Foran's backers should consult McBride.

Wouldn't Foraker distance Foran? He would!

Our democratic brethren are to have a nice, cool time at Cleveland this week.

The being who isn't thankful for Monday night's rain must be either a clam or a chump.

The Almighty has a splendid way of blessing people when they apply to Him for favors.

People who properly appreciate and utilize their mercies and blessings are pretty sure to get more of them.

The democrats shouldn't make the same fatal mistake this year they did last. They will, though, or some other one.

We hope that the people who were praying for rain on Sunday are now giving thanks for it, asking no rebate on account of the hail.

The Cincinnati Telegram "yows" for a "vet in some vast wilderness." Cots are cheap. Why does he not get one and take to the woods?

Dr. Warner, of New York, is adding an auditorium, to seat 600 to 800 people, to the Warner Hall conservatory of music building at Oberlin.

The English conservatives are willing to make concessions, in amending the land bill, to the liberal unionists. They are forced to do it.

Do not throw out any slurs at John Sherman, gentlemen! There is no occasion for that. John Sherman is a man who is intrinsically strong and great.

Rev. Tom Beecher, of Elmira, N. Y., plays base ball on week days, and preaches and runs a Sunday school, 1,000 strong, on Sundays. He is a muscular Christian.

The Buffalo News, whose editor, Butler, first brought out Cleveland for the presidency, has "soured" on him and will oppose his re-nomination. It seems that Butler hasn't a gutta percha stomach.

Really, brethren, it is not necessary for us to nominate a president this year. It is not wise; neither is it possible. This is not the year for it. The republican candidate will be nominated next year and elected.

The venerable but vigorous John H. Shearer, editor of the Marysville Tribune, is to represent Union county in the next Ohio house of representatives. We may as well commence putting "Hon." before his name, especially as he is worthy of it, on general principles.

The Dayton Herald sent up a fervid suggestion, Saturday, that a certain Springfield deacon should pray for rain. There was a very bountiful fall of the refreshing element here on Monday night. If it did not reach Dayton it is probably because the Herald man neglected to do his part of the praying.

The really good citizen and the genuinely good fellow is the man who really does something of real value to his town and his fellow-citizens—and keeps doing it. The man whose service begins and ends with smiling and shaking hands about the time nominations are being made, may be ornamental, but he isn't of much use in the world.

If the delegates to the next national convention cannot agree to nominate Sherman or Blaine, they might do well to nominate Chauncey M. Depew, of New York, and General Ben Harrison, of Indiana. That would be a mighty strong combination. The republicans have an abundance of republican timber, this time, and are not absolutely forced to choose between any two, or any dozen, men.

The Ohio State Journal, the central organ of the Ohio republicans, published at Columbus, has enjoyed, for the past few years, most excellent business and editorial management, and it has become very prosperous. We alluded a few days ago to the fact that the paper was soon to be enlarged and printed on a new fast press. The enlarged sheet is to have eight pages, and in its new form the State Journal will be of the same size as the Chicago Tribune, Inter Ocean, St. Louis Globe-Democrat, Louisville Courier-Journal, Cleveland Leader, and others of a like standing in the country. The weekly edition will be also enlarged from forty-eight to sixty-four columns. Additions will be made to the editorial staff, and the scope of discussion of public matters enlarged and improved to comport with the new order of things. Thirty thousand dollars will be expended by the publishers in consummating these arrangements, and the mechanical outfit covers a perfecting press and all the other belongings of a complete modern newspaper establishment of the first class. The State Journal is the first morning paper to reach this city, arriving here at 7:25 and is delivered to subscribers at about 8 o'clock. It is already a very good, bright paper, but, certainly, with its proposed improvements, it will command a much larger custom in this city, as it will correspond, in its appointments and features, with the Cincinnati papers. We understand that the enlarged and improved paper will appear about the first of August. We congratulate Mr. Briggs, the manager, and Mr. Flickinger, the editor, on their success.

No one who meets the veteran president of Oberlin college, Mr. James H. Fairchild, would suspect from his appearance, that the great clock of Father Time is about to strike 70—some time next year. One would think he was in the prime of life, as he certainly is in the prime of mental clearness and vigor. Mr. Fairchild himself has been rather mislead by the face of the clock and has expressed a desire to retire at the end of his sixty-ninth year, but a national convention of the Alumni of Oberlin, recently held at the Tremont house, Chicago, and which was largely attended by very strong, substantial friends of their alma mater, decided that President Fairchild ought to remain at the head of the institution; determined to organize a $50,000 "James H. Fairchild professorship;" recommended that the president should have assistance in the discharge of his duties and given an opportunity to devote himself largely to literary pursuits, and that, after his retirement, when that became absolutely necessary, his salary should be continued for life. This was a most commendable expression and we have no doubt it will materialize into an applied fact. The members of the convention also determined to raise $200,000 to $500,000 for further improvements and endowments at Oberlin college.

Tuesday's Dayton Journal says, in double leads:

Whatever may be said of the policy of endorsing John Sherman for the presidency at the Toledo convention, no true republican ought to hesitate when such a proposition is presented. Mr. Sherman most eminently deserves this endorsement from Ohio republicans. We do not believe that a republican delegate will now hesitate. It is a question of duty, loyalty and state pride. Let there be a solid vote.

The REPUBLIC feels that way. In the same issue, the Journal says, in single leads:

All the friends of Mr. Sherman are agreed that Ohio republicans should endorse him for the presidency, but they are not agreed upon time. But the endorsement, no doubt, will be made at Toledo. Nevertheless, we are apprehensive that it will organize a formidable opposition in '88 that might have been evaded.

The REPUBLIC feels in that way, also.

Wittenberg college never enjoyed such a progressive and aggressive management as that now in charge of its affairs. The new ladies' hall is officially mentioned as an assured fact. Finer grounds than Wittenberg park do not surround any other literary institution. The college, too, has a faculty which corresponds, in actual teaching ability, to those of the best institutions in the land. We congratulate all friends of Wittenberg, at home or abroad, on the rate of progress which is shown by the operations of the college.

Young Lord Randolph Churchill—radical conservative—is proving a very strong and influential person. He has commanded, in some things, the approval of Gladstone and Parnell, and he has dictated, largely, a policy which the government is being forced to adopt. Randolph Churchill is certainly one of England's coming men, and it is a question—and not much of a question either—whether he hasn't got here already. It will be borne in mind that Randolph is an American—by marriage.

Does Old Man Thurman, by reason of age and superior abilities, inherit poor Durbin Ward's rich legacy of empty honors from Ohio democrats?—Xenia Blade.

That is a very easy one. He does. All Ward got, and all Thurman will get, will be nice "notices" in democratic papers. When the nominations are made, to Thurman's name will nowhere be found.

All American women who wish to vote and will agree to do so as soon as they have an opportunity, are requested to send their autographs and addresses (postoffice) to Mrs. Louisa Southworth, vice president of the National Woman's Suffrage association, for Ohio, at 844 Prospect street, Cleveland, Ohio.

THE LOVE OF MONEY

IS THE SURE FOUNDATION ON WHICH THE SHARPER BUILDS.

The Confessions of a Fakir—The Sale of Consumption Cures—Three Card Monte, How the Counterfeit Money Dodge Is Worked.

"The foundation on which every sharper works is avarice," said the same fakir after lighting a fresh cigar, "and he is as apt to catch the citizen of a big town as the farmer living by himself. I was attached to a circus for several seasons, and my statistics proved that the biggest share of my money came from townspeople. I had a wheel of fortune, two or three patent medicines, a prize drawing, etc., and I have taken more money at once out of a lawyer or merchant than out of a countryman. It is curious how all sorts of people will invest their money on a wheel of fortune. There never was one made which did not give the operator seventy-five per cent. advantage to begin with, and by trickery this advantage is increased fifteen or twenty per cent. You must know that the operator has things so fixed that he can stop the wheel at will. In a town in Rhode Island a member of the common council who was accounted one the sharpest men in the locality left $200 with me before he quit my wheel. If there is any raffling or dice shaking it is all fixed, of course. In the prize drawings you may find gold and silver watches and sums of money displayed, but these cannot by any possibility be drawn.

"I know several men who have grown rich and retired from business on the sale of liver invigorators and consumption cures. Both remedies are made of the same materials—to wit, water, whisky, and one or two extracts. In Dayton, Ohio, a fakir connected with our show sold 130 bottles of liver invigorator and 208 bottles of consumption cure in four hours, and not over one quarter of the lot was sold to farmers. When you appeal to a man's avarice you hit him hard; when you get him to thinking his liver is out of order, or that he is consumptive, you can take his last cent. You have seen the glass bulbs filled with reddish fluid which fakirs claim to test the blood with. Any one of average sense must know they are frauds, but I have seen the best physicians in a town pay their ten cents with the rest. About the only thing connected with the outside of a circus which is not a fraud on the public is the electric battery. That's all right, and the owner will give you all your money calls for, and sometimes more.

THREE CARD MONTE.

"Now take the three-card monte business or thimble rigging. Those two games have been worked for the last fifty years all over the United States, and the public has been warned against them tens of thousands of times. They are still the most profitable games to be worked. Even old gamblers are enticed to bet. Several years ago, while I was taking a vacation at a health resort in Wisconsin, a couple of the fraternity called for my assistance to help "work" a farmer. The intended victim was a sharp, keen man, about 30 years old. He had been everywhere and was up on all dodges. He had been tried with the gold brick and treasure dodges, but had refused to bite. We held a council and decided upon a plan. He had three or four fine horses for sale, and the trio of us drove out to his place to make a purchase. We were Illinois stock raisers and horsemen, and it was apparent that he sized us up for sharp fellows. One of my companions, whom I will call Jim, did most of the talking, and he alone desired to do the buying. Jack and myself sat down on an old hay rack in the barnyard, and scarcely noticed the horses as they were paraded up and down in front of us. At the proper time Jack took out his cards and began to show me how it was done. I bet him that I could pick out the card, and we began to talk in loud tones and attract attention.

"The farmer finally came over. He knew all about the game and smiled in pity at the idea of being caught, but in less than ten minutes, and that without any urging from any of us, he had bet and won $10. That was the entering wedge. He was allowed to win $30, and then cleaned out of $40. His spirit of avarice was now thoroughly aroused, and I'm telling you the solemn truth when I say that he put up the horses and walked into the house and brought out a bag containing $900 in gold. He sat down with greedy eyes and pale lips, and won and lost until we had his last dollar. There was no explosion when he had parted with his last gold piece. On the contrary, he volunteered the statement that all had been fair and above board. An afterclap always accompanies such events, however, and we got out of the state just as he had secured warrants for our arrest.

"The safest game worked in the country to-day is the counterfeit money dodge, and a goodly number of fakirs are rolling up fortunes by it. I supply myself with a lot of new greenbacks—ones, twos and fives—and then appear in some small town as an agent, or detective, or a stranger seeking recreation. It requires only a few days to size up the people. In every town of 3,000 inhabitants there are half a dozen men who are ready to deal in the queer if it can be done safely. The money I have with me is, you understand, perfectly good. When I have selected my man I exhibit the money as counterfeit. I am quietly supplying the 'stuff' to a few good fellows at so much on the dollar. Before he buys I give him a bill to take to the post office or bank. It passes without question and he is elated. I am ready to leave a dollar bill with him as a sample, but if he gives me an order to be filled two weeks later he must pay me a certain sum in advance, say $40 on the hundred. To prove to him that I have his interests and safety at heart, I produce a paper in which he makes me his financial agent to receive and receipt for all moneys. Then I give him my note of hand, due some weeks ahead, for whatever money he pays me, and he rests assured that the law cannot trouble him. His order is never filled, of course.

"Suppose he kicks. He has given me power of attorney. I have not had a dollar of the queer in my possession. The document is an effectual bar to his recovering or prosecuting. I have seen two or three tests of it, and the fakir came out with flying colors in each instance. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, however, the victim loses whatever he has advanced without a thought of raising a row. He has been caught in bad company. He intended to swindle his neighbors. He is amenable to the law. He is glad enough to let the matter drop and say no more about it, and the fakir goes from pasture to pasture and rolls up a fat bank account. When you read in some newspaper of the sharpness and cuteness of the American people, just remember what I have told you. No people are swindled oftener, and none hunger so badly for the fakir and his tricks."—New York Sun Interview.

Formula for Hog Cholera.

A formula for a mixture that is reported to be exceedingly efficacious in Tennessee for maladies coming under the convenient head of "cholera" is as follows: Extract of logwood, 4 ounces; bluestone, 4 drachms; mix these with 6 pints of boiling water. To this add 1 1-2 pints of turpentine, the same quantity of kerosene, also of raw linseed oil. This makes 10 1-2 pints, to which is added about 21 pints of pokeroot tea, and the whole will make one dose of one pint each for thirty-two hogs. Bluestone in this recipe is also called blue vitriol. It is sulphate of copper and is not the same as copperas. The latter is sulphate of iron and called also green vitriol. A good authority says of this mixture: "As a preventive of disease, by the destruction of disease germs and intestinal worms, the above prescription is well suited to inspire confidence in its efficiency."

Flag of the Hawaiian Navy.

The flag for the Hawaiian navy has been designed by Mrs. Strong, and contains in the center, on a white background, a gold crown resting on a yellow shield. The shield contains a white taboo stick, crossed by two red kahilis, one representing his majesty the king and the other Princess Lillinokalani. Above, below and on both sides of the crown and shield are alternate stripes of red, white and blue. The borders of the flag are gray.—Honolulu Gazette.

Packing Boxes Made Out West.

Space is so valuable to New York merchants, and particularly those engaged in the dry goods trade, that they prefer purchasing the packing boxes in which they send off their goods to making them upon their own premises.

To manufacture a sufficient number for their daily need would require considerable room, and the rent for such accommodations would more than offset the amount saved. Therefore they purchase them from men who make the sale of such boxes a specialty. Their places of business are to be seen in all quarters. Generally they choose some piece of property, which, through litigation or other causes, has not been built upon, where the rent is trivial and the lease of short date, and buy up all the old boxes they can lay hold of. These they patch up and sell at a considerable advance. There are others in the business, however, who are, in the true sense of the word, manufacturers. Some of them conduct a safe and profitable business upon a small scale, while others launch thousands of dollars in the enterprise. These latter are mostly men residing in Michigan, who buy lumber by the wholesale. They have sawmills of their own, in which they manufacture the parts of a box complete, according to careful measurement. The different portions are numbered and sent to eastern shippers, who have only to nail them together according to directions to have a perfect packing box. Such boxes can be produced at remarkably low prices, and the dealers in this city cannot successfully compete with their western rivals. In fact, the business has grown to such proportions in Michigan that several firms have invested thousands in forest lands in order to procure timber at the lowest possible cost.—New York Mail and Express.

A Car Coupler Wanted.

Among railroad men it is universally admitted that the common method of coupling cars is about as primitive and as dangerous to life and limb as can be devised, and that the man who invents a proper substitute for it will reap both fame and fortune. The patent office has issued over 3,000 patents for improved and automatic couplers, and yet none has been invented which seems to be perfect under all the requirements of railroading. Many men have spent the best portions of their lives in devising couplers only to find when they were subjected to practical use that they had defects that were fatal and could not be corrected.

Said an inventor: "There are plenty of couplers that are practical and safe, but the great trouble is that their first cost is a little more than that of the ordinary pin killer, and as money is dear and brakemen are cheap they won't adopt them."

"I hardly think that is fair to the railroads," responded a third. "In my opinion, the great obstacle to the adoption of automatic couplers is the lack of uniformity in the height of cars. The master car builders have adopted a standard, but they have no means of enforcing it on roads. If all the cars could be made of one uniform height, there would be but little difficulty in devising an automatic coupler that would work; but at present you might as well try to make a straight stick without two ends as a coupler that will do the work required by present circumstances."—New York Sun.

Water Will Not Burn.

It is a matter of general belief that by certain chemical processes water can be made to burn. Now, combustion in almost every instance, is a process of combination of oxygen, and water is a completely oxidized body; that is, all the affinities of the hydrogen have been combined with an equal number of those of oxygen. The chemical reaction which would be accompanied with heat and light has already taken place, and cannot be repeated. It is true that we can decompose water into its constituent gases, and produce the phenomenon of combustion by recombining them; but it is not the water which is burned in such a case, but the hydrogen gas obtained from it. The man who "was born to set the river on fire" must be classed with other mythical personages.—Popular Science News.

General Powell, who is posing as the probable democratic candidate for governor in the fall campaign of the state of Ohio, is believed by prominent democrats to be pledged to the securing of the indorsement of President Cleveland by the state convention.

The Athlophoros Co. gladly refers sufferers from rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica, nervous or sick headache, kidney and liver complaints to those who have been cured of these diseases by Athlophoros, and will furnish names and addresses of many such persons to those desiring them. Athlophoros is the only remedy for these diseases that can stand such a test.

J. S. Atchison, Druggist, London, Ohio, says: "Athlophoros has the best sale of any rheumatic medicine I ever sold. I do not hesitate in recommending it for rheumatism in every instance, as I have witnessed many wonderful cures from its use. I could not begin to recollect the many different cures it has made, but had I known I would ever be asked that question I could have given a hundred names at least. I can remember a few names in the city that were badly afflicted and owe their cure to Athlophoros, among them being T. J. Houston, Mrs. W. H. C. McCoy, Mrs. Martha Tenney, John Mitchell, Robert P. Smith, and M. M. Thomas. These are all well-known citizens, and will confirm all I say if you will call on them." During this conversation Mr. T. J. Houston happened in the store. Upon being questioned he said: "I have been subject to rheumatism for ten years. I hobbled down here with the assistance of two canes, and bought my first bottle of Athlophoros. In two hours after I took the first dose I came back again to say I had no further use for the canes. From that time I grew better. After using three bottles, which is four months ago, I have been free from rheumatism. My wife has also used it for neuralgia. Its effect with her was wonderful. It removed the pain almost instantly."

Every druggist should keep Athlophoros and Athlophoros Pills, but where they can not be bought of the druggist the Athlophoros Co., 112 Wall St., New York, will send either (carriage paid) on receipt of regular price, which is $1.00 per bottle for Athlophoros and 50c. for Pills.

A Resolution

For Market street sewer.

Resolved, By the council of the city of Springfield, Ohio, two-thirds of the whole number of members elected thereto concurring, that it is necessary and that it intends to make a public improvement by constructing the sewer hereinafter described, according to the plans, profiles and specifications therefor on file in the office of the city civil engineer and recorded in the office of the city clerk and open to the inspection of all parties interested; and that the sewer in the sewer district both hereinafter described, said sewer and sewer district being part of the plans and system of sewerage for said city heretofore adopted by the council, is required and is hereby designated for immediate use.

Said sewer is described as follows, viz:

Beginning at Mill Run sewer in the center of Market street; thence south with the center of Market street five hundred and sixty two feet to the south side of the Indiana, Bloomington and Western railroad.
