When Alliance Citizens Show a Way.

There can be no reason why any reader of this who suffers the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the pains and dangers of kidney ills will fail to heed the words of a neighbor who has found relief. Read what an Alliance citizen says:

Hrs. J. M. cott, 714 Missouri St., Alliance, says: "Though it has been some time since I have used Doan's Kidney Pills, I gladly recommend them. I have known of many people, who like myself, have found them good. I suffered from kidney disorders for quite awhile. I had backache, felt tired and languid and at times was very nervous. Then, too, my kidneys acted irregularly. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me relief from these ailments."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply act for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Scott had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs. Buffalo, N. Y.

FAIR AND FORTY

By LILLIAN M. RICHARDS.

(© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Down on a narrow street, where the newsboys are shouting "extra" most of the time, Myra Wiggins sits at the cashier's desk in one of those famous restaurants with a buckwheat front. For three years now she has sat in the same window. Her eyes and ears are always open and nothing escapes her notice.

"Say, mister," loudly called Myra one day to a customer trying to sneak out. "pay your check here, please."

"Huh," growled the man, coming back, "think you're smart, don't you?" And slamming the money down on the counter, "I suppose you thought I was trying to steal a feed."

"My goodness, no," replied Myra, smilingly. "Guess you were suddenly called to a fire; but after this, when in here, be sure and see me before you leave."

"Well, is that so," sneeringly. "I suppose you're the one who runs this place, or maybe you—"

Just then her antagonist felt a strong hand grab his collar and demand an apology. Without hesitating the irritant murmured something about being sorry, and slunk out of the door. Myra's well-rounded face became as red as roses when she looked up into the set features of big Jim Roland.

Jim was a traveling man, and every time he came to town it was not the cats alone that brought him to this well-known restaurant. Myra Wiggins' welcome smile and pleasant "How do" won him from the start. Now their friendship grew rapidly into something more deep and lasting.

They were both around the age of forty and had come to that quiet understanding of accepting things as they were; neither inquired into the other's affairs.

A buxom widow was Myra, with one child, whom she boarded at a small farmhouse in the country. Little Irene Wiggins was the joy of her life, and Myra delighted in her trips to the region where she could breathe God's pure air, away from the smoke and dust of the city. One day, as she and Irene were starting for a stroll over the hills, a rosy-cheeked lad of ten begged to go with them.

"He lives here, too, mamma," pleaded her little girl. "He's my bestest chum. Can't he go?"

"Well, all right," replied Myra, good-naturedly, and taking his hand she inquired: "What's your name, little boy?"

"My name's Jack Roland," was his sturdy reply, as he stumbled along by her side.

"Roland!" gasped she, hearing the name. Then, curiously, "And what's your father's name? Jack, too?"

"No, my daddy's name is Jim," and with upturned face, "you've never met my daddy, have you? He's the biggest man in the world."

Myra's thoughts were racing a mile a minute, and her cheeks burned with curiosity. "He must mean my Jim," she thought, and still it didn't seem possible. The children ran ahead and were slidding on the ice, little dreaming of the turmoil they'd created for Myra.

After a few minutes' silent pondering she called them to her side and turned back toward the house. As they were chatting in their childish way she heard little Jack say to Irene:

"My Nanna's coming this afternoon with daddy. She brings me candy and everything."

Unable to restrain the question any longer Myra asked, "And who's your Nanna, little boy?" at the same time dreading the answer.

"Why, that's his mother, of course," quickly replied Irene, as if Myra ought to know.

"She works in the city," joined Jack wistfully.

It was with quiet dignity that she refused Jim's many invitations the next week, and his big, jovial face wore a puzzled expression, although he said nothing. Myra, who was usually the picture of health, looked drawn and pale. She'd grown fond of Jim Roland, and to discover him in this light hurt not a little.

Tucking Irene on her sled, Myra started down the back lane through the meadows. The cold, clear air brought the color to her cheeks, as Irene pulled the end of her scarf and shouted, "Gitty-up-horsey." It was a wonderful day and ended all too quickly. On their way back, as Myra went to jump a brook she fell with a scream in the snow. Irene tried to help her up, but finding her arms limp became frightened and cried for help. Little Jack Roland and his daddy, who were walking near by, came to their assistance.

"Is this little girl your sister?" he asked smilingly after the pain had subsided.

"No, Jim, she's my daughter," explained Myra quietly. "I've been a widow for several years now. And I—I thought until recently that you were single also."

"Why—so I am," he replied emphatically. "Little Jack's mother died when he was a baby."

"And—and Nanna?" asked Myra tremblingly.

"Nanna," with a relieved look. "She's my sister, and has almost been a mother to Jack, who knows her by no other name."

Then, leaning closer and looking into her eyes, he continued: "Myra, dear, he would so like to have a real mother. The children already love each other. Could—could you ever care enough about a big clumsy like myself to—"

"Oh, Jim, I'm so happy."
