The New Plays

"What Would You Do?" Can't Expect an Answer

BY CHARLES DARNTON.

"WHAT WOULD YOU DO?" was by no means the main question at the Hudson Theatre last night, when the play of this inquisitive title brought out the curiosity, rubbers and snowshoes of that faithful band which knows neither fear nor cold feet.

It wasn't at all a matter of what we would do—if we could. From Charles Frohman in an upper box to George Cohan in an orchestra chair, everybody with a programme to misguide him probably asked himself: If "What Would You Do?" by Augustin MacHugh, author of "Officer 666," doesn't suggest a farce, what in the world does it do? To put it briefly and as painlessly as possible, the rest was disappointment. After the title came nothing but four acts of the most conventional "drama," as it is conveniently called, that has run its course from Wall street to familiar points north in many a night. There are authors, of course, who never get off the beaten path. But why in the name of the heavens above or the snow-piles below a playwright with a sense of humor should go plodding along the road so many have travelled before him is more than I can understand. The world is full of dull people, and an amazingly large number of them fall heavily into the habit of writing. This is only to be expected. But when an author with the rare gift of humor settles into the rut of every-day pedestrianism we must confess to surprise, as well as regret.

Bessie Barriscale as Alice.
Milton Sills as Herbert Hostage.

Like many another before him, Mr. MacHugh has made the mistake of taking himself seriously. He may retort that every one should take his work seriously. I agree with him there. But that's quite another matter. The point is that no one is likely to take his latest play seriously. Certainly last night's audience didn't. That death-knell of a play, the laugh in the wrong place, was heard too often to leave any doubt on this score.

"Dress, bridge, tango! Don't the women of New York do anything else?" cried the hero in accents wild. The poor man was distressed because he was poor. So far, so good! If Mr. MacHugh had gone in this strain to the bitter end he might have made a play out of domestic economy as it is practised in New York. I don't say he would—but he might have brought home a truth or two. He is the second playwright within a year who has taken this vital subject in hand only to let it wriggle out of his grasp.

Last night the wife who presumably caused all the trouble was given a breathing spell when she should have been kept panting for all she was worth. This wasn't much, you may be sure, for she was not only a parasite, but the daughter of a parasite. To make her case more aggravating she was addicted to silks. She wore light blue silk when the husband, who had robbed the bank where he was employed to keep her going to tango teas and other little affairs, caught her in the arms of the millionaire who had helped her along with a loan of $10,000. It so happened that the husband, at this interesting moment, had taken so much money from the bank that he could count a profit of $300,000 in the stock market. A magazine writer, wise in the ways of the financial world, had urged the bank clerk to cover his $50,000 grab by taking anything short of a quarter of a million to play the game in Wall street. As a result, virtue was rewarded to the sum of $300,000.

Leaving money out of the question, the wife certainly was at a disadvantage when she found herself playing an emotional scene in light blue silk. It was quite an easy matter for her to get out of the arms of the millionaire—but she couldn't get out of that dress. The best she could do was to sink to the floor in it while the husband threatened to bring his $300,000 wallet down upon her blond head. For a moment that scene in "Camille" you know so well trembled in the balance. It was a relief to find that the wallet was not stocked with ready money. When it came to a question of the wife's taking that $200,000 and the prediction was made that she would refuse it, the audience raised a cynical laugh. It only remained for the husband to say "You can't love me and New York at the same time," and then he bolted to a simple cottage in the country, where he decided to devote his ill-gotten gains to building a home for crippled children. A beautiful idea, is it not? Either the world is getting better, or plays are geting poorer. But "What Would You Do?" can't expect an answer that will do it any good.

Everything was against it.

The acting couldn't help matters. Milton Sills bore up to the best of his ability under the financial burdens of the husband, while Miss Bessie Barriscale looked pretty and extravagant as the wife. A. Byron Beasley made the magazine writer a remarkable individual, and Richie Ling put up a solid front as the millionaire. There is something so instinctively fine about that silver-haired artiste, Miss Hattie Russell, that the role of the vulgar mother was unsuited to her, though she played it very well. Miss Louise Drew was bright and chipper in her own way, but she couldn't disguise the fact that the play itself was hopelessly dull.

"CASCARETS" IF CONSTIPATED, SICK, HEADACHY, BILIOUS—DIME A BOX

Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, constipation, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out to-night with Cascarets.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets sweeten and regulate your stomach; remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and that misery-making gas; take the excess bile from your liver and carry off the decomposed waste matter and constipation poison from the bowels. Then you feel great.

A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your head clear, stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular and make you feel bully and cheerful for months. Don't forget the children.

CASCARETS WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP.

SHIPLEY NOT SUSPENDED.

Goethals Denies Report Concerning Panama Canal Official.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Inquiry today of Col. George W. Goethals, Chairman of the Panama Canal Commission, who is now here, establishes that dispatches dated Panama, on or about Feb. 9 last, stating that W. F. Shipley, chief clerk of the subsistence department, had been suspended on grounds of incompetence, were erroneous. Col. Goethals says Mr. Shipley was not suspended at that time or at any time since. He also speaks of Mr. Shipley as an entirely competent official, and says he is now satisfactorily discharging the important duties of chief clerk of the subsistence department of the canal.

It appears that Mr. Shipley had spoken of resigning in order to accept a business position which had been offered him, and this may have given rise to the other statements in reference to him. Col. Goethals also entirely exonerates Mr. Shipley from any connection with the alleged transactions which led to the suspension of John Burke, manager of the Commissary Committee.

Dies at 104 After a Fall.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 3.—Mrs. Elizabeth Sharon died at her home in Steelton yesterday. On Feb. 6 Mrs. Sharon observed her 104th birthday. She was in good health until ten days ago, when she was injured by falling.
