Keeler Kicking.

W. S. Branch has returned from Wyoming. There are six scholars in attendance in school district No. 26. The big boys have to stay at home and help do up their fall work.

Coal is rapidly taking place of wood in our neighborhood. Cannon City coal can be bought at Wallace for seven fifty per ton.

E. N. Keeler went to Wanneta, Chase county, Neb., the first of the week. Potatoes are worth fifty cents per bushel in our neighborhood and plenty of them have been raised too.

Frank Hallor had a valuable mare cut pretty badly on a wire fence last Sunday. Hunting ducks is all the rage now and every man, boy or kid that is big enough to pack a gun is after ducks.

Geo. Beam has been almost wild for the last few days with the jumping tooth ache; says it can jump harder than any flea he ever saw.

The horse race which was to have been at Wallace last Saturday was a failure. I guess one was afraid and the other dare not run.

Mayor Davis is delivering 500 bushels of corn which he sold to James Cooper. Sylvanus Wilber is busy husking corn says he don't like to husk corn when it gets cold, I don't either.

John Sopher is having trouble with his well. It was a botch of a job in the first place and the man who bored the well shouldn't have a cent for slaking such a well.

Four prairie schooners past the post office to-day going west to grow up with the country. TENDER FOOT. Keeler, Neb., Oct. 13, 1887.

WALLACE, Neb., Oct. 13, 1888. Mr. Smallwood, one of the stockholders of the Wallace Security Bank is here from New York.

Wm. Ingram has moved his family from near Hayes Centre Monday and are now doing a regular confectionery business.

A gentleman was down from Elsie Thursday trying to contract brick at $30 per M. I believe that he succeeded in selling a few.

One of the principal features of our burg is a free circus daily. Our livery man has a number of range ponies and the boys have a picnic breaking them.

The Bank of Wallace is now doing business. A Literary and Debating Society was organized at the school house Saturday evening and the following question discussed:

RESOLVED, That it is to the best interests of the people of this vicinity to defeat the bridge bonds at the coming election.

B. W. Padget, B. A. Shinkle, C. H. Reynolds, affirmative; J. W. Naton, M. Porter and Holland Howe, negative. The negatives fought very hard but were defeated. I am glad to see an organization of this kind as it can be made both interesting and instructive if rightly conducted.

AGRICOLA.

[In publishing the first communications relative to the Colbeck insanity case, we little thought that the correspondence would assume the bitterly personal nature that it has; but having published Dr. Longley's last letter, it is only justice to Dr. McCabe that he have a chance to show his position. From each of the last communications we have found it necessary to expunge many adjectives, but they are strong enough as they are. With this letter, the correspondence is ended, so far as this paper is concerned.—Ed.]

NORTH PLATTE, Oct. 11, 1887. TO THE EDITORS OF TRIBUNE:

Judging from the vomit of abuse, with which my aged friend smeared the columns of your paper last week, my candid uncontradicted and repeated statements of facts made him sick indeed. In his wretched agony he forgot his surroundings, and actually had the temerity to lecture me on my selfishness. O amazing gall! F. H. Longley, whose cold and cruel selfishness is a theme for every tongue, is now piteously howling for the sympathy of the public in the suffering brought upon him in reality by his own stupidity or greed but what he claims to be my selfishness. His brazen cheek is equalled only by his foolish egotism when he sets himself up as an object of professional eminence exciting the jealousy of his competitors. No, you are not a man to be jealous of either professionally or socially. When I become jealous if my jealousy does not take a higher aim I want to die and have my name cast into oblivion. Blinded by all the absorbing passion of greed he offers as a justification for "bleeding" the county treasury the disabolous excuse that he pays a great amount of taxes than someone else.

With the recklessness of defeat he charges me with falsehoods without even attempting to prove them, and ends his savoury epistle with a disgusting recantation of his self-glorification in which he makes a ludicrous attempt to force down the throats of the public his self-adjudged triumph over me.

He challenges me to the proof of my statements. Here is the proof: Having under my care by order of the poor master the insane man C. P. Colbeck, and having learned that a meeting of the commissioners of insanity was called to take action in his case, I called upon the county clerk, who is one of the commissioners of insanity, and by the way the one who keeps the "records," and asked him what had been done at this meeting with reference to sending C. P. Colbeck to the insane asylum at Lincoln. He (the county clerk) said to me in the presence of his deputy, that there had been nothing done at this the first meeting in the case, as Dr. Longley, after having examined the man, could not positively say that he was insane and deemed it advisable to await further developments. This occurred on the day following that on which the meeting in question was held, and I there and then stated emphatically, to the county clerk, that the man's insanity was fully and markedly developed and had been so for several days. Thanking me for this information he said he would call another meeting as soon as convenient at which meeting my aged friend meekly performed the "Haman Act," and had written on the "record book" that C. P. Colbeck "is insane, and violently so, and a fit subject for treatment."

Now who is the "self-branded falsifier?" Is not this frank and honest statement of your fellow commissioner true? Come now, answer manfully, and stop your shuffling, or forever remain silent and leave this with all the other sordid and selfish tricks of your life to hide away behind the curtain of time.

N. McCABE, M. D.

It is estimated that one-sixth of the population of this country, or 10,000,000 people are Catholics. There are 6,910 churches, 7,668 priests, 61 bishops, 12 archbishops and one cardinal.
