"BEAUTIFUL CAROLYN" LURED AWAY TO BE HEROINE OF MOVIES

Friends Have Seen Her in Pictures, but She Cannot Be Found.

Pretty as a daughter of a millionaire who is an admirer of moving picture films, Carolyn Cagnani, a pretty thirteen-year-old child, of No. [illegible] East Thirtieth street, ran away from her home on May 1. To-day her sister, Mme. Jeannette Sotini, a dressmaker, of No. [illegible] East Thirtieth street, appealed to The Evening World to find the girl.

"Little school friends have seen Carolyn's picture in moving picture films," said Mme. Jeannette, "and we have been to all the moving picture factories, but have been unable to locate my sister. Our mother is heartbroken. Some children who know Carolyn saw her at Forty-ninth street and Third avenue a week ago. She was crying to come home, but said she was afraid to.

"After Carolyn left we found that she had received a letter from a moving picture actress, urging her to run away and pose as her daughter, so that they could appear in moving pictures."

Among the child's effects, after she left home, was found the scenario of a moving picture play, in which she, as "Carolyn Lorraine" was the heroine, and a woman named Ruth Blackwell was the adventuress.

The scenario, written in the child's hand, told the story of a "rich banker and a wealthy wife, who had a beautiful little girl named Carolyn." The "beautiful Carolyn" married a "rich Prince," who gave a feast for the poor.

If you see a moving picture like that, the heroine is the missing Carolyn, whom mother wants her to come back home.

13-YEAR-OLD GIRL LURED AWAY TO PLAY IN MOVING PICTURES.

POISON AND DROWNING BOTH FAILED IN HIS CASE.

Hotel Cook Leaped Into Van Cortlandt Lake, Then Crawled Out Again.

Charles Jones, a cook employed in Mills Hotel No. 3, attempted suicide in Van Cortland Park to-day by first drinking carbolic acid and then jumping into the lake just below the eighteenth hole of the golf course. Two park workmen, John Gleason and Max Gaskins, saw the man crawling out of the lake on his hands and knees. He fell over unconscious as they reached him.

The workmen carried him to the golf house, where he revived, but all he would say before the arrival of an ambulance from Fordham Hospital was, "I took poison and tried to die." To the ambulance surgeon he gave his name, but would not explain why he had sought to die. He was removed to the hospital and will likely recover.

CURFEW WILL RING AGAIN AT BRONX FIRE HOUSE.

New Home Found in Yard as Result of Pleas From Neighbors.

The Tremont neighborhood of the Bronx is to have its curfew bell after all. The bell was silenced a week ago by Fire Commissioner Johnson. It was hung in the cupola of the house of Engine No. 46 in East One Hundred and Seventy-seventh street. The bell, which weighs half a ton, was too heavy for the cupola and its weight had rocked the building until it was unsafe.

A flood of letters descended on Commissioner Johnson when his order was published and the bell was heard no more. Letters were received from hundreds of people of the neighborhood, saying that they now had no way of regulating their clocks and that their children, instead of coming into the house at 9 o'clock, at the first notes of the bell, were gadding about the streets until they were run down and dragged in.

Commissioner Johnson has ordered that a wooden tower be erected in the yard back of the engine house and that the bell be rung hereafter at eight in the morning, noon and nine at night as it had been for forty years before he ordered it taken down.

LOST $8,000 ON BANK STOCK.

R. Ross Appleton, President of the old Fourteenth Street Bank, now the Security Bank of New York, was the defendant in a suit on trial to-day before Justice Newburger and a jury in the Supreme Court, whereby Robert S. Smith sought to recover $8,000 in connection with a stock transaction.

Smith alleged that Appleton sold him fifty shares of the stock of the bank, representing it to be worth $300 a share. He declared that when he wanted to dispose of the stock he found it was only worth $7,000 in bulk, instead of $15,000, as Appleton had represented.

Smith said he paid $12,000 for the stock. He borrowed $10,000 from the bank to do it, giving a note with securities worth $77,000 as collateral for the loan.
