"PAUL REVERE" OF DEATH AVENUE KILLED BY A CAR

Horse That Galloped in Front of Trains for Years Meets End on Trolley Track.

RIDER HELD AS THIEF.

Had Been Tossed Through Window Into Car, Causing a Panic.

It was the sad fate of "Paul Revere," after galloping in front of freight trains in Death avenue for several years to warn pedestrians of the cowcatcher's proximity, to be killed by a street car early to-day.

Policeman Martin of the West Twentieth street station was standing at Ninth avenue and Twenty-seventh street at 1.30 o'clock, when he heard a loud clatter on the cobblestones. Up the avenue he saw a horse, feet extended, neck outstretched, rider urgent, racing a trolley car.

Dennis O'Brien, the motorman, it developed later, was not aware of the race, but the rider of the horse was determined to beat the car if he had to go all the way to the Battery. They were neck and neck for half a block, when suddenly the "jockey" tried to cross the bows of the trolley.

Rider Thrown Into Car.

The horse went headlong into the side of the car. His rider pitched through a window to the opposite seat and fell unconscious at the side of a fat woman, who shrieked and made for the door. Other passengers tried to climb out of the windows. It was a block before the car could be stopped.

Dr. Everingham came from New York Hospital and took a few stitches in the injured man's scalp, after which he was taken to the police station and arraigned before Lieut. Howe. In the mean time agents of the S. P. C. A. had examined "Paul Revere," who hadn't taken another step after heading into the car, and ended his pain with a pistol shot

The horse's rider said he was Michael Driscoll, twenty-two years old, a driver, of No. 519 West Twenty-eighth street.

"Where did you get that horse?" asked the lieutenant, who thought he recognized in Driscoll a member of the Gopher gang.

"Where did I get the plug? Why, horseback riding is one of me fads."

"I asked where you got him?"

Just Racing for Exercise.

"Oh! Why, I just met him. He came up to me over in Sixth avenue. He seemed to have no friends and was hungry. I was afraid he'd try to go into some restaurant and get something to eat; so I started to ride him to the police station."

"Why were you racing with a trolley car?"

"Just wanted to exercise him. Thought may be he might be a thoroughbred."

The police zent for John Sweeny, in charge of the relief station of the New York Central at Thirtieth street and Tenth avenue, where the horses ridden before approaching trains in Death avenue are kept. Sweeny said he recognized the dead animal as Paul Revere, a horse stolen earlier in the night from the sheds. He added that it was the fourth horse stolen from the New York Central there this week.

Driscoll was then locked up on a charge of grand larceny.

BERESFORD LOST RACE AT WALDORF FOR LADY'S GARTER

He and Tea Man Glare at Victor, Who Restores Article to Blue-Eyed Owner.

The Hon. Bobby Beresford, known to the elite books as the Hon. Robert Seton Beresford; Assistant Manager John Hobby, of the Waldorf-Astoria, and James Humphrey, a tea expert, had an obstacle race in the corridor of the Waldorf-Astoria last night.

The obstacle was a lady's garter with a small gold chain purse attached to it.

The three saw the thing slip into sight under the pale blue skirt of a young person with fluffy hair and eyes as blue as her dress.

The Hon. Bobby and the tea man got out in front of Mr. Hobby while he put the little object in its owner's hand and glared at him so hard that he did not dare smile—if indeed he wanted to. As for the young person in blue she almost made it obvious that she spent at least twenty-three hours out of twenty-four receiving just such embarrassing restorations.

HETTY GREEN ADDS MILLION.

CHICAGO, May 26.—Mrs. Hetty Green has sold for a million dollars in round numbers a tract of real estate here which she obtained in 1877 for $196,312.70. The land lies in the Gage Park section, entirely unimproved. The purchasers are Cobe & McKinnon.

The property was taken over by Mrs. Green from Sarah Gage thirty-four years ago on an unsatisfied mortgage, and has lain idle while the neighborhood has been improved by others. Mrs. Green fought every additional burden of taxation.
