FRECKLE-FACE

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here is a chance Miss Freckle-face, etc., a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a responsible druggist that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles while it does give you a clear complexion the chance is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from any druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the entire case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine as this is the prescription sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.—Adv.

OBITUARY NOTES.

Former Congressman Charles E. Littlefield died yesterday in the Post-Graduate Hospital following an operation. He represented the Second Congressional District of Maine in Congress from 1911 to 1913 and was supported by the National Association of Manufacturers in his last campaign. Joe Mulholl, who exposed the association's lobby methods, was his campaign manager, and W. H. Taft spoke for him in his district. Before going to Congress Mr. Littlefield had held various public offices in Maine, coming from the Republican and the Anti-Republican ranks. Since retiring from office he had practised law in New York with his son, Charles. His home was at No. 250 West Ninety-first Street.

Frederick Martin Davies, banker and broker, columnist and horse lover, is dead at his home, No. 20 East Eighty-second Street, after an illness of nearly a year, during which he sought health in California, Florida and a long yachting trip. He was a member of the firm of Davies, Thompson & Co., an officer and director of corporations, and a director of the Part of Morris of the Alpheus Club of Amerika, Ltd.

Judge Isaac Smith Vice President of the White Star Steamship Company, died at the age of sixty-five years at his home, No. 108 Clinton Street, Brooklyn.

Miss Anna Mulholland, a sister of Gen. Edward L. Mulholland, is dead of general debility at the age of eighty-five years at her home, No. 193 Fort Greene Place, Brooklyn.

Prof. Joseph J. Hardy of Lafayette College is dead at his home in Easton, Pa. He was known as a writer on mathematical subjects.

The Right Hon. John Francis Moriarty, Lord Justice of Appeal in Ireland, is dead.

Dr. Sherman Voorhees, eye specialist, is dead at his home, No. 27 Clarke Street, Brooklyn, of injuries received in an automobile accident ten months ago.

Gertrude Kingston Gives Shaw Play In Grand Street

By Charles Darnton.

It is only natural that Miss Gertrude Kingston should "take" to a little theatre to introduce herself to New York since, as doubtless you know, this English actress-manager established the Little Theatre in London.

Strangely enough, innovations rubbed wheels with pushcarts in crowded, noisy Grand Street on Saturday night when Miss Kingston appeared in Bernard Shaw's dramatic travesty, "Captain Brassbound's Conversion," at the Neighborhood Playhouse. The neighbors, unfortunately for them, were rather crowded out on this occasion by an audience composed largely of uptown people. But, fortunately, there are other nights when they may have the English actress and the Irish author quite to themselves. In any event, I must say they are getting a great deal for their money, with prices ranging from twenty-five to fifty cents. On a recent Sunday night Miss Ethel Barrymore gave them "The Shadow," so that altogether the Neighborhood Playhouse has gained a distinction that stamps it as unique.

The innovations and pushcarts on Saturday night served to emphasize the fact that New York is a city of violent contrasts. Seeking Shaw along the busy street, we were offered slices of pineapple, broken bits of cocoanut and various intimate articles of underwear with impartial and unblushing enthusiasm. When we finally arrived at the simple red-brick building with green shutters that looks like the twin of Winthrop Ames's Little Theatre strayed, lost or stolen, it seemed as though the audience, too, had strayed far from Broadway in search of something interesting.

Special interest, of course, centred in Miss Kingston rather than in the play, inasmuch as "Captain Brassbound's Conversion" was made known to us some years ago by Ellen Terry, who had only to be her own charming self in playing Lady Cicely. It was easy for her to manage everybody, from a brigand to an Arab sheik, simply by telling them that they had "such nice faces." Ellen Terry's charm, it goes without saying, is a rare gift. Miss Kingston, doubtless, would never dream of quarrelling with the gods on that score. What she did, more than anything else, was to bring an unfailing quality of common sense to her role. She acted with intelligence, precision and poise. Tall and dignified in bearing, she made her personality felt, and, more than this, her diction was admirable, conveying as it did the inestimable value of good breeding. If at times she seemed a bit hard where Lady Cicely should have been softly expansive, she was always interesting, and she played her last act very well indeed. Here she caught the mellow mood and humor of her role delightfully.

Everything considered, the other members of the company were satisfactory. No one, perhaps, could play that deliciously impudent cockney, Drinkwater, as Edmund Gwenn acted it with Miss Terry at the Court Theatre in London. But Galway Herbert managed to keep his audience interested and entertained, and moreover he gave the impression that he knew his man from a close study of the type. Ernest G. Cove was excellent as Rankin, Thomas Louden clung tightly to the dignity of Sir Howard Hallam, and while Ross Canmer was not always quite sure of himself as Brassbound he had a certain strength that counted in his favor. Incidentally, even Shaw himself must smile to-day at some of the things he has put into Brassbound's mouth—high sounding, melodramatic speeches that probably recall to patrons of the Neighborhood Playhouse those good old blood-and-thunder days on the Bowery.

But in this little theatre far down on the east side Miss Kingston is doing something worth while. More praise to her!
