Kills His Wife and Himself.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 17.—Frank B. Hendrickson, thirty-three, a vaudeville actor, killed his wife, Orlly, thirty-one, at their home at No. 28 South Orchard Street this morning. Then he sat down, leaned a pipe against his wife's head of her, put in clerk, and fired a bullet in his own brain, dying instantly.

Serious Accusations of Using Prussic Acid Bombs.

ROME, Sept. 17.—The War Office officially accuses the Austrians of having used high explosive bombs containing prussic acid, probably the most deadly poison known to science.

'TIS A RED HOT TALE

Of a Hat Pin, a Chinaman, a Girl and Just an Ordinary Reporter.

The well known team of Temperature & Humidity were establishing a continuous performance record and the Hot Weather Reporter was emerging at intervals from the tropical telephone booth to announce weakly that there was no relief in sight, when a friend of the paper rang up from his breeze-swept uptown office and spoke as follows:

"A girl friend of mine told me last night about a girl she heard of who went to a movie with her fiance and got her cheek cut on the hat pin of the woman in the next seat. She wiped the cut with the young man's handkerchief and the next day she broke out with leprosy. They traced the handkerchief to a Chinese laundry where it had been washed last and found that the Chinaman had leprosy too. Now the Chinaman and the girl are both in an isolation hospital. The girl's case is hopeless and the young man is going off his nut because the authorities won't let him marry the girl and live with her during her remaining days of suffering."

That seemed almost good enough to print. The friend of the paper was asked where the precise data might be obtained.

"Oh, you can get all the dope from the girl who told me about it. She works for the Universal Dickering Corporation on Broad Street. S'long."

The Leprosy Reporter was on his vacation, so an Ordinary Reporter was put on the story. He mingled at once with the cheery throng that was steaming down Nassau Street and presently located the friend of the paper's lady friend.

"What about this friend of yours with the leprosy?" inquired the Ordinary Reporter, holding an early edition where it would conceal the sugary shred which had been his collar.

"Oh, yes," responded the young lady comprehendingly, "only I didn't know her myself. I heard about her from one of the other girls at lunch yesterday. I'll call the girl that told me about her."

"Oh, yes," said the other girl when the Ordinary Reporter's desire for facts (in time for that 11 o'clock edition if possible) was explained to her, "Gracie Whoozis told me about that. She works for the Society for the Prevention of One Thing and Another up on Twenty-eighth Street, west of Broadway."

By the time the Seeker of Facts emerged from the subway at Twenty-eighth Street he was damp enough to moisten stamps on at any point. Gracie Whoozis proved to have a cold horror of the public prints. It was the only cold thing she reported had encountered up to that time.

"That girl's family may not want it known that she has leprosy," argued Gracie, "some folks are funny that way, you know. I don't think I'd better tell you about her."

Perspiring patience prevailed, however, and presently Gracie reluctantly disclosed the fact that she'd heard the story of the Leper Lady told at a party over in Brooklyn.

"The girl who told it works in the office of the Artificial Eyelash Foundry on lower Broadway," she added. "So did the girl who was infected. Don't tell them I told you about this."

Into the subway again went the Ordinary Reporter, all aglow with enthusiasm and prickly heat. He came up for air at Astor Place this time, and at the eyelash place the manager had never heard of any of the girls there laying off on account of leprosy. He would inquire, anyhow, just to be sure. Presently he returned with a somewhat scared looking little girl from the sorting room.

"This is the young lady you want," he said, smiling. "She was telling the other girls about that case the other day."

"That's right," corroborated the little sorter. "We got to talking about leprosy at lunch one noon and I told the girls that story. I heard it three years ago from a girl up in Canada."

Slowly and sadly the Ordinary Reporter melted and trickled down the elevator shaft.

DENY STEALING PURSE.

Two Men Arrested on Broadway Accused by Woman.

Charged with snatching the purse of Miss Grace Kinnelnan of the Times Square Hotel, John F. Holloran, an agent, of No. 1493 Broadway and Gardner Brooks, a bantamweight fighter, of No. 675 Seventy-sixth Street, Brooklyn, denied the woman's charge at Police Headquarters to-day.

The complainant ran up to Traffic Patrolman Smith at Forty-fifth Street and Broadway last night and told him two men had spoken to her and when she repulsed them had snatched her purse, containing $6, and ran away. Later she pointed out Brooks and Holloran as the men.

RUNAWAY GIRLS CAUGHT.

Are Sent Back to Children's Society After Two Weeks' Liberty.

Beatrice Matthewson of No. 217 Park Place, Brooklyn, and Josephine Cooper of No. 1822 Irving Place were returned to the Children's Society in Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn, today after an unauthorized absence of two weeks. The girls were held as witnesses against a number of men, one of whom had been convicted. They escaped by climbing down the fire escape.

When they were found in the Mardi Gras crowd at Coney Island last night they refused to tell where they got the money on which they had been living or where they had been.

If you want to taste the genuine pineapple flavor just as if you ate the ripe fruit in the fields, ask your grocer today for some Hawaiian Canned Pineapple.

It's picked at the exact moment when the warm semi-tropical sunshine has perfectly ripened it and packed the same day in its own rich juice.

Hawaiian Canned Pineapple is a perfectly delicious dessert, an appetizing breakfast dish and it can be used in innumerable other ways—for salads, pies, cakes, puddings, ices, etc. Sweeter and more flavory than the green, "fresh" kind and it's all ready to serve.

10c to 25c a can according to size of can and grade of quality—cheaper than it's ever been before. Just ask for a can of Hawaiian Pineapple.
