on billiards for exercise. For that game he has a passion, and amid the click of ivory balls he eases his mind of the cares of State.

BROKEN HEARTS.—To a man, the disappointment of love may occasion some bitter pang; it wounds some feelings of tenderness—it blasts some prospects of felicity; but he is an active being—he may dissipate his thoughts in the whirl of varied occupation, or may plunge into the tide of pleasure. But woman's is comparatively a fixed, a secluded, and a meditative life. She is more the companion of her own thoughts and feelings; and if they are turned to ministers of sorrow, where shall she look for consolation? Her lot is to be wooed and won; and if unhappy in her love, her heart is like some fortress that has been captured, and sacked, and abandoned and left desolate.

A lady witness, being absent when called, was brought up for contempt, in neglecting to obey the summons, and plead inability to come.

"What was the matter with you?" asked the judge.

"Had a boil, sir," she responded.

"Upon your honor, madam?" queried his honor.

"No sir, on my arm."

As a stout old lady got out of a crowded omnibus in front of the Astor House, at New York, a few days ago, exclaimed: "Well, that's a relief, anyhow." To which the driver, eyeing her ample proportions, replied: "So the 'osses think, mum."

ANCESTRAL WISDOM.—In Pennsylvania not many years ago, there dwelt the decendants of Peter Van Schrenbendyke, who had cleared his own farm guarded it carefully from the attacks of the Indians, and willed it to his son Jacob. The farm was transmitted in regular order from father to son, and at last became the property of Heinrich Van Schrenbendyke—a good natured, stolid Teuton, whose son, Johannes, a bright, lively youth of sixteen, was told to saddle the horse and ride to the mill with grist, and hurry back. The grist was, on such occasions, placed in one end of a bag, and a large stone in the other end to balance it. Johannes, having thrown the sack across the horse's back and got the grist evenly divided, had no need of the stone to balance it. He therefore ran to his father and cried:

"Oh, fadder, come and see. We don't need de stones any more"

The old gentleman calmly surveyed the scene, and with a severly reproachful look, said:

"Johannes, your fadder, your grandfadder, and great-grandfadder, all went to de mill with the stone in one end of the pag, and de grist in de odder. Und now you, a mere poy, set yourself up to know more as dey do. Yon put the stones in de pag and never more let me see such smartness like dat."[—Exchange.

This is a sort of a compliment from the Madison Journal:

Our neighbor of the Vicksburg Times thinks Governor Warmoth undoubtedly possess the popular favor of Louisiana. If Governor Warmoth receives the Republican nomination he will undoubtedly receive the popular vote, and in order to do that it will be necessary to cut loose from a great number of his hangers-on. What unpopularity Governor Warmoth has is due to his associates more than to himself.

ALWAYS TELL THE TRUTH.—A demure-looking chap hailed a charcoal peddler with the query, "Have you got charcoal in your wagon?"

"Yes, sir" said the expectant driver, stopping his horses.

"That's right," said the demure-looking chap, with an approving nod; "always tell the truth, and people will respect you," and he hurried on, much to the regret of the peddler, who was getting out of the wagon to look for a brick.
