WHAT $10 WILL DO.

A sort of paradox is the fact that thousands of people who make no effort to save a dollar when times are highly prosperous will develop and practice economy when work and opportunity are less plentiful. The best way, of course, s to try and save at least a lltte all the time, putting by a larger amount when earnings are at their height. As a nation we are not taught that economy which makes France the banker of the world, and whose accumulations come not from vast exports of natural resources, but from the combined small savings, consistently continued year after year, by the French people as a whole.

If the people of this country would save during the year 1915 an average of $10 per capita, the grand total at the end of the first twelve months would be the magnificent sum of One Billion Dollars.

The French save, partly because it has become hereditary, and chiefly because the children are brought up that way and are taught the dignity of accumulation. We, on the contrary, in a spirit of false pride, are inclined to scorn the necessity of saving as though it were something of which to be ashamed. If our present experiences shall teach us thrift, it will be a strengthening of a great national weakness.—Popular Mechanics.

If asked to name the most lawless section of Louisiana today the average citizen would unhesitatingly reply "Caddo parish." Not only do mobs march into a city like Shreveport, and break open the jail, take out prisoners, hang them or burn them alive, but juries repeatedly fail to convict men and women guilty of atrocious murders. Blind tigers and boot-leggers are thicker than leaves in Vallambrosa. Verily, Tangiphohoa is no longer in the limelight and would be unheard of if the jail did not have a habit of breaking down whenever a few prisoners were confined in it. —Abbeville Meridional.

WHY IS IT?

Why is it, it is often asked, that people in small towns can find no better business than prying into other people's business, and then exaggerating the truth in regard to the same. People who pretend to be Christians, who attend church regularly, who, in the sight of their neighbors are generous and charitable, yet who, without the slightest provocation, pick up some little mistake, or more often, at nothing, will so scandalize one as to ruin his or her reputation for life. While they would not steal from them worldly goods, yet they rob him or her of what is more precious than gold—a good reputation. Why can't people practice the christianity that they preach and "do unto others as you would have them do unto you?"—Avoyelles Enterprise.

The New York supreme court has established a precedent by granting a divorce to a wife on the ground that her husband had before marriage concealed the fact that he was suffering from tuberculosis. The decree was granted on the broad ground of public policy, in the light of popular information as to the peril from the disease. Only the fact that information as to the existence of the disease had been withheld before the marriage contract was before the court.—Enterprise.
