JACK JOHNSON PAYS FINE—FOR HIS CHAUFFEUR

Pleads Guilty for Driver on Speeding Charge and Whirls Away Again.

"Mustah" Jack Johnson and his 60-horse power imitation of a comet break into the public prints again to-day.

But this time the "despair of the white race" appears in the role of friend and counsellor for Charles Brown, who has been working the speed-clutches of the Johnson comet.

He made his appearance in the Butler Street Court, Brooklyn, this morning, whither Brown had been summoned by Bicycle Policeman Walter Manley who stopped him on Flatbush avenue, about half a block from the Bergen Street Police Station, while he was hitting the high spots on the way to Coney Island yesterday.

When Brown came before Magistrate Fitch he denied the allegations of the policeman.

"Ah wuz not goin' no faister 'en eight miles an hou,' Yo' Honoh," spoke up Brown, whereat he was interrupted by his master, who gently thrust him out of the limelight and took the centre of the stage.

Thus spake Johnson:

"May it please Your Honor, I do not think that my chauffeur quite understands this court business. I am sure he is mistaken when he pleads not guilty. I believe he was going from eighteen to twenty miles an hour. Ain't that the truth, Brown?"

The little man bowed his acquiesence in his master's statement and Magistrate Fitch was about to impose a fine of $10, when there came a ripping, tearing sound. The railing against which Johnson was leaning gave way under his weight, and he all but fell to the floor.

This diversion at an end, and the judgment of the Court pronounced Johnson extracted a roll of yellow-backs, paid the fine and departed.

As he was stepping into his car he turned to Probation Officer Bryan.

"We're off for Coney Island," he said. "Come along if you like. I'll make it in just three minutes if it costs me ten."

There was a snort, a whirl, a cloud of dust, and the Johnson comet was on its way, with the court-officers eagerly awaiting the returns.

He'll be back soon.

Brooklyn Jury Decides Miss Williams Unfit to Manage Property.

Miss Jennie Perkins Williams, the recluse of Prospect Place, Brooklyn, was found to be incompetent this afternoon by a jury in the Brooklyn Supreme Court. The proceedings were instituted by two nephews who wished a committee named to take charge of her property.

Miss Williams had posed as having millions, and said J. Pierpont Morgan and Henry Clews were her intimate friends. An examination of her estate revealed that it was worth about $7,000. She is now an inmate of the Long Island State Hospital.

CAMBRIDGE DEFEATS BELGIANS IN WATER.

GHENT, Belgium, May 25.—The eight-oared race between the Ghent Rowing Club and Jesus College, Cambridge, on the Terneuzen Canal today, resulted in a victory for the Englishmen. The distance was one mile, 55 yards. The winner's time was six minutes, twenty-two seconds, while the Ghent eight covered the distance in six minutes and thirty-five seconds.

Sixty thousand persons witnessed the race, in which the Belgian crew was the favorite.

WRECKED STEAMER FLOATED.

NEWBURG, May 25.—After being fast on the rocks near West Point for three days, the steamer Central Hudson of the Manhattan Navigation Line, was floated off by pontoons to-day.

She was towed to Brooklyn for repairs.

"A lovely sight,
Is this, indeed!
And size, just right
To fit my need."

Just imagine it!

If you paid a dollar for a plate of soup you'd think it ought to be pretty good, wouldn't you?

Well just imagine you pay a dollar for a plate of

Campbell's TOMATO SOUP

Find all the fault you can. Could there be a finer color and fragrance? Or a more delicious fresh racy flavor? Could soup be richer, or more completely satisfying?
