WHEN SAMPLE CHECK WOULDN'T GO, YOUTH USED REVOLVER BUTT

Brooklyn Jeweller Is Assaulted, Ring Is Taken, but, Assailant Caught, Confesses.

Young Charles A. Eulner, student at a Fulton street business school, will never be a great financier. Charley's too rough. Failing to negotiate the purchase of a diamond ring last night with one of the sample business school checks, Charley rapped a jeweller over the head with a pistol, selected a gem at leisure and ran into the street. He was chased by policemen and citizens, caught and locked up. To-day he was arraigned before Magistrate Norman, after confessing his disastrous plunge into the business world, and held for further examination.

Max Raff, the jeweller, of No. 1762 Broadway, Brooklyn, waited on Eulner. Charley wanted to see some diamonds. Raff took out a tray of small diamonds and displayed them on the counter, meanwhile keeping hold of the tray.

Charley liked one weighing about a carat. He thought he'd take it. Placing it aside, Charley reached in his inside pocket, pulled out several loose blank checks, selected one, placed it on the counter and in a business-like manner asked:

"Pen, please!"

The pen scratched in a round, plain hand the words: "Pay to Bearer One Hundred and Fifty Dollars ($150.00)" and was indorsed "Charles Eickler." It was made out to the "Commercial Bank." Raff examined the check and discovered that it was one of the blanks used in school to familiarize students with banking business. Not wishing to invite trouble, Raff suggested that he did not know "Mr. Eickler" and regretted he could not accept the check.

"Oh, I see," murmured Charley. Then, as he added that it "was quite embarrassing," his hand stole to his hip pocket, and in a flash the butt of the gun felled Mr. Raff behind the counter. Charley then selected a little better stone and left, leaving Mr. Raff apparently oblivious of his departure. But Raff was fast on Charley's heels when the young bandit business youth reached the sidewalk.

Up Broadway flew Charley with Raff in hot pursuit. Two blocks away he turned into Chauncey street. Policemen and citizens joined in the chase. In his flight Charley tossed his gun over a hedge and let the ring go after the pistol. At Bushwick avenue he ran into the arms of Policemen Winkel and Law. They took him to the Ralph avenue station. To Capt. Arthur Carey Charley admitted the theft and assault and told where his gun and the diamond could be found. Charley is nineteen years old and lives at No. 208 Railroad avenue, East New York.

WOMEN GLOBE TROTTERS END 'ROUND WORLD TOUR.

Mrs. Brooks and Her Sister Had Only One Annoying Incident on Trip.

Miss B. Eleanor Thompson of Greenwich, Conn., and her sister, Mrs. F. T. Brooks, have returned from a tour of the world, their second in six years. They declare it is as safe now for two women to make the trip as it would be for men, or if they had men along.

About the only exciting time they had on this last trip, Miss Thompson said at the Plaza to-day, was in Tokio last February. It was the day the rioting started, newspaper buildings were burned and mobs were everywhere. They were riding in an auto from the theatre to their hotel when rioters first jeered, then attacked them with stones and getas (wooden shoes). They escaped injury by lying flat in the bottom of the car until the chauffeur could get out of the mob.

Miss Thompson said there has been a wonderful change in the accommodation for travellers in six years. The hotels in the Far East are comfortable and many are up to date. The most important thing in travelling in hot climates, she said, is being careful about the food.

SECOND HIGH SCHOOL BOY ENDS LIFE FOR SAME GIRL.

James Roy Curley of North Adams the Latest Suicide Over Love Affair.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., July 8.—James Roy Curley, a Drury High School boy of North Adams, shot himself fatally yesterday in the bathroom of his father's house.

He is the second Drury High School boy to commit suicide in the same manner within a year. It is said both boys were infatuated with a North Adams school girl. Edward Lunt, prominent in athletics, the chum of Curley, killed himself.

Curley had continued his attentions to the girl. He was captain of the Drury High School baseball team, which recently won the county championship, and also played on the football team. He was nineteen years old.
